AFTER FIFTY YEARS.

The semi-centennial of the dedication of the Congregational church, Clinton, which has been looked forward to with so much interest, was celebrated September 30th and October 2.

The church had been newly papered and painted and presented a very pleasing appearance. The floral decorations were done by a committee of the Y. P. S. C. E.

The Sunday services were conducted by the pastor. In the morning there was a very large audience. Prayer was offered by Rev. G. E. Wilson, and the sermon was preached by Rev. E. W. Miller, of Eaton Rapids. The text was Matt. 18:33. The subject, "The Growth of the Kingdom of God." The preacher after stating that only a perfected society could correctly understand christianity, went on to show how the religion of Jesus Christ had gradually overcome the great evils that existed in the world, and predicted that it would continue its beneficent work until society was thoroughly purified. In the Sunday school, after the review of the quarter's lessons, short addresses were given by Revs. G. E. Wilson and E. W. Miller.

The church was crowded at the evening service, chairs having to be placed in the aisles. The introductory service was conducted by Revs. E. W. Miller, C. M. Stout and D. L. Ramsdell. The sermon was preached by Rev. G. E. Wilson, of Clyde, O. The text was Mark 9:2. After describing the transfiguration scene, the preacher showed how anxious the three disciples were to stay on the mount in holy communion. But the Master had work for them to do in the world. He said that when the christian was privileged now to hold communion with God he desired to stay in that condition, but there were duties to be performed, and the Master would have us take these up and do them thoroughly. He went on to show that the world needed earnest, consecrated workers today, and closed with an appeal to all christians to do what they could to make society better. Special music was rendered in a very efficient manner by the choir at both services.

October 2nd the services began with a meeting in the afternoon at 2 o'clock. There was a large attendance. After singing, Heb. 1 was read by Rev. G. E. Wilson, and prayer offered by Rev. E. W. Miller. The pastor made a few remarks, and then the history of the church was given by Mr. J. F. Weiss. He began by describing the organization of the church in 1848, and the erection of the house of worship in 1844. In a very interesting manner he traced the subsequent events, having something to say about each pastor, his peculiarities and his work. The history indicated that although the church had had its trials, yet there had been continual prosperity.

Mrs. H. R. Williams, wife of the late pastor, read a poem, composed by herself, entitled "The Church of Christ." It dealt with the lessons to be learned from the history of the past fifty years, and was much appreciated. This was followed by a solo by Miss Grace Davis, of Detroit, "The Beautiful City."

Reminiscences of the past were then given by Dea. G. Calhoun, Dwight Hause, Gelbert Halladay, Mrs. J. Clark and Mr. L. Conklin. They all had sad things to say of the pastors. The pastors present then told of some of their experiences, and spoke in high terms of the kindness of the people among whom they had labored. This proved one of the most interesting features of the celebration.

Prof. Estabrook had been expected to take part in the proceedings, and much regret was expressed at his death. He had sent just before his departure, a message to be read at the meeting. This message was performed by Rev. H. R. Williams, an old friend of the deceased, who spoke very lovingly of his noble and loving life.

Letters were read from Revs. A. S. Kedzie and J. Swandt, explaining the cause of their absence and conveying their greetings. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. Ramsdell, Sr.

An adjournment was then made to the parsonage where a reception and supper was held. This was in charge of a committee of the Y. P. S. C. E. and they did their work very creditably. The tables were decorated with flowers and presented an attractive appearance. About 150 sat down to supper, and a very pleasant time was spent in meeting old friends and recalling the memories of the past. The evening meeting was opened with singing, and prayer by Rev. D. L. Ramsdell. Letters were read from Revs. S. S. Hyde, and J. A. Barnes expressing their regret at not being able to be present, and conveying their good wishes. The first speaker was Rev. G. E. Wilson. He recited the prophecy of Ingersoll made some years ago, that christianity would soon be a thing of the past, and then showed how history had belied it. Christianity was more powerful and popular today than ever, and millions of hearts were loyal to Christ.

Rev. E. W. Miller said we might learn much from the history of the past. We had no right to reject a thing because it was old, or accept a thing because it was new. The beaten track along which so many had walked safely might be the best for us. The true principal was, "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good."

A solo, "Ascension of Jesus," was sung by Mrs. G. E. Wilson, and this was followed by the closing address, given by Rev. H. R. Williams. He said it was a comforting fact that while pastors and members came and went, the church remained to carry on its blessed work. It was impossible to estimate the good done during fifty years. It was in reality a succession of time and another half century would soon be gone. If they were faithful, more could be accomplished than ever before. He urged the church to be loyal to the pastor, and to pray for him continually.

With the singing of "God be with you till we meet again," this memorable occasion was brought to a close.

Frank Hughes, whose tragic death occurred at Adrian Sunday morning, and which seems shrouded in mystery, was the son of John Hughes of this place. He was found early Sunday morning by his brother Raynor, who had stayed at a neighbor's over night. He was lying on the bed, his dog was lying by him, a loaded revolver, a hammer and a bottle of chloroform, nearly full, were found near him. The first supposition was that he had committed suicide and many sensational reports were circulated, but the friends are satisfied that there had been foul play and will have the affair thoroughly ventilated. Frank Hughes was 20 years of age and a baker by trade. He was married at Adrian a year and a half ago to Bessie Storey, daughter of Charles Storey. The body was brought here for interment, the funeral being held at the Baptist church Wednesday afternoon. Rev. Mr. Whitney of the Baptist church, Adrian, his pastor, officiating.

The clergy of the Southern convocation of Michigan met in St. Peter's church last Thursday for their regular quarterly work. A celebration of communion was held in the morning at 10 o'clock, at which there were 30 communicants. In the afternoon the principal work was discussion upon and arrangements for missionary work by the clergy, in the way of giving services to the many scattered church people within the conventional limits, who are deprived of the benefits of the church by living miles away from organized congregations. At evening the addresses were given by the Rev. B. B. Beleon of Jackson and the Rev. H. Tatlock of Ann Arbor. The same day a quarterly meeting of delegates of the junior anxiliary within the convention, was held in the reception room of the armory. Delegates were present from Detroit, Grass Lake, Jackson, Clinton and Tecumseh. A very successful work was accomplished, and the President, Mrs. Richard McCauley, of Detroit, went away very well pleased with the interest taken and also the work of the young ladies of St. Peter's branch. The Junior anxiliary is a society of young ladies in the church, formed for the special purpose of creating interest in mission work. Obtaining money is not the first object of the organization, but nevertheless a large sum is contributed yearly to the work.

A World's Tribute.

America Leads the Nations in the March of Progress.

Among the wonders of the World's Columbian Fair the grandest was the exhibit of American products. The Exhibition was, in this respect, an object lesson of the grandeur and glory of the Republic. Among the exhibits from the United States no article of its class stood so high as

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder.

The Chief Chemist of the Agricultural Department at Washington, backed by an intelligent jury at the Exposition, found it strongest in leavening power, peerless in its purity and beyond comparison in uniform excellence.

Received Highest Award At the World's Fair.

The award is a matter of official record.

Nothing could settle so decisively the immeasureable superiority of Dr. Price's over all other powders as the great honor bestowed at Chicago.

The Last Game of Base Ball.

The Base Ball season practically closed last Thursday, Oct. 4th, when the Britton's crossed bats with the High School team. The weather was very disagreeable. It was damp and very chilly and both spectators and players found it very difficult to keep comfortable. At the east end of the grand stand a fire was kept going all through the game. With the atmosphere as frigid as it was the attendance was very light and confined almost exclusively to small boys and base ball cranks. A very few ladies were brave enough to come out. While fine ball playing was out of the question and many errors were made, particularly by the Britton team, they having 16 charged up to them still there was some almost phenominal plays made by both teams. Although our boys won the game by a score of 9 to 8, so declared by Umpire McClure, they were not entitled to any credit really, for they did not have an earned run and only made 5 hits off of Brunskill (who pitched an elegant game,) and these were made in as many innings—one hit each in the 2nd, 4th 5th, 7th and 9th. Had Brunskill had any support our boys would not have been in at and up to the 9th inning it looked as if the Brittons would win the game in spite of their many errors. Harris did not pitch as well as usual for ten hits were made by the Britton's, among them being 2 base hits by Lee and Lowe and 3 base hits by Larrabee. At times the game was interesting and exciting. Dickson and Lowe both caught well.

A Piano at a Nominal Price.

Chicago's largest music house, Lyon & Healy, has moved into a magnificent new building. They have a number of slightly used and second-hand pianos returned from World's Fair renting, etc., etc., which they have determined to sacrifice rather than to try to make room for. These instruments comprise Square pianos at $40, $65, $100 and $125. Upright pianos at $125, $140, $150, $165, $180, $200, $225, $240 and upward. Grand pianos at $200, $250, $300 and upwards. Nearly all originally sold for from two to four times their present price. Almost all prominent makes (in squares and uprights) are represented, including among numerous others Chickering, Knabe, Steinway, Weber, Decker, Steck, Fisher, etc. This is an opportunity that will not occur again, as Lyon & Healy have not moved for twenty years. Immediate attention is therefore necessary. A good plan will be to order a piano, leaving the selections to Lyon & Healy. However they will send a list and full particulars on application. Any piano not proving satisfactory may be returned at their expense. Address at their new salesrooms, corner Wabash Avenue and Adams street, Chicago. Distance is no obstacle in taking advantage of this remarkable chance to obtain a piano, for in proportion to the saving to be made the freight charges are insignificant. If you do not already know them by reputation any banker will assure of Lyon & Healy's entire responsibility and record of over a third of a century for honorable dealing. Write to-day so as to avoid disappointment.

The Democrats of New York seem to be getting together and the indications now point to a red hot campaign and a very uncertain one.

Levi Parsons Morton has never held an office for which he did not pay with an enormous contribution to the campaign fund—that is, to the Bosses and the Boys.

The New York World expresses the truth in a nut shell, when it says: David B. Hill has his faults, as all of us know, but the man who beats him in New York State has got to hustle.

Labor is the foundation stone upon which the superstructure of civilization is built. Let this foundation be injured or crushed and the entire beautiful structure falls into ruin.

No matter what is said in Morton's favor it cannot be denied that he represents Bunghole politics, and no matter what is said against Hill no one can say he owes his prominence to a barrel.

Plutocracy is the rule of wealth, as Democracy is the rule of the people. A plutocrat is a man who seeks power or distinction through the use of money, either in subsidizing party machines or in corrupting the legislatures or the suffrage of the people.

The Louisville Courier-Journal seems to be in favor of free coinage of silver, but it is evenly balanced between the silver and the newspaper issues of the day, as compared to its contemporaries. The Courier-Journal has the eloquent of columns, the news columns give evidence of a strong gold policy.

The New York Voice, as the organ of the Prohibitionists, recalls the fact that some of the barrel for the sake of Platt's long-staved nomination. Mr. Morton came into it as profits on the sale of rum at the Shoreham. That is perfectly true, but the Voice fails to recall the still more damaging fact that Mr. Morton persistently boarded in ordinary New England rum, the ingredients of which cost 20 cents a drink.

Mr. William L. Wilson never appeared to greater advantage in his career as American and as a Democrat than in his speech at the dinner to him on the 29th on the 29th inst. in London. As the guest of the occasion he was modest and dignified, but he did not forget his country. We warned the gentlemen who were his hosts that his call to the tariff reform were intended and calculated to enable the United States to wrest from Great Britain her commercial and maritime supremacy.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, Oct. 5, 1894.

That "politics makes strange bedfellows" is an adage that has grown trite, but it did not seem possible a little while ago that politics could ever make bedfellows of Senator Hill and President Cleveland. Yet a movement is now under way to do that very thing, and many politicians believe that it is going to succeed. The idea, according to your correspondent's information, is that Mr. Cleveland is to use the influence of his administration to help elect Senator Hill governor of New York and that in the event of his election he is to announce that he prefers remaining in the Senate and resign the governorship, allowing Congressman Dan Lockwood, the candidate for lieutenant governor, who is a strong friend of Mr. Cleveland's to become governor. Secretary Lamont is now in New York working on this scheme, which will, if successful, call off all the democratic opposition to Hill.

The grand shake up in the Treasury department is over. The bureaux which the Dockery committee recommended should be abolished are no more. Advantage was taken of the reorganization to make about 500 changes in the classification of the clerks in the Treasury, mostly in favor of the clerks who belong to the dominant party. There is a wide difference of opinion as to the reorganization. Some contending that it will be beneficial to the government as well as those who do business with the government, while many predict that the removal of checks and safeguards upon the expenditure of public money is a hazardous experiment to make, one that is likely to encourage recklessness. Time will tell which is right.

The wording of the indictments found this week by the Washington grand jury against Havemeyer and Searles, investigating committee sounds very much in places like a political campaign document, although there is no good reason for believing that the lawyers who drew them had any such intention. The indictments open by giving the terms of the 1st section of the McKinley tariff law and say that Havemeyer, Searles and possessors of [illegible] a portion of said act were of great benefit and advantage to the interests of a certain corporation called the American Sugar Refining Co. the [illegible]

MR. WILSON.

"A chilly town! A chilly town!" murmured H. Pemberton Wilson as he limped around to the sunny side of warehouse F and slowly let himself down to a recumbent position on the hot, tarry boards.

"A chilly town. That's what. Even in the summer time," said H. Pemberton Wilson as he threw a stray nail into the muddy slip and lazily watched the rings enlarge and lose themselves in faintest ripples. "You take any train, and it lands you here, and the only comfort of being here is that there's so many trains out. I s'pose my stomach thinks I'm tryin to go without anything for a week just on a bet. The country lanes must be sighin for me. I wonder if turnips are getting large enough?"

To designate H. Pemberton Wilson as a hobo would simply corrobbrate his opinion of himself.

He has carved "Hobo Wilson" on many a section shanty and milepost between Scranton, Pa., and Council Bluffs, Ia., and there were friends who knew him as Rooster.

On one Indiana trip he had earned the title of Come Again Wilson because he had a persistent way of getting on a train after once being put off.

Like many another of his class, he was not devoid of sentiment or philosophy. He carried in his breast pocket a speckled volume of Burns' poems. He had forgotten to return it to a public library in southern Illinois. The book opened of itself at the lines, "A man's a man for a' that." Hobo Wilson read the poem as he lay with his back against the warm boards of warehouse F, and then he put the book back into the pocket of his coat, which he had thrown down beside him.

At the bend in the river a coal vessel was being unloaded. The click of the machinery and the noisy dumping of the big buckets at the regular intervals became rather soothing when the rhythm was understood. Hobo Wilson tapped with his thumb, keeping time, and looked through the rigging of a lumber schooner in the second slip beyond at the coughing smokestack which reached up from a small planing mill. The mill was buzzing in changeable tones, like a nest of disordant bumblebees.

The smoke rolling from the stack drifted through the rigging, where the yards and netted lines seemed to cut into irregular shapes. Hobo Wilson watched drowsily until to his blurred vision there were many fantastic forms floating in the foggy maze. And he was not greatly surprised when one of these forms took on the outline of a dwarfish human being and floated slowly toward him. It paused for a moment above a hawser timber and shook itself, a shower of soot falling from it. Then it settled into a comfortable sitting attitude and looked at him.

"Well, Rooster, how's everything?"

The voice was rather small and shrill. Hobo Wilson could not answer at once. He was marveling at the appearance of his strange visitor. The little man was hardly three feet high. Under the slouch hat was a good natured and wrinkled face, decorated on the chin with a tuft of beard, which might have been gray at one time, but which was now blackened and dusty, the same as his face and clothes. The latter were of rough quality—a hickory shirt, a shoddy pair of trousers fringed at the bottoms and held up by one suspender, and a pair of worn shoes much too large and laced with hemp twine.

"Are you down on your luck, Rooster?" asked the little man.

"I'm livin on the air," said Hobo, "but where did you come from?"

"I just dropped in with the smoke. Don't know me, eh?"

"That's what I don't."

"Listen, Hobo Wilson. Do you remember last Saturday morning when you were at Hammond and divided your handout with a brother who alighted from a box car a day out from Louisville and very hungry?"

"I do. 'A man's a man for a' that.'"

"True enough, Rooster. That was a good deed. More than once I've seen you give a comrade a good place on the truck."

"Where was you?"

"I dare say you didn't look up into the rolling cloud of smoke to see the good fairy of the hoboes."

"Fairy!"

"Sure. You didn't expect the guardian fairy of the hoboes to tear around the country in all kinds of weather with a little white robe and some ostrich feather wings?"

"I s'pose not."

"Hobo Wilson, I've watched you. I never saw you do a yard any dirt. The good things of this world must not all be given to brakemen and tramps and people who work. Are you hungry?"

"Sure!"

"Then feel in the pockets of that coat beside you and believe me when I tell you that every man must live before he does."

"Suffering hoboes' beans!" gasped Rooster as he drew in one pocket after another their contents followed back into it. He had a tramp's knife, a fork, a spoon, some nails, twine, a jackknife, a pair of worn shoes much too large and laced with hemp twine.

"So it's drifting in this way, now, my lad—never again in a boiler. Dirty, you've been."

But when he looked up again the old gallant fairy had disappeared, and the smoke which pushed through the rigging and trailed away was blacker than ever.

He put all the money in his pockets, first throwing away the balls of twine, the old pack knife and the needle and the old watch about a foot cork.

On the street car he could find no bill less than $5, and the conductor grumbled about the change.

"Give me the change, confound you," said Mr. Wilson, "or else I'll have that number off your cap."

Thereupon the conductor quieted down and gave him his change. Mr. Wilson tossed 10 cents to a baby on a seat in front of him and then settled back to enjoy his ride. He had never known of a more beautiful day. He observed with much satisfaction that every one else seemed as happy as he. The women in the doorways were smiling, and children romped along the sidewalks. He counted the money from one pocket and found that it amounted to $65, or 1,300 glasses of beer. The other passengers watched him curiously.

He alighted at Polk street and walked over to Dinny's place. The old crowd was there.

"Come up, you fellows," said Mr. Wilson, "and drink all you can hold. I mean it," he added as they did not seem willing to stand up and take chances. "Here's the stuff."

He dribbled out on the bar the silver which the conductor had given him.

There was a rush, and Dinny began setting out rows of schooners.

"Drink up that money!" shouted Mr. Wilson, "and say, Dinny, give me a good cigar."

While the boys were taking away the "scuttles" as fast as they could be passed up, Mr. Wilson went out to purchase a wardrobe. He knew the place to go, because he had stood before it many a time looking at the brilliant neckties and white collars. The proprietor met him gruffly, but melted into smiles when he saw the roll of money.

"Fix me up from the skin out," said Mr. Wilson. "Give me the best stuff you've got and hand it out quick. Have you got a back room?"

Certainly he had a back room. Mr. Wilson was shown to that apartment and was treated to every courtesy. One by one the necessary articles were pushed into the room. At the end of ten minutes he was a new man. His neck felt the dignified embrace of a collar for the first time in years. The stiff shirt had straightened him up. He put his money into his new clothes and strolled out. The big officer who had once kicked him moved respectfully aside to allow him to pass.

"I'll hire some one to lick that fellow," said Mr. Wilson as he directed his steps toward a fancy barroom.

He drank cocktail after cocktail, and the only effect was to increase his general cheerfulness and make every one around him more attentive to his wishes.

"Where's the best restaurant in town?" he asked, leaning over the bar and familiarly addressing the man in the white garments.

"It's two blocks down."

"I'll show you where it is," said a man who wore clothes almost as good as those of Mr. Wilson; "come with me."

Mr. Wilson locked arms with the gentleman, who introduced himself as president of a bank and said he was proud to be allowed to walk along the street with Mr. Wilson. They met several distinguished citizens whose names Mr. Wilson had read in scraps of newspaper around the lodging house.

They met the mayor, the postmaster, Mr. Armour, Mr. Field, Mr. Pullman and others. Every time Mr. Wilson was introduced the whole crowd went and had a drink. Mr. Wilson showed them how much money he had, and they slapped him on the back and said he was a good fellow.

At last Mr. Wilson and the banker sat down to dine. They had lobster and pie and champagne and all kinds of drinks, and Mr. Wilson gave the waiter a dollar to fan him while he was eating.

Mr. Wilson ate two lobsters, for they were the first he had tasted in ten years, and every one in the house watched him when he pulled out such a lot of money and demanded to know how much he owed the place.

After that he and the banker went riding in an open carriage, and all the people along the street stopped to see them go by. They halted in front of a saloon and had the bartender bring three bottles of champagne out to the carriage—one for Mr. Wilson, one for the banker and one for the driver.

While they were drinking the champagne out of the bottles a crowd gathered around. Mr. Wilson ordered a policeman to disperse the crowd, and he did so promptly.

"Now, what shall we do next?" asked the banker, putting his arm around Mr. Wilson's neck.

"Oh, take a little ride and then have something more to drink. Drive up there!" and he stood up in the seat and kicked the driver in the back.

So they drove up one street and down another, while the bands played and women at the windows waved handkerchiefs. Mr. Wilson leaned back in the cushions, thoroughly happy and counting his money, when he felt a sudden pain in his right foot.

The pain became more sharp.

He raised himself to his elbow.

He was getting the "hot foot." A heavy policeman was pounding the sole of his shoe. The club was lifted again, but Hobo Wilson drew back his leg.

"Go wan, now! Get a move!" said the policeman, giving him a kick with the broad of his foot.

"Well, I'm goin," whined Hobo Wilson, whose head was all in a whirl as he came to his feet. He picked up his coat and limped around the corner of warehouse I, and at each step the cruel truth became clearer to him.

"Thank goodness for one thing," said he, "I can still taste the lobster."

There was one remarkable circumstance in connection with this adventure, and it is a puzzle to Pemberton Wilson, alias Hobo Wilson, alias Come Again Wilson, alias Rooster. He remembered throwing away the pocketbook, thread and needle and string when he found the money.

Sure enough, when he searched his coat afterward, he found that of his personal property only the copy of Burns remained.—Chicago Record.

HOMES IN ARKANSAS.

The location of Arkansas is such as to exempt it from extremes of heat and cold. Its elevations and richness of soils adapt it to the production of a greater variety of crops, fruits and general products used for the sustenance and comfort of man than any other State in the Union. While its salubrious climate, joined with the other combinations mentioned, give to its fruit and food products a peculiarly delightful flavor that can be found nowhere else. It justly boasts of more health-giving springs and better well-water than any other State. Lands are cheap and productive, markets accessible; health good; no blizzards; no drouth; never a failure of crops; good schools, churches and society, and what is also important, a hearty welcome for all. WHEELMEN TO THE FRONT.

The Bicycle Tournament Held at Tecumseh Last Saturday a Grand Success.

The Tecumseh Bicycle Association are to be congratulated for the grand success of the tournament, Saturday last. There was no error in judgment in selecting the officers, committees and officials of the races. They proved to be the right men in every instance and to their untiring and ceaseless efforts are we indebted for the most successful tournament of the kind ever held in the state. The track was in perfect condition—could not have been better, was the verdict of all those who participated in the races; many of whom had frequently been in contests of like character in this and other states, and they pronounced it the most complete in arrangement and the most courteously and impartially conducted meet they had ever attended. Several noted bicyclists who had entered were not present, the rains of Thursday and Friday leading them to believe that the track would be exceedingly heavy and that the races would not come off, consequently did not put in an appearance. For this same reason, no doubt, a large number of people remained at home who would have been present had the weather been pleasant Friday, and indeed it was a great surprise to all to find the grounds in such fine shape. Aside from its being chilly, the day was perfect. It is only necessary to state that the seventeen heats were made in two hours and ten minutes, to show how perfectly system ruled everything must have been. Owing to the large number of entries, several of the races were divided into heats; the three first in each heat to go the final one.

First event was the one-mile novice, open. First heat was won by Elmer Beneway, Tecumseh; time, 2:51. Scott of Morenci, 2d, 2:52 1-4, and Church, of Tecumseh, 3d, 2:55. The second heat was won by Stoffet, of Ann Arbor; time, 2:50; Fisher, of Plissfield, 2d, 3:01 1-2; Hiser, of Britton, 3d. In this heat Bert Day of Tecumseh and Leon Clark of Clinton collided on the back stretch. Aside from several bruises and broken wheels no serious damage was done. They were, on this account, permitted to go in the final heat, which resulted as follows: Stoffet 1st; time, 2:44 1-2; Scott 2d, 2:49 4-5; Day 3d, 2:50. The prizes were: 1st, gold watch and case, $15; 2d, pearl handled revolver, $10; 3d, box of cigars, $3.50.

The next was the one mile open. 1st prize, diamond ring, $40; 2d, pearl stud, $25; 3d, box of cigars, $5.50. Herman of Toledo won the first heat; time, 2:30 3-5; Stoffet 2d, 3:05 3-5; Wolcott of Gibsonburg, Ohio, 3d, 3:06. In this heat, when entering the stretch, Guy Davidson took a "header," which fortunately resulted in only a general shaking up, but he did not continue in the race. In the second heat Bernhart of Toledo was 1st; time, 2:37; Cull of Norwalk, Ohio, 2d, 2:37 2-5; Hoachstetter 3d, 2:38 1-2. The final heat was won by Bernhart in 2:37 1-5; Cull, 2d, 2:38 2-5; Herman 3d, 2:39.

Then came the ladies' one-mile open. First prize, solid gold watch and case, $50; 2d, emerald ring, $15; 3d, silk umbrella, $5. Miss Rena Stoffet of Ann Arbor demonstrated that she was a strong rider, and won easily in 1:21 1-5; Miss Millenbarn of Detroit 2d, 1:38 4-5; Miss Winter of Clyde, Ohio, 3d, 1:45.

Next came the one-half mile county championship, which Davidson won in 1:13, defeating Matthes and Ackley of Adrian. The prize was a solid gold diamond-mounted medal, which the people generally seemed pleased to have remain here.

The one-half mile open was the next on the programe. First prize, diamond ring, $40; 2d, split second timer, $10; 3d, box of cigars, $3.50. Wolcott of Gibsonburg, Ohio, won the first heat; time, 1:18 3-5; Herman 2d, 1:18 4-5; Stoffet 3d, 1:21 1-4. The second heat was won by Bernhart; time, 1:14 2-5; Hoachstetter 2d, 1:19 1-5; Cull 3d, 1:24 1-4. In the final heat both Wolcott and Herman took a tumble as they were entering the stretch. For a time there was intense excitement, people fearing they must be seriously injured, as they were going at terrific speed. It was thought that Wolcott was badly hurt, but he soon rallied, though unable to race any more. Herman was badly bruised and cut but showed great pluck and appeared in the next race as though nothing had happened. Bernhart won the final heat and race; time, 1:13; Cull 2d, 1:15; Hoachstetter 3d, 1:22 1-4.

The first heat of the race for boys under 17 was won by Leon Rosarians of Tecumseh, time, 1:11 3-5; Leon Temple, Tecumseh, 3d, 1:26 3-5; James Dibble, Holloway, 3d, 1:31 1-2. The second heat was won by Herman in 1:16 3-5; Bradford of Adrian 2d, 1:21 1-5; Leon Clark of Clinton 3d, 1:24 1-4. The final heat was won by Herman in 1:12 4-5; Bradford 2d, 1:20 1-5; Rosacrans 3d, 1:28. The prizes were: First, bicyle suit, $15; 2d, sweater, $5; 3d, cyclometer.

Then came the final race, with four prizes, two miles open. In each heat but two contestants appeared. Bernhart won the first heat in 5:37 1-2; Matthes 2d, 5:37 4-5. Hoachstetter won the second heat in 5:33; Cull 2d, 5:33 1-5. Bernhart won the final heat in 5:12 1-2, and the diamond ring worth $50. Hoachstetter 2d, 5:25 2-5, and diamond stud, $25; Cull 3d, 5:28 1-2, and took the bicycle lantern. Matthes finished 4th, capturing the box of cigars.

After so successful a meeting the management may feel assured that at their next tournament there will be a large number of entries by the best wheelmen and an immense crowd of spectators. This meet was also a success financially.

DEMOCRATIC RALLY.

Sutton's Opera House was well filled Monday evening with an intelligent, thinking audience, composed of representative men and women of this vicinity to hear the opening speech of the campaign from a democratic standpoint. The speaker of the evening, Hon. Thos. E. Barkworth of Jackson, nominee for Congress on the Democratic ticket in this the second district, has a very pleasing manner, is a rapid talker, a clear, concise and logical reasoner, and held his audience from first to last as if by magic. He is among the best speakers of the State and made an enviable reputation. While a member of the State Legislature, being the recognized leader of the Democratic side of the house. Mr. Barkworth's speech was entirely free from satire or ridicule when speaking of other parties. He had no stale jokes or stories to tell, no slurs for or abuse of those differing in sentiment from himself. He simply confined himself to the questions before the people of today.

After several pieces nicely rendered by the band, the meeting was called to order by Alva Spayde, who in a very neat manner introduced the speaker. Mr. Barkworth after paying a glorious tribute to America, the freedom of its institutions as compared with other countries, its boundless resources and opportunities, went on to say that with the universal freedom and great individual responsibility. We must think, act and vote according to the dictates of our unbiased reason, and that we should accord to others the same honesty of thought and purpose that we claim for ourselves, and not stamp them as enemies of our government, or treasonable sentiment simply because they saw things differently. In the discussion before us he desired to state nothing but truths and facts that could be substantiated, did not want to deal in myths or cunningly devised fables designed to deceive, but wished to treat the questions at issue fairly, honestly, candidly, and declared it the duty of the voters to investigate carefully and thoughtfully for themselves, unbiased and impartially the positions of the different parties on the questions now before the people and then vote according to their best convictions. He then went on to say that unlike many of his opponents, he considered the coming campaign one of the most important of any preceding it, for matters of vital importance confronted us, such as the tariff, the currency and pensions. He then spoke of the tariff bill just passed. Though not all that we hoped for, yet it was a step in the right direction and already we were beginning to experience and see some of its beneficent influences, notwithstanding the combined efforts of Wall street together with the trusts, monopolies and money interests to thwart its efficiency. He deprecated the state of affairs when a few thousand men could say to our Government you shall legislate as we direct or will overrule you all. He did not believe in legislation for the classes but for the whole people. He did not believe with his Republican friends that previous to 1893 all was prosperous, and that the Democratic party was responsible for the late depression and business stagnation, but it was the result of unwise legislation, the natural result of a high protective tariff, and by the trusts, monopolies and combines. He then quoted from a speech of Ingalls, one of the recognized leaders of the Republican party, made in the Senate in 1891, wherein he said the tendency of the times was radically wrong. Already mutterings of discontent were heard coming from the laboring classes, and the farmers and that the rapid growth of trusts, combines and millionaires, long centuries that something must be done speedily or disaster would follow. He said that the farmers and laboring classes were not afraid that the Democratic party would bring disaster upon the country, for they had by their vote in '92 expressed their confidence in their judgment and ability to legislate for the whole people, but the cry came from the money centers of the east, who saw that they could no longer dictate to the Senate how they should legislate; said farther, if the Republican party during its long term of legislation, had brought peace and universal prosperity to the people they would not have been defeated in '92; had the people been satisfied with the workings of the tariff they would have been continued in power, but the facts were this depression and business stagnation was inevitable under the existing laws and legislation, and cited his hearers to the city of Pullman and the mining regions of the upper peninsular, where after only a few weeks of being out of employment the cry of distress was heard from the masses. Said of course the year previous to the World's Fair there was a temporary revival of trade, but that it was only temporary. During all the changes and amid the hard times the capitalist still drew his dividends. Said that corporations and men of great wealth were not generally actuated by philanthropic motives, as was clearly demonstrated in the Pullman investigation, from which he frequently quoted. He stated that previous to the change in the administration there was discontent and strikes, notably the Homestead strike, and showed that though many industries asked protection from the government against those of foreign countries, they took the foreign laborers in to the exclusion of our home-born laborers; said farther, that the friends of high protection seemed to forget the golden rule and other texts, taught our children in the Sunday school, seemed to have no compassion for the sufferings of others, so long as they were protected. Showed that a general exchange of commodities was a benefit to all, and that the price of wool had advanced in price as soon as the passage of the Wilson bill as amended by the Senate, was an assured fact, that our woolen and other industries were in a more prosperous condition.

He then spoke on the subject of currency, said he was in favor of free silver and defined his position on this and the pension question at some length.

He thought there ought to be some radical changes in the Patent office laws, and expressed his views very clearly and forcibly. In conclusion he spoke of the sugar question, thought what tax there was on sugar would be paid willingly by the people, for they knew that it was a source of revenue to the government and consequently caused a corresponding reduction in taxes. While there was not that boisterous enthusiasm often seen in a heated campaign, the audience frequently showed their approbation of the sentiments uttered by suitable applause. The audience paid the speaker the highest of compliments by paying the closest of attention from first to last. The people, irrespective of party would be pleased to hear Mr. Barkworth again.

TEMPERANCE TOPICS.

(Edited by the Tecumseh W. C. T. U.)

MARRYING A MAN TO REFORM HIM.

Girls! Read Carefully, Ponder Thoughtfully.

A good man may be made better by association with a good woman; a man with repressed evil tendencies may have them held more firmly in check by his wife's restraining influence; but a woman who undertakes to "make over" a man who has given away to the wicked passions of his being until they are beyond his control will not make him a reputable member of society, and a bright and shining light to the community in which he dwells, by marrying. He does not go into the new life as a sort of Keeley cure—a reformatory institution. A woman's strongest and weakest point is her power of idealizing every cold fact with which she comes in contact. She loves a handsome roue. He tells her that if she will but take him in training, she can make a new man of him; that her fair hand can wipe all the dark spots from his past life, smooth the rough places, and elevate the depressions in his character until it will once more be goodly to contemplate. And over the stereopticon view of the man his fiancee throws the rose-colored light of her idealistic lantern, and believes all he says. She would think it cruel practicality and injustice were some unprejudiced observer to suggest that if he cannot change his life when the possibilities of winning her are at stake he will hardly do so when the prize is his own.

My heart aches when I think of the women who began the work of reformation with hope, and laid it down with despair at the end of a life that made them "turn weary arms to death" with a sigh of welcome. On the table before me stands the portrait of one such woman. When she was a merry-hearted girl she fell in love with a handsome, brilliant young fellow, whose only failing was a fondness for liquor. He loved her deeply—better than anything else in the world—except drink. Nevertheless, he promised to overcome even this passion for her sake. In vain did her family plead and protest. Her only answer was:

"Harry cannot keep straight without some one to help him. I must marry him now. He needs me."

Two years after her marriage she died of a broken heart, whispering at the last to a dear friend that she "was not sorry to go, but would be thankful life was over if she were only sure that her year old baby would not be left to Harry's care."

Yet he was, in most respects, tender and considerate. The only trouble was that his devotion to her remained at the point at which it stood when he became her husband. The habit of intemperance grew.

Suppose that, added to this great fault, had been others still more vicious. Had his been a course, brutal nature, would not the idea of reformation have been still more hopeless?

A woman, in tying herself for life to an unprincipled man, forgets that he has lost, to a great extent, his better nature, and is now hardly responsible for his actions. The spirit may, indeed, be willing, but the flesh is lamentably weak. The appetites that have been long indulged do not relinquish their claims after only a few months' restraint, and when the girl for whose sake they have been repressed is won, they will return to the swept and garnished room, and the last end of their victim will be worse than the first.

I often wonder what a good, pure woman promises herself when she proposes to twine her clean life with one that is scarred, seamed, and blackened. Evade the truth as she may, there are but two courses for her to pursue: She must either live a lonely life apart from her husband, silently showing disapproval of his habits; or she must, to preserve peace and the semblance of happiness, bring herself down to his level, and become even less delicate and more degraded than he. In the one case her husband will hate her, while in the other she will lose his respect and will despise herself.

There is another aspect of the case to be considered. The American girl of to-day seldom takes the possibility of offspring into her matrimonial plans. They are not only a possibility, but a probability, and it behooves every woman to cast aside false modesty, and with a pure heart and honest soul seriously consider if she is not doing irreparable wrong to unborn children in giving them an unprincipled father. Is she willing to see her children's blood tainted by his vices, their lives wrecked by evil temptations inherited from him? She must, indeed, be a reckless woman and a soulless one who, with this thought uppermost, can still say, "I will marry this man, let the consequences be what they may."—Marion Harland.

Mothers, it is your business to know where your boys are in the evening, what company they keep and what they are doing. If they know that they are welcome at home, from little boyhood to manhood, it will save them from sin, crime and disgrace, and you from heart ache and heart break.

The following clipped from the Jackson Patriot of October 5th, will be interesting news to Mr. Ham's many Tecumseh friends. "As has already been announced in the Patriot, the firm of Chas. A. Ham & Co. has been dissolved, Chas. A. Ham becoming sole proprietor. The 'closing out' sale came to an end with the change of firm, and the window sign was removed. Mr. Ham said to the Patriot yesterday, that at no time had he been willing to leave Jackson, its pleasant people and the fine trade the old firm had built up in the short space of time they had been in business. As soon as he saw an opportunity to secure entire control of the business he did so. He then became free to act in the matter of 'closing out,' and the best recommendation for Mr. Ham's sincerity of purpose throughout is the announcement that he will remain in the city. He has already commenced restocking the store and extends to the ladies of Jackson a cordial welcome."

Last Friday, between the hours of 6 and 8 p m. about $15 was taken from the Globe Mill. To his surprise it was no where to be found. After looking around and finding no damage done to anything, concluded whoever took it had a key. Having his suspicions as to who it might be, quiet investigations were instituted, and in a short time they had the culprits who made a full confession not only to this, but also to being the ones who were guilty of a like offense on a former occassion. The boys, Fred Burrel and Oscar Hall, were taken to Adrian, and now are awaiting their trial.

LIVES CRUSHED OUT.

Terrible Disaster at a Big Fire in Detroit.

Walls of the Burning Building Collapse, Burying Fifteen Men, Six of Whom Are Killed—Nine Others Badly Hurt.

DIED WHILE ON DUTY.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 8.—Six dead and nine injured is the record of the fire which destroyed the furniture store of Keenan & Jahn at 7:30 a. m. Friday. The dead are:

Lieut. Michael H. Donoghue, chemical No. 1. Richard Daly, pipeman No. 9. John Pagel, pipeman No. 9. Frederick A. Bussey, spectator, died at Grace hospital; Mike Ball, pipeman No. 9. Julius Cummings, of No. 2.

The injured are:

Mike Gray, probably fatally; Lieut. O'Rourke, of engine No. 8. Pipeman P. Stock, No. 8. Pipeman C. Crohin, No. 8. John B. Nowell, truck No. 2, injured about the head. Thomas Garry, substitute, badly bruised. Leslie McNamara, No. 2. Henry Kimberly, No. 2. Henry Herig, leg broken.

Employes Get Out with Difficulty.

The fire was discovered in the shipping room in the basement at the back of the store. An alarm was promptly turned in, but by the time the engines arrived the fire had gained considerable headway, having run up the elevator shaft, and the entire upper floor was a mass of flame and smoke when the first stream was thrown. There were sixty employes in the building and most of them had great difficulty in escaping. The building, an old five-story structure, was soon gutted and the stock ruined. At 9 o'clock the front wall of the building tumbled into Woodward avenue. It came in the shape of a collapse, and the mass of debris did not spread beyond the curb. The firemen working in front of the building were warned and retreated as rapidly as possible. Some got out from under, but a dozen or more were unable to do so on account of the piles of brick, glass and burnt timbers.

Stampeded by Electric Wires.

A yell of horror went up from the throats of the thousands who were in the street, and then there was a crash like an earthquake. The air was filled with dust and sheets of flame and smoke. Some of the falling wall broke the heavy electric wires and the trolley wire. A flash of sputtering electric fluid lighted up the scene, and people crowded and surged to get into the stores and down the side streets to escape being shocked. A number of men, women and children were trampled under the feet of the frightened spectators, but none was seriously hurt.

Taking Out Victims.

Rescuers were immediately at work. The first man taken out from under the debris was Lieut Michael H. Donoghue, of chemical No. 1. He was dead. The next body found was that of Richard Daly, pipeman of engine No. 9. It was lying under two iron columns, and the head and back were frightfully crushed. The next body to be taken out was Pipeman John Pagel, of No. 9. He was crushed by the crumbling walls. Frederick A. Bussey, a spectator, was taken to Grace hospital, where he died. Mike Gray was also taken to Grace hospital. The last named was found to be so badly injured about the head that he may die. Mike Boyle, pipeman of No. 2, and Julius Cummings, of company No. 2, are still in the ruins and are certainly dead.

The aggregate loss on building and stock is estimated at $80,000; fully insured.

Cut Her Throat with a Razor.

MONROE, Oct. 8.—Kate Dusseau, 22-year-old daughter of County Superintendent of the Poor Peter Dusseau, of La Salle, made a desperate, and what must prove a successful, attempt at suicide Sunday morning. She snatched a razor from her brother, who was shaving, and cut a gash in her throat 6 inches long, completely severing the windpipe, and barely missing the jugular vein. The young lady began showing symptoms of insanity several months ago, after a severe illness, and only returned from an asylum Saturday evening. She had several times threatened to take her life.

Now Pronounced Sane and Will Be Tried for the Crime.

LANSING, Oct. 8.—Interest in a most atrocious murder committed near this city about fifteen months ago is again aroused by the trial of Mrs. Minnie Herre, which is to take place here this week. The woman poisoned her only son, a lad of 12 years, and at the same time killed several pigs and other farm animals. At night she stole the body of the boy out of a window and threw it into a deep well, nearly frightening the watchers to death by breaking the windows in the house and extinguishing the lights at dead of night. She made a full confession of the crime, and was adjudged insane and confined in an asylum. The institute physician now pronounces her sane, and her trial will take place this week.

OR. RANSOM NOT DEAD.

New Mystery Added to the Case by a Michigan Lawyer.

SOUTH HAVEN, Oct. 5.—The mystery surrounding the sudden disappearance in Chicago of Dr. W. C. Ransom, the head of the "Around the World" company formed here, has been in a measure cleared up. E. P. Townsend, attorney for Ransom, was on the stand in a garnishee suit, and without prelude declared Dr. Ransom was alive and that the witness had known of his whereabouts and been in communication with him ever since his dropping out of sight last summer while in Chicago on business. Mr. Townsend did not reveal Ransom's location or tell an intensely astonished public the causes that led to his dropping out of sight, and later refused to give any further information. Ransom had property interests here and owned a share in the schooner Wrenn, which was to take the company around the world. As he had $500 in cash in his pocket it was naturally believed he had been murdered. The cause for his act is still a mystery. Townsend refuses to express an opinion regarding Ransom's return, saying when the doctor desired to take the public into his confidence the public would be notified.

PRISON CONTRACT LABOR.

A Peculiar Legal Blunder Abolishes It in Michigan.

LANSING, Oct. 8.—Attorney General Ellis, in examining the statutes relative to the management of the prisons of the state, has made the startling discovery that by a blunder on the part of the legislature of 1893 the convict contract labor system in this state has been abolished. Attorney General Ellis bases his conclusions on the recent opinion of the supreme court in the case of Warden Parsell, of the Ionia reformatory. It was held in that case, Mr. Ellis says, that the 1893 revision of the laws relating to the prisons of the state superseded all previous laws on this subject, and as one of the previous laws provided in detail the manner in which contracts for the labor of convicts should be let, he claims that such law was repealed. Inasmuch as the new law is silent on the subject of contracts, it is held by the attorney general that convicts can now be employed on state account. Contracts existing at the time the law took effect are valid until the expiration of the time for which they were made. But none executed since that time are legal.

LANSING, Oct. 5.—August W. Lindholm, the defaulting deputy secretary of state who ran away last March, has arrived in Lansing from Sweden in custody of Deputy Sheriff Wright and Chief of Police Sanford, who went to his mother country after him six weeks ago. He admits that he is short in his accounts from $900 to $1,200. It was believed that Lindholm knew something about the manner in which the fraudulent canvass of the returns upon the salaries amendment were made, as the canvass was conducted by clerks in his charge, but he professes innocence of the affair. He was arraigned on Thursday and pleaded not guilty and was held for examination October 17. Bail was fixed at $5,000, which has not yet been furnished.

The property is located in the Calumet and Hecla belt of copper mines and is said by experts who have examined the property to be one of the best parcels of copper land in Michigan. An extensive paint will be equipped in the immediate future and the mining of copper will be pushed. It is stated a number of copper veins, containing large quantities of mass copper, have been opened already.

How to Avoid Farm Work in Summer.

It never gets so hot in the South as it does in the North. There are never any sunstrokes in the South. The hotter the weather the harder the Northern farmer has to work to save his crops, while down South the farmers do their farm work during the Fall, Winter and Spring, when the weather is cool, and during the Summer they take it easy. It is always cool in the shade down South, and the nights are always cool. The thermometer seldom gets above 90. The hottest day during the past five years was 97 degrees.

You can grow one crop during the Winter, another during the Spring, and another during the Fall on the same land each year. You will not make more money from each one of these crops than you can make from a similar crop in the North. You can get a home cheaper. It will cost you less to live. You can make more money. You will have better health, live longer, and enjoy life better in the South than in the North. A beautiful pamphlet that tells all about it sent free to all applicants. Go South now and investigate. My mother has been troubled with erysipelas and found great relief in Hood's Sarsaparilla. She had tried almost everything else but nothing gave her relief like Hood's Sarsaparilla. Quite an excitement was created in this vicinity when the report came that the family of Geo. Helmendinger, Sr., who lives southwest from Manchester, were afflicted with smallpox. At first it was supposed to be and was called erysipelas by the attending physician, consequently many friends and neighbors were in and out. George, who lives just east of town with his wife and two children, were on their way there when he was told it was pronounced that dread disease, so he escaped having his loved ones exposed, as he returned home.

To Down Spooks.

A wealthy bachelor declared that a horrid hag had glared at him through the night. His friends laughed at him but he insisted that the house was haunted. He grew ill, complaining of extreme heaviness in the stomach, his appetite failed, he grew sallow, emaciated and despondent, believing he was going to die, the spook being a warning, and declared he could hear funeral bells ringing in his ears, and even hinted at suicide. A friend induced him to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and he rapidly grew well, spooks and all his distressing symptoms disappearing. A torpid liver and dyspepsia caused his sufferings and the medicine cured both. A pamphlet free or a large book, on liver and stomach diseases and how to cure them (186 pages) for 6 cents in stamps. Address World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N.Y.

State Sunday School Convention.

To the Sunday-school workers of Michigan: We take pleasure in announcing that the 34th annual convention of the Michigan S. S. Association will be held in the city of Grand Rapids, Nov. 13, 14 and 15. The first meeting, on Tuesday evening, will be held in Lockerby Hall, and addressed by Major General O. O. Howard, U. S. A. The subsequent sessions will be held in the First Baptist church. The indications are that this will be the most largely attended and enthusiastic meeting of the kind ever held in Michigan. We would remind you that this convention represents the unified Christian forces of the state in aggressive S. S. work; that it is thoroughly interdenominational, therefore promotive of abiding social and spiritual fellowships; also that it will be highly stimulative, educative and helpful to all S. S. workers.

The program will be rich and varied, and ably sustained by representative talent both in and out of the state. We ask you to note the growing popularity of our state conventions. The attendance at the Lansing convention, in 1890, was about 500; at Muskegon, in 1891, 736; at Bay City, in 1892, 820; at Hillsdale, in 1893, 1,050. The representations in our state conventions heretofore have excelled those of Ohio. At their last convention they enrolled 1,521 delegates. At our forthcoming meeting we want to register 2,000 delegates. We can do it.

Our Grand Rapids friends guarantee free entertainment to all accredited delegates whose names are sent to Elmer E. Stanton, 151 Ottawa street, on or before Nov. 10th. Programs with full particulars will soon be out. Note the following: The Honorable Secretaries of the London S. S. Union, have designated Sunday and Monday, Oct. 21 and 22, as days of universal prayer for Sunday schools. All Christians everywhere, are urged during those days frequently, in private and public ways, to pray for Sunday schools and S. S. Missions throughout the world, and for all S. S. teachers, officers and scholars, and especially for a speedy and great outpouring of the Holy Spirit, and the conversion of many souls.

TABLE TALK.

For the housekeeper and the mother, the October issue of "TABLE TALK" holds much of interest. For the help of the former, three dozen tested recipes are given in the Inquiry Department, as well as Menus for many occasions, while the latter will eagerly read much in "The New Bill of Fare" and the Fashion Department. "Another View of Woman's Work" is given by Helen Campbell, our great authority on Domestic Science and Economy. It is well worth the small charge of 10 cents a number, or $1.00 per year. A sample copy, free, is offered to our readers by Table Talk Publishing Co., Philadelphia.

—BOOK BINDING—

We have made arrangements whereby we can take orders at this office for all kinds of binding. The work will be done in first-class style at the University Book Bindery in Ann Arbor. Bring along your magazines and portfolios that you may want bound and get our prices. Now is the time to have your books bound.

The Crowning Glory of the Age.

Man's enterprise culminated at the World's Columbian Exposition. The memory of it will be a marvel for all time. The fame there acquired will live for years. The manufacturers of appreciate the award to them of highest honors at the Exposition. The significance of the compliment, the splendid character of the indorsement, cannot be underrated. It stamps Dr. Price's as without a peer among the baking powders. The jury of awards, an exceptionally intelligent body, was headed by the Chief Chemist of the United States Department of Agriculture. They found Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder strongest in leavening power, perfect in purity, and of uniform excellence.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Simon Gould, who has been sick for the past two months, peacefully passed away at 7 o'clock Thursday morning. She leaves a husband and four sons to mourn her departure. The funeral services were held at the church Saturday forenoon, Rev. Sargeon, of Rea, officiating, assisted by Rev. Cansfield, the interment taking place in the cemetery on the Ridge. She was a member of the M. P. church at Cone, and was an earnest christian and worker, always speaking words of cheer and comfort to all. She leaves a large circle of friends at Cone, who feel their loss very deeply and sympathize with the bereaved family in their affliction. Although her stay among us was short, she made the friendship of all who made her acquaintance.

William A. Cornell, whose death we mentioned in last week's issue, was born in the town of North Crosby, Canada, August 21, 1861, being 33 years, 1 month and 22 days of age at the time of his death. He came to Michigan with his parents in 1865. He was united in marriage to Nancy E. Allison, of Ridgeway, July 3, 1880. He was a member of the Presbyterian church of Stoney Creek, in good standing, living a good christian life and dying with the belief that for the christian there is rest for the weary. He was a member of the A. O. U. W. for the past four years. He leaves a wife and two children, also a father, mother, three brothers and four sisters, who mourn his loss. The funeral services were held at Stoney Creek and the interment took place in the Ridgeway cemetery, Oct. 11.

Mrs. Lydia Hall, after several week's of severe illness, passed to the spirit land on Friday morning, the 12th inst., where we now think of her life as reunited with those of loved ones gone before. She was a kind neighbor and dear friend, always giving words of comfort and hope to those in distress. The home circle will miss a mother's counsel and advise in the hour of trial. All the means known to tender hands were employed to rob death of its terror. The beautiful home from whence she was about to be bourne showed the helpfulness of many friends. The casket rested in the front parlor amid a profusion of floral pieces, roses and carnations, mingled with smilax and ferns, the most beautiful expression of friends, young and old. Seats were reserved in the parlor where the casket reposed for the intimate friends from Raisin. The beautiful music of the quartette, the fine tribute paid by the Rev. C. M. Brown, of Tecumseh, and the heartfelt prayer by Rev. Cansfield were very impressive. Words seem vain to express the deep sorrow and wide spread expression throughout the village and vicinity for the bereaved family in their sad affliction. The funeral services were held at the house Sunday afternoon and the remains were consigned to the tomb Monday morning at the cemetery in Raisin, to await the resurrection morn. Mrs. Hall was born Aug. 24, 1817, being 77 years, 1 month and 17 days old at the time of her death. She was united in marriage to Jonathan Hall when 19 years of age and began married life in the pioneer's home on the farm where she had lived at the time of her death for nearly sixty years. She gave her heart to Jesus when about seventeen years of age and united with the Presbyterian church at Tecumseh, where she has many warm friends. Her husband was called to his rest April 26d, 1882. She leaves three daughters, two brothers and three sisters, who mourn her departure.

Her's was one of those ever genial natures, always bestowing a kind act when the opportunity presented itself, thus unconsciously strewing the pathway of others with sunshine. She had many sincere friends in this vicinity, who extend their sympathy to the bereaved family. Mr. Gould leased his farm and moved to Ridgeway in the spring.

S. C. Stacy's Snap Shot Story was not very largely attended on account of the rainy weather. They only nicely covered expences and gave the K. O. T. M. about $12. Nevertheless the entertainment was very good and worth any person's time and money to attend.

We understand that a couple of men in our neighborhood, while husking corn thought that a jug of cider would help out a little, but they emptied the jug too early, and in a little while they were both in the middle of the road scrapping in a mud hole. No one hurt, but their clothes were a sight.

The social given by the lady Maccabees last Tuesday evening in honor of the Sir Knights, was a grand affair. About 200 were present. A literary program was given, which was very good, after which coffee and sandwhichs were served, which discounted all the rest. These kind of socials are just what we want to advance our Tent and increase our number.

The low price for which the book is sold, 50c a copy in flexible silk cloth binding, brings it within reach of every business man in the land. Published by G. H. Powell, Springfield, Mass.

SIGNAL TRIUMPHS WON

By Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder.

Two signal triumphs have been achieved by Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder. First it received highest award and diploma at the World's Columbian Exposition of 1893. Next it secured highest award and gold medal at the California Midwinter Fair of 1894. At both Fairs it surpassed all competitors in every respect. The award, in each instance, was for strongest leavening power, perfect purity and general excellence. It was sustained by the unanimous vote of the judges.

The victory at Chicago establishes the supremacy of Dr. Price's as "The Foremost Baking Powder in the World." The triumph at San Francisco confirms and emphasizes it.

If Mrs. Willie K. can secure $800,000 a year without any divorce thrown in we advise her to do it and do it quick.

A Piano at a Nominal Price.

Chicago's largest music house, Lyon & Healy, has moved into a magnificent new building. They have a number of slightly used and second-hand pianos returned from World's Fair renting, etc., etc., which they have determined to sacrifice rather than to try to make room for. These instruments comprise Square pianos at $40, $55, $100 and $125. Upright pianos at $135, $140, $150, $165, $190, $200, $225, $240 and upward. Grand pianos at $200, $250, $300 and upwards. Nearly all originally sold for from two to four times their present price. Almost all prominent makes (in squares and uprights) are represented, including among numerous others Chickering, Knabe, Steinway, Weber, Decker, Steck, Fisher, etc. This is an opportunity that will not occur again, as Lyon & Healy have not moved for twenty years. Immediate attention is therefore necessary. A good plan will be to order a piano, leaving the selections to Lyon & Healy. However they will send a list and full particulars on application. Any piano not proving satisfactory may be returned at their expense. Address at their new salesrooms, corner Wabash Avenue and Adams street, Chicago. Distance is no obstacle in taking advantage of this remarkable chance to obtain a piano, for in proportion to the saving to be made the freight charges are insignificant. If you do not already know them by reputation any banker will assure of Lyon & Healy's entire responsibility and record of over a third of a century for honorable dealing. Write to-day so as to avoid disappointment.

Must Have It.

Yes, you must have it. It is the only way you can learn what is going on about you; the news of the city, village or farming district in which you live. You must have your home paper, whether you can afford anything else in the way of current reading or not. And a great deal besides home news you will find in it. The editor of your home paper aims first of all to give you the home news, with intelligent and helpful comment thereon. But he does not stop there; he does the best he can to give you the general news and the best thought of the whole world. Of course he does not and cannot give you as much as you ought to have, and if you ask him about the matter he will frankly tell you so. He will also advise you what you ought to get to supplement your home paper and keep you and your growing boys and girls up with the times in the great fields of politics, sociology, finance, commerce, science, religion, art, education, and the literary and book news of the day. He will tell you that there is one weekly journal, unique in this respect, made up of carefully selected, condensed and classified extracts from the newspapers and magazines the world over, and that he has made special arrangements by which he can give you a reduced subscription rate for this unique journal, if taken in connection with the HERALD. He will tell you that the name of this journal so admirably suited to your wants is PUBLIC OPINION, that it is published at Washington, D. C., and that the regular subscription price is $2.50 per yhar, but that he can give you both the HERALD and PUBLIC OPINION for one year for $3.00 cash. He will also tell you that PUBLIC OPINION and the HERALD are exactly what you need during the political campaign. PUBLIC OPINION will be sent you for ten weeks on trial for fifty cents.

The Inspiration Institute.

A rare treat is in store for the teachers of Lenawee county, as well as for all others who take especial interest in educational progress.

The school commissioner, in conjunction with the state superintendent of public instruction and Superintendent Walker, of the Adrian city schools, has arranged an "Inspiration Institute," to be held at Adrian, Nov. 1st, 2d and 3d. The institute will be opened Thursday evening, Nov. 1st, with an address by Dr. A. G. Boone, principal of the State Normal school. The address will be delivered at the Baptist church and will be of a popular character.

Hon. H. R. Pattengill, superintendent of public instruction, will himself conduct the institute. The day sessions will be held at the high school building on Friday and Saturday, Nov. 2d and 3d, and the instructors will be Col. Parker, principal of the Cook County Normal School, Chicago; Dr. Hinsdale, of the University, professor of the Science and Art of Teaching; Dr. Boone and Miss Coffin, of the Detroit schools, and Superintendent Pattengill.

With such talent as the above the rally must necessarily be productive of a general awakening on educational matters in the county. Most of the schools in the county will give their teachers a holiday to attend the rally and it is expected that the attendance will be very large.

There will probably be a popular lecture on Friday evening also.

This meeting promises to be an eventful one in the educational history of the county and all teachers should attend if possible. In fact, they cannot afford to miss it.

TECUMSEH, MICH., OCT. 18, 1894.

Spencer O. Fisher is making a rattling canvass. The more people become acquainted with him, the more they recognize his fitness.

The campaign in New York is waxing red hot. Senator Hill is making some very able speeches, and the contrast between his vigorous talk and Morton's silence must be very humiliating to the latter.

David B. Hill is making the fight of his life down in New York. However people may have regarded his political methods heretofore, they cannot but admire his undaunted courage in the present crisis.

Voters should not forget our own state affairs in casting their ballots this fall. National issues will be the controlling factor in the election of Congressmen, but state issues should govern in choosing the state ticket.

Senator McPherson, of New Jersey, has had enough and declines a renomination to the Senate. It will be remembered that his son and hired girl speculated in sugar stocks during the formation of the Brice-Gorman tariff.

Neither science nor Christianity demand the servitude of the many that the few may dwell in demoralizing ease. And history proves the fatal results which follow such conditions in all ages and under all forms of government.

Congressman Wilson has Gladstone's indorsement for the assertion that in lowering the tariff this country is paving the way for its own commercial supremacy in the near future. But then every one who is not either a blind man or a Republican can see that.

There is no question but that the workers in every calling are getting poorer and poorer, while every chartered monopoly is steadily increasing its wealth. The gulf between the producing industry of the country and the controlling wealth is steadily widening. What is to be the result?

Carlyle says: "The great man shapes the age;" Herbert Spencer says: "The age shapes the great man." Probably both are right and both are wrong. A great man is the product of past influences acting by means of heredity, which give the peculiar organism which operated on by present conditions, results in the development of the peculiar cast of character referred to.

The October number of the Arena comes filled with good matter as usual. The article which will and ought to attract wide-spread interest is "Plutocracy's Bastiles" by Mr. B. O. Flower. It is a subject to which Mr. Flower has given much time and study, and of which he writes in no uncertain words. We wish every intelligent individual in this country could read this article and learn its momentous significance. The Arena is the one great reform monthly.

The St. Louis Republic says: Here is another object lesson in the tariff reform. One of the great dry goods houses of St. Louis has a letter from the New York concern, William and John Don and Company, which says that since the passage of the tariff bill they are able to reduce quotations of crashes ten per cent. The house-wife understands the tariff question from such lessons, and is the tariff reformer who will drive protection out of politics.

The Democratic State Platform adopted at Grand Rapids, June 28, 1894, says: "We declare in favor of the free, unlimited coinage of silver at a ratio that will permit the debtors to pay their debts upon the same basis on which they were contracted. We demand that henceforth the issuing of all circulating medium be made under the acts of Congress, through the National Treasury, in such amounts as the business wants of the country may require and it shall be full legal tender."

The Providence Journal says: The tone of the speech in which on Saturday Senator Hill formally accepted the nomination which he still insists, of course, was thrust upon him against his will, indicates that he will make as aggressive a fight as is possible, notwithstanding the discouraging circumstances in which he finds himself. Enough depends upon the issue to bring out all the strongest fighting qualities which he possesses, and that means that the Republicans, even with the drift of events going their way, will have to exert themselves to defeat him.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, Oct. 12, 1894.

Two distinguished officials have during the present week made statements on the same subject that are difficult to reconcile. Senator Faulkner, of West Virginia, who is chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, said that there never was a time when it was so difficult to get contributions from Federal officials, and that about the only ones who had contributed what might be considered their quota were the employes at the capitol. There is quite an interesting little story about the manner in which the contributions of the Capitol employes, some 1300 in number, were secured. It is said that each of them agreed to chip in $30, and that the money was paid, with the understanding that a joint resolution would be put through Congress allowing them an extra month's pay. The resolution was introduced all right enough, but owing to opposition in unexpected quarters it failed to pass. But to return to those opposite statements—it is gathered from that of Senator Faulkner that the government employes are not contributing. Now, look at the other side. Civil Service Commissioner Roosevelt said, in a published interview, that the commission was having no end of trouble because of the political assessment of government employes and that he did not recall any non-presidential election year in which the commission had had so much trouble from that source. One or the other must be either badly informed or have wrongly summed up the facts.

The populists are, as the saying is, "just tickled to death" over Secretary Hoke Smith's explanation of the falling off of the democratic majority in Georgia. They say if Mr. Smith will only do a little more explaining of the same sort he will make populists out of thousands of democrats in the Southern States. He says in effect that the vote in Georgia has convinced him of the necessity of the democratic party standing up squarely for the Cleveland silver policy. Mr. Smith is being roundly abused by the silver democrats for what they call his impolite utterances against silver" in the midst of a campaign in which that party expects to elect two-thirds of the members it will have in the next House with the votes of men who believe in free and unlimited coinage of silver. It is hinted that it was the indiscreet nature of Secretary Smith's speeches that caused President Cleveland to order that members of the administration should not take active part in the campaign.

A quorum of the Cabinet have gone to Batavia, N. Y., ostensibly only to hear Secretary Carlisle deliver a carefully prepared address on the life and character of his distinguished predecessor of revolutionary fame, Robert Morris, but it is regarded as altogether probable that they will take advantage of the opportunity to put in a few licks that will help along the New York campaign, now just getting on a full head of steam.

The Mexican minister to the United States is in a bad state of mind, because of a publication stating that Mexico was plotting to annex all the rest of the Central American republics. He denies the story and says there was no foundation whatever therefor. If the minister is correct the man who furnished the details with which the annexation story abounded is gifted with an extraordinary imagination.

A gentlemen who visited the democratic and republican Congressional committee headquarters says that he received substantially the same answer at both places to his question as to the present outlook and that stripped of all verbiage it was: "We are certain to control the next House, if the populists do not elect enough members to hold the balance of power." Odd, wasn't it.

Those politicians who thought that Senator Cameron was only making believe that he intended to enter the field as a candidate for the Presidential nomination of his party, basing his claims for the nomination on his favoring free coinage of silver, are slowly getting their eyes opened to the fact that whatever others may mean, Cameron means business and is really out for that nomination. Thousands of free documents are being daily sent out from Washington under Senator Cameron's frank. Senator Cameron cannot compete with the orators of his party who are seeking the Presidential nomination, but he has a long head, and a longer purse, and will be heard from when the delegates to the national convention are rounded up.

The general impression in Washington is that the independent democratic candidate for governor of New York will not get enough support to make him a factor in the fight. Both democrats and republicans seem to be of the opinion that he will only get the votes of those who would not under any circumstances have voted for either Hill or Morton.

TABLE TALK.

For the housekeeper and the mother, the October issue of "TABLE TALK" holds much of interest. For the help of the former, three dozen tested recipes are given in the Inquiry Department as well as Menus for many occasions, while the latter will eagerly read much in "The New Bill of Fare" and the Fashion Department. "Another View of Woman's Work" is given by Helen Campbell, our great authority on Domestic Science and Economy. It is well worth the small charge of 10 cents a number, or $1.00 per year. A sample copy, free, is offered to our readers by Table Talk Publishing Co., Philadelphia.

NOW AN ASSURED THING.

The much-talked-of Toledo, Monroe & Detroit electric railroad now seems to be an assured thing. Late last evening City Attorney Golden received a message from Dr. Gardner, of Toledo, president of the company, and who has been in the east for some time furthering the interests of the project, with a view to placing the bonds of the company, saying that the money necessary to build and equip the road has been secured, and that the work of construction will begin this fall. Besides the road running north and south of Monroe to Toledo and Detroit, the company will build lines in the city boundary at the west of the piers, thus opening up and facilitating travel to the popular resort. The company already has a franchise granting the use of certain streets for their line. They will build and open for public use a handsome steel bridge over the river Raisin. The citizens are elated to know that the enterprise is at last an assured thing.

MONOPOLY SLAVERY.

The New York Sun states that the annual income of John D. Rockefeller is $20,000,000. This requires the constant labor of 54,794 laborers at $1 per day. Surely this control of labor by the control of money is more profitable than to own the laborers as chattel slaves. The wealthiest slave-holder of the South never dreamed of being able to hold 50,000 slaves under the system of unrestricted chattel slavery. But under our present system of debt and wage slavery it is not unusual. It requires the labor of one man six days at $1 per day to furnish John D. Rockefeller his income for one second. And Rockefeller is but one of thousands of monopolistic masters of greater or smaller dimensions. Is it strange that the slaves are not satisfied?

Men are not usually to blame for taking advantage of circumstances or conditions, and it is not against such men that reform measures are directed. It is against the laws which make such conditions. Good men often make the mistake of assuming that these demands are aimed at the millionaires personally. It is not true. It is directed against that system of national economy which makes these millionaires. Mr. Rockefeller is here; by some means he has amassed a large fortune. Under the law it is his. These reform measures do not propose either to hang him or take away his property. But the people don't want any more of his kind, nor will they permit him to use this immense lever to enslave his neighbors. It is proposed to wipe out a system that will bring about such results. Who will gainsay that doctrine?—The Watchman.

The Development of the South.

is being furthered by the Queen and Crescent Route by means of a special series of Monthly Excursions to southern points at One Fare for Round Trip. These rates are in effect from Cincinnati, O., Louisville and Lexington, Ky., June 5th, July 5th, Aug. 7th, Sept. 4th, October 2d, November 6th and December 4th; good twenty days from date of sale for return. They are sold on these dates to all points in Kentucky, Tennesse, Alabama, Mississippi, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida (except Key West), and to New Orleans, and all points on our line in Louisiana. The Q. & C. has over a million acres of farms and timber land for sale along its line at $3.00 to $8.00 per acre.

Stop-overs are permitted on these excursions at any point South of the Ohio River, within the final limit of the tickets. This offers an excellent opportunity to those who desire to go South to look into the great movement of Northern farmers to that section.

Send us your name for advertising matter and any information you may want as to lands and immigration to the South.

"WHERE FARMING PAYS."

Is it in the north-west with wheat at less than 50 cents a bushel, with zero weather and blizzards in winter and cyclones in summer? No! Go to Virginia; land is cheap, climate perfect all the year round. Ask any one who knows and he will tell you that in the tidewater section one acre of land has produced as high as $2,000.00 in one season. It is worth looking into. Apply to C. H. ASSIST NATURE a little now and then in removing offending matter from the stomach and bowels and you thereby avoid a multitude of distressing derangements and diseases, and will have less frequent need of your doctor's service.

Of all known agents for this purpose, Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the best. Once used, they are always in favor. Their secondary effect is to keep the bowels open and regular, not to further constipate, as is the case with other pills. Hence, their great popularity with sufferers from habitual constipation, piles and their attendant discomfort and manifold derangements. The "Pellets" are purely vegetable and perfectly harmless in any condition of the system. No care is required while using them; they do not interfere with the diet, habits or occupation, and produce no pain, griping or shock to the system. They act in a mild, easy and natural way and there is no reaction afterward. Their help lasts.

The Pellets cure biliousness, sick and bilious headache, dizziness, costiveness, or constipation, sour stomach, loss of appetite, coated tongue, indigestion, or dyspepsia, windy belchings, "heartburn," pain and distress after eating, and kindred derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels. In proof of their superior excellence, it can be truthfully said, that they are always adopted as a household remedy after the first trial. Put up in sealed, glass vials, therefore always fresh and reliable. One little "Pellet" is a laxative, two are mildly cathartic. As a "dinner pill," to promote digestion, or to relieve distress from overeating, take one after dinner. They are tiny, sugar-coated granules; any child will readily take them.

Accept no substitute that may be recommended to be "just as good." It may be better for the dealer, because of paying him a better profit, but he is not the one who needs help.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation, biliousness and derangements of stomach, liver and bowels.

The appearance of Herr Most as an actor on the democratic stage ought to furnish a valuable suggestion to Governor Altgeld, who will soon be out of politics.

UNATTAINED.

When Pan's Syrinx changed her form
To a reed by river's brim,
Straight he cut that reed and blew
Sounds divinely sweet to him,
For he knew the music fine
Was the soul of her dear shade,
Hour by hour he wooed her well,
That she might not wholly fade;
Kept the reed against his lips
And so held her spirit near,
If perchance by some strange spell
She, repentant, reappear.
Still he calls upon her name,
Counting not his vision gone,
But he may not bring to life
And her, living, look upon.
Yet he hopes to, and so sings
Here and there by tempest tossed,
What the heart with love pursues
Never can be wholly lost.
Die it cannot while we hope,
Through a shy, elusive gleam
It must haunt the sunny heights
Near the valleys where we dream.

PRICE OF BETRAYAL.

"And what do you say your numbers are?"

"Twenty-two, excellency, myself included, but I"——

"No need to say anything further at present. It is for you to prove yourself worthy of our confidence and of the czar's clemency."

"I assure you we had no political aim in view."

"I cannot listen to that. Have you made out the list you promised?"

"It is here, excellency."

The chief of the secret police took the paper handed to him and silently compared it with one on his desk.

"Dostoieffsky," he read and looked up inquiringly, "is he one of you?"

"One of the society, but it was only to read Fourier and Proudhon we met"——

"I cannot hear you, I have told you already. Be silent and answer my questions."

Then he again scrutinized the list and muttered to himself, "Bardin, Loubanoff, Sobotin—I was not aware of these last. You have done well, Radovitch, and you will find that the czar's government is not unmindful of those who serve it well. Your recent action will atone for your past errors and merit reward besides."

"Might I venture to suggest one thing to your excellency?"

"Speak out, man. What frightens you now? I have told you that you have nothing to fear, and I can make my word observed."

"That I know well, and yet, and yet"——

"Well?"

"My life will not be worth a day's purchase if it is known that it is I who have furnished this information."

"You should have thought of that before joining their society. I see you have something to suggest. What is it?"

"That when the seizure by the police takes place no distinction be made between me and the others."

"Of course you will be apprehended with them."

"And tried?"

"Yes, if you wish it, and condemned, too, for that matter. Anything further?"

"And pardoned along with the less guilty of the others, so as to avoid all suspicion?"

"I quite understand you. Rest assured you will have no reason for fear in that respect."

"I thank your excellency. Any further orders?"

"None; you may go."

The chief of police smiled to himself as the spy took his departure.

"And so you want to be treated like your fellow conspirators, that you may not be found out by such as escape us. So be it. You will have all you have bargained for, my man."

That very evening the police raid took place. Taken as they were by surprise and unconscious of any treachery on the part of one of their number, the little coterie of students, artists and young doctors found themselves bagged, without a single exception. They indignantly denied the charge of conspiring against the government. Their discussions were social, not political, they asseverated. But General Garashinin's myrmidons merely shrugged their shoulders deprecatingly, perhaps incredulously. They had heard that sort of thing before, and it had meant Siberia for many, if not a more summary fate. Among the 22 was Radovitch, who was also among the loudest in protesting innocence.

In a month the trial took place. Radovitch was not called to give evidence, but took his place among the accused, and, like his companions, had to plead guilty or not guilty to the charge of conspiring to subvert the government. For weeks the trial dragged its slow length along, for, though few witnesses were or could be called beyond the police who effected the arrests, there were hundreds of documents, many of them immature essays, and most of purely academic interest, to be read, which, in a way that only one of the prisoners understood, had come into the hands of the prosecution as well as brief minutes of their proceedings obtained in the same way.

At length the whole 22 were adjudged guilty. Twelve were sentenced to Siberia, but not to the mines, as the clemency of the czar provided. It was with a thrill akin to horror that Radovitch heard himself sentenced to death, along with the other nine, though conscious that it only formed part of the arrangement that he himself had suggested to General Garashinin.

"Sentence to Siberia would have served the purpose equally well," he muttered to himself, and turning to look at his companions he found himself wondering if his own face was as deathly pale as each of theirs. "To be shot on the glacis of the fortress at sunrise tomorrow morning," he kept repeating to himself, though assuring himself that the words could have no reference to him, for the czar must keep troth even with traitors, or none would be found to serve him in future.

Dostoieffsky and the others calmly accepted their fate, and after a hurried farewell to their more fortunate fellows were conducted to their cells for the last time.

Some of the prisoners slept soundly, as though entirely unconcerned in the grim tragedy to be enacted on the morrow. Not so Radovitch. From side to side of his narrow cell, like some caged wild animal, he paced, listening the while intently for the footstep of the messenger that was to recall him to freedom and to the joys of life. The long night passed, all too quickly for him, for whom the messenger so unaccountably delayed. He had seen General Garashinin in court from day to day, and once a glance of intelligence, he persuaded himself, had passed between them. Vainly the two warders, whose duty it was to watch him, sought to induce him to take rest.

"He may come at any moment," he kept saying to himself, "and I had better keep awake in case of any misunderstanding."

His throat was parched, and his tongue clove to the roof of his mouth, but he refused every offer of water or wine, overcome as he was with the terrible anxiety of impending doom, an anxiety rendered all the greater by the conviction that such doom was not intended for him.

At last a faint grayness began to manifest itself through the close bars of his cell. It was the light, the herald of a new day, the last for the condemned men. And now Radovitch began to explain, in husky tones, that his conviction was all a blunder. The two men looked intelligently at each other and pityingly upon the wretched prisoner, but said not a word.

In a few minutes all the ten were assembled in the courtyard of the prison, nine of them calm and collected, for the bitterness of death was already past, one a prey to mortal fear and sickening terror and evidencing it all too plainly in his trembling limbs and livid countenance. In the hurried goodbys they exchanged with each other Radovitch came in for more than his share of attention.

"Come, Dimtri," said one, "we all owe nature a death. As well pay it now as later."

"Cheer up, comrade," whispered another. "It makes these hirelings rejoice to see you afraid."

"It's all a mistake," mumbled the wretched man. "Where is General Garashinin?"

"He is never present at executions," replied the soldier he addressed. "He issued his final orders last night."

And then a melancholy procession began to move toward the glacis of the fortress prison. A priest led the way, holding aloft a large cross before the eyes of the doomed men, who followed in single file, their ordinary dress covered with a long robe of white linen, at once a covering for the living and a shroud for the dead. The morning sun had not yet risen as the procession wended its way slowly to the place of execution, their life's span narrowed to a few minutes and narrowing with fearful rapidity at every step they took.

At last they reached the place appointed. Five stakes had been driven into the ground near the summit of the long, even slope of the rampart. To these they were bound in couples, facing the east, now kindling with the warm flush of the rising sun, whose coming was to be the signal for their death. Ranged in front of them, at a distance of 15 yards, was a company of soldiers with loaded rifles, whose captain, standing a little way apart, held in his hand a white handkerchief, at whose fall 60 tongues of fire would leap forth and 60 bullets seek the hearts of the unhappy men.

There was still time for the last scene but one in the tragedy before the sun should rise. The cross was held before the lips of each man for a final kiss in turn. Then a dagger was broken over their heads by a soldier detailed from the thousands drawn up to witness the vengeance of the czar. At that moment the sun seemed to bound into space, and every heart almost stopped.

But the officer has not let the signal handkerchief fall. Instead the retreat is sounded on a score of bugles, and the troops march off the ground. The kneeling men were informed that the emperor had been graciously pleased to grant them their lives. They were unbound, and, as if in a dream, tried to realize all that had happened and to congratulate one another ere the last couple had been reached. One of these had fallen forward on his face as far as his bonds permitted. It was Radovitch.

"He has fainted," said a soldier. "Bring me some water, sharp."

"No need to trouble," said the doctor, who had rapidly examined him. "He is dead. The fright has killed him."

It was too true. The chief of the secret police had carried out his promise only too literally. The spy had no longer any reason to fear his betrayed comrades' revenge.—London Tit-Bits.

The Captain's Heteroscopic Eyes.

An aged sea captain whose home is in this city is troubled with a peculiarity of vision which is common to all skippers and ships' officers of high rank who have had long experience on the sea. In this particular instance the captain complains that through long use of the telescope, the quadrant and other instruments used in making calculations at sea the sight has been drawn from the left eye into the one which peers so eagerly through the instruments. He says he can discern objects at an enormous distance with his right eye, but is scarcely able to read with his left.—Philadelphia Record.

HOMES IN ARKANSAS.

The location of Arkansas is such as to exempt it from extremes of heat and cold. Its elevations and richness of soils adapt it to the production of a greater variety of crops, fruits and general products used for the sustenance and comfort of man than any other State in the Union. While its salubrious climate, joined with the other combinations mentioned, give to its fruit and food products a peculiarly delightful flavor that can be found nowhere else. It justly boasts of more health-giving springs and better well-water than any other State. Lands are cheap and productive, markets accessible; health good; no blizzards; no drouth; never a failure of crops; good schools, churches and society, and what is also important, a hearty welcome for all. OBITUARY.

In the death of Rev. G. P. Tindall, the Presbyterian church in California lost one of its ablest preachers and best men. His services for the Master were given in several different fields widely separated from each other, and extended through a long life. He was born in New Jersey, April 29, 1802, and died in Sacramento, Cal., September 8, 1894, being 72 years, 4 months, and 10 days old. He was enabled to continue in active service until about a month before his death. For fourteen months he had been preaching in the Presbyterian church in Placerville, and on his last Sabbath there, he was too weak to preach, and had a fainting spell in the pulpit. Two days later he went to Sacramento, hoping to be benefited by the change, but he grew gradually weaker, and passed peacefully away on the evening of September 8th, attended by his two daughters, Lizzie H. and Ann L. Tindall, who are the only surviving members of his family. Shortly before his death he asked one of them to pray with him, and among his last words was the prayer; "O Lord, take us into thy holy keeping. Mr. Tindall was a man of ability and scholarly attainments. He received his collegiate education in the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, and took his theological course at Union Theological Seminary, New York. He was for some time pastor of the Presbyterian church in Dayton, Ohio, from which he was called to the Second Presbyterian church of Indianapolis, in which Henry Ward Beecher once preached, and as the successor of Rev. C. E. Babb, D.D., so well known as one of our ablest writers for the religious press. While here, there was a remarkable revival in the church. It continued for thirteen weeks, was carried on by the pastor and people, and Mr. Tindall preached constantly night after night during all this time. From here he went successively to the churches of Ypsilanti and Flint, Michigan, where he preached to large congregations and did excellent work. In 1881 he came to California and took charge of the Placerville Academy. In this work he was assisted by Mrs. Tindall, who died about four years ago, and by his two daughters, one of whom had been educated at the State University, and the other at the State Normal School in Michigan. In 1890 he became pastor of the Fourteenth street Presbyterian church in Sacramento and remained until the spring of 1893, when he resigned and closed his labors there on the fortieth anniversary of his ministerial life. Soon after this he began preaching in Placerville where he remained until a few weeks before his death. His funeral was held in the Presbyterian church at Placerville, September 11th. It was conducted by Rev. James Curry of the North Temescal Presbyterian church, Oakland, Cal., assisted by Rev. R. D. Sinclair of the Placerville Presbyterian church, and was attended by a large audience of friends who held him in high esteem. It may be said of Mr. Tindall first of all that he was a Christian of true and humble piety. He was an able preacher also. He preached the pure gospel, had a comprehensive view of the truth, presented it in clear and forceful language, and applied it with good judgment and often with great power. He was a man of scholarly attainments. He had a good education, was well read and capable of imparting information on almost any subject, and as principal of Placerville Academy did a good work in the education of young people. He was a manly man. He had a splendid physique that made him everywhere noticable, he met his fellow-men with a dignity and frankness that commanded their respect, he took much interest in all matters of importance in the community where he lived, and was ever ready to lend a helping hand where he could. He was a true friend. With a large heart and kind affections, he won many friends among old and young by whom he will long be remembered with highest respect and esteem. His life and character were such as to make most appropriate to him the words of the text from which his funeral sermon was preached: "Well done, good and faithful servant, * * enter thou into the joy of thy Lord.

JAMES CURRY.

This well known clergyman and scholar died at Sacramento last Saturday, the 8th inst. Suddenly prostrated at morning service of the Presbyterian church about four weeks before his death, he reluctantly suspended his ministerial duties here for a rest and a possible recovery of health and strength among his former parishioners in Sacramento. But the race of the strong was run and he passed from the altar of his devotion to his supreme reward. The summons found him ready and waiting. A long and useful life of seventy-two years had been rounded out in the Presbyterian pastorate of Placerville, and hither he was borne by loving hands, that laid their funeral offerings on bier and grave. Where five weeks before he closed his long and faithful ministry, his friend and brother, Rev. James Curry had come from his distant charge at Oakland with greetings of love and hope for the living and the dead. His last message "Well done, good and faithful servant," was wafted on wings of faith to his friend in Heaven. There came also the sorrowing daughters, Lizzie and Anna, to mingle their tears in the shadow of a double bereavement by the graves of father and mother. And now, alas! a broken household has left its sacred memorials of church and school and gentle images of joy and sorrow, in every heart and home of the city.—Sacramento Paper.

He spent his boyhood days in Tecumseh, was a graduate of our high school when it was a branch of the University under the management of Prof. Harvey. After teaching a few years he entered the University as a sophmore. A brother of E. Tindall, our townsman, by whom he was helped in his starting for an education, and was left an orphan at nine and a half years of age.

THE MICHIGAN FARMER.

Why Michigan Farmers Should Take It.

It is the recognized State agricultural organ. It contains matter written by educated successful agriculturists, who are practical farmers, live stock breeders, horticulturists and dairymen of this State. It gives all the agricultural, live stock, dairy and horticultural news of this State. It publishes full and reliable markets from all important points where Michigan farmers sell their products. It reaches every post-office in the State within twelve hours after it is printed. Its editors and correspondents are Michigan men, thoroughly in earnest in their desire to advance, protect and improve the agricultural interests of this State. It is filled with original paid for matter written expressly for it. It is first-class in every particular, its publishers sparing no expense to make it the equal of any paper of America. It admits no immoral, snide or swindling advertisements. It is a weekly of 52 issues a year—64 columns in each issue—and is furnished at the lowest possible price that such a paper can be published at, and last and greatest—Because it is many times more valuable and instructive to the agriculturists of Michigan than any agricultural paper published outside of the State can be.

The Bay View Reading Circle.

One year ago the new Bay View Reading Circle was launched. It had a shorter, lower priced and more modern course than the Chautauqua Circle. Instantly it met with popular approval and at the end of five months was in use over much of the country. The new course for 1894-5 is just out, and is said to be even finer than the first. The four books and monthly magazine, which constitute the course, cost only $3, and the three great subjects to be studied—France, Social Reform, and Art, promise to be as useful as they are sure to be enjoyable. A reader of the Bay View Course will at the end of a few years have a useful body of classified knowledge which the desultory reader never has. J. M. Hall, Flint, Michigan, is the person to address for circulars of information.

Queer, Isn't It?

BY HATTIE HORNER LUTHAM.

["The saloon burns up $23,000,000 of our national resources every week—and yet we are excited over a few forest fires."—Editorial note in The Voice.]

Lo, a Northern forest burns,
And the startled nation turns,
Views with wonder and with fear
Desolation far and near;
Sees the homeless people flee,
Counts the loss of property,
Shudders at the ruin rife,
Sad bewails the loss of life,
Then toward the stricken land
Stretches prompt and helpless hand.

There's a wilder, hotter fire,
Sweeping farther, leaping higher,
Round the nation, through the land,
Each saloon a burning brand.
Loss of life there is, and bane;
Women, children, hopeless roam;
Lo! there follow in the glare,
Ruin, madness, grim dispair.
She may count, if loss she seek,
Twenty millions every week!
But the nation only sighs,
Folds her hands and shuts her eyes!

CHICAGO, ILL.

A Supreme Issue.

One issue is still supreme in American politics: Shall this Government continue to be run by the ginmills? Look for reform in whatever direction we may, this issue confronts us. Citizens' movements, good government clubs, the reorganization of political parties, with the saloon left in, are all powerless to effect any permanent or radical reform. Like the lions in the pathway of Christian, the saloon bars the way to honest government—and the saloon is unchained!

Do honest democrats and republicans desire the election of good men to office? The saloon, with its hold on the democratic and republican caucuses, dictates the nomination of the men who are "safe" from the saloon point of view, and such men are rarely if ever safe from the point of view of the honest citizen. Do the people in non-partisan elections unite to overthrow ring rule? They find the center of "ring" power, with its source in the ginmill, and the ginmill protected by the politicians of both the leading parties. Do the good government clubs seek for an available candidate to represent the mass of hard working citizens and tax-payers? They find that "availability," so far as it implies the securing of any great percentage of the vote of either old party, means a candidate that will not disturb the ginmill in its defiance of the law. Do men seek through the slow medium of public education the elevation of the masses? They find the ginmill keeper and the brewer on guard. And if he cannot succeed through the politicians in keeping the school accommodations far below the demand, with saloon accommodations far above it, he sees to it that teachers and superintendents are secured who will be "easy" on the liquor business. The neglect to teach in any adequate way the effects of alcohol upon the human system, as required by law in most of the states, is due to the presence and power of the ginmill in "school politics."

The saloon has America by the throat to-day, and the saloon is determined to keep its grip. Does brave Bishop Watterson send forth his discriminating regulations against Catholic rumsellers and Monsignor Satolli sustain him? The defiant ginmill threatens till an explanation is secured that the Catholic Church doesn't intend to harm the rum traffic. Does a sturdy presidential candidate refuse to lick the boots of rumsellers in his letter of acceptance? The power of the ginmill is evoked to teach him a lesson, and whipped Grover Cleveland crawls, cur-like, in the dirt to accept from Washington Hesing an "anti-sumptuary" declaration for his second letter, on the strength of which he wins the Presidency.

To-day, if politicians wish to win, what power do they court? Is it the hard-working farmer? Is it the moral churchman? Is it the keensighted business man? Is it the laborer who toils for wages? No; the power which makes and unmakes the fortunes of political candidates is none of these. If the politician wants to win, he goes to the saloon-keeper, the poisoner-general, the corrupter of youth, the destroyer of manhood, the despoiler of womanhood, the man whose victims will take the crust and the last drop of blood from their loved ones to fill the till of the ginmill. This is the malevolent genius who determines the destiny of American states and makes and unmakes American policies.

And this malevolent genius holds sway over the destinies of the greatest nation on earth, because good men, like Dr. MacArthur and Dr. James M. King, are content to cast their votes for Rumseller Levi P. Morton upon a platform which saloon-keepers helped to frame, and other good men, like Abram S. Hewitt, are content to vote for "whiskey's Governor."

People possessed of sign lore predict a hard cold winter. The goose bone is white, corn husks are of extra thickness and the maize has put on an extra overcoat to protect itself from the cold blasts to come. Woodchucks and chipmunks are buiging out with fatness and their fur is dense, fine and soft. Last but not least these observers have noticed that the price of coal is advancing, which clinches the argument.

"There is a striking contrast between the way in which religious work is done in England and America," says a writer in a recent number of the Outlook, and he might have added with equal truth, that there is a striking contrast in the way in which the work is done in the same country at different periods. New resourses and inventions should contribute to religious knowledge and instruction as well as to arts, sciences and business. That this should be so, was fully demonstrated by the large congregation that listened so attentively to Rev. Chas. M. Brown during his illustrated sermon on the Life of Christ last Sunday evening. The illustrations were fine and no one who was present could fail to have a better understanding of the country made sacred by the ministry of Christ, and that knowledge must contribute to a better understanding of his character. The stereopticon is used in the larger churches in all cities as a means of religious instruction, and Mr. Brown's successful efforts were thoroughly appreciated by all who heard him last Sunday evening.

The Republicans fired the first gun of the campaign on their side last Monday evening when Hon. James O'Donnell, of Jackson, addressed a good audience at Sutton's opera house. The city band gave some of their best selections with which to open the meeting. Dr. George Howell presided, and introduced the speaker in a few happy remarks. Messrs. Lucius Lilley, D. T. Hall, H. C. Conkling and Thos. Elliott occupied seats on the rostrum. Mr. O'Donnell gave a good speech from a Republican partisan standpoint, which seemed to give satisfaction to his party friends. It was not a speech, however, that was calculated to make converts, nor one which did justice to the speaker himself. He spoke with that partisan feeling and disregard of historical facts, and with appeals to a dead past, which mark the lawyer who knows he is on the wrong side of a lawsuit. However, he made some good points and it is not our province to criticize him. We believe in the fullest liberty in political discussion. Let the facts on all sides be fully presented and then the voters can decide intelligently as to how their votes shall be cast.

Henry L. Harrison, of Saginaw, Deputy Supreme Chief Ranger of Foresters, is in town endeavoring to form a court here. He is much pleased with the prospect and expects very soon to have one formed. While it is a fraternal society and a beneficiary one it differs from most others, as there are no death assessments. You pay monthly and do not have to die to win as it is on the endowment plan, and has $1,000,000 reserve fund. Mr. H. is a very genial man and a good talker.

Miss Agnes Woodward and friend Miss Agnes Dunlop of Hamilton, Ont. are visiting the former's parents, Doctor and Mrs. C. M. Woodward. They will remain over this week. Miss Dunlop is a singer of marked ability. Her voice is a rich contralto, pure in tone, of great volume and range. Her manner is very pleasing, enunciation clear and distinct and her work is given fine expression. She rendered a fine solo at St. Peter's church last Sunday morning very artistically.

The leading article in The Forum for November will be "The Political Career and Character of David B. Hill," by an annonymous writer, who will attempt to make an independent measure of Senator Hill's position and influence in national politics. In the same number, Ex-Senator Edmunds will discuss the question of the popular election of United States Senators—a noteworthy article from perhaps our highest constitutional authority, and a man who has himself had long Senatorial experience.

A book attacting a subject that has never before in the history of this this country been more vital and immediate and insistent, is Wealth against Commonwealth, by Henry Demarest Lloyd (Harper's.) It is the most complete history in existence of the great combination of brains and capital which still remains the type and model of all trusts or monopolies. Mr. Lloyd has traced the growth of this institution from its origin, in the sagacity of one or a few business men of Cleveland, to its vast proportions now, when it controls the oil markets and trade of a continent, and is perhaps the most influencial power in America. The methods and practices by which all corporate privileges have been grasped, all corporate responsibilities have been successfully defied, form an absorbing romance of the business world.

GOES BACK ON HIS BARGAIN.

W. D. Trombley, Who Sold His Birthright, Desires to Back Out.

DETROIT, Oct. 13.—William D. Trombley, one of the heirs of Charles B. Chauvin, who sold his birthright to John H. Seitz, now desires to back out of his bargain and has commenced suit in the Wayne circuit court to have set aside the deed to one-half of his uncle's estate given to Mr. Seitz. E. W. Pendleton appears as Trombley's attorney. Ira W. and C. C. Buell, of Chicago, attorneys for Barnaby Trombley, are interested with Mr. Pendleton in the conduct of the case. Trombley estimates his share of the estate at $80,000. Then the story of Mr. Seitz's purchase of the prospective inheritance is given in detail. Seitz, so Trombley claims in the bill, offered in 1890 $2,000 for the conveyance of one-third part of the prospective inheritance. The offer was accepted and the deed was made out and signed. Trombley claims that Seitz represented that the property was of no greater value than it was when Trombley left Grosse Pointe years before. Trombley received $900 down to bind the bargain, and has received only $300 since. Trombley seeks to excuse his action in selling his inheritance so cheaply by pleading ignorance. He claims to be illiterate, and to read and write with difficulty. Trombley relates the circumstances of the second meeting when Seitz offered $20,000 for a deed to a full half interest in the estate. Trombley accepted that offer. Three $5,000 notes and one for $4,000 were by given Mr. Seitz to Trombley, and the mortgage given to secure them was on the estate sold, so only $1,000 passed.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 15.—The coroner's jury at the inquest regarding the murder of Charles Chauvin, the Grosse Point hermit, did not succeed in solving the mystery of his death. The verdict was that he died at the hands of an unknown person.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Oct. 14.—It is established beyond a doubt that Frank Trombley, who lives with a depraved woman on a houseboat at the foot of Walnut street, in this city, is a nephew of Charles Chauvin, the wealthy hermit, who was murdered at Grosse point or Hog island, near Detroit, a short time ago. Trombley gives an account of his family, and there is little doubt that his statements are correct. He says that his mother was a sister of the murdered man, and was in fact owner of half the estate.

PLOTTERS CAPTURED.

A. R. U. Men Arrested for Causing a Fatal Wreck.

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—Four members of the American Railway union have been arrested by Mooney & Boland's railway detectives on warrants charging them with murder, train robbery and conspiracy to rob trains. The principal charge against them relates to the wrecking of train No. 6, the Atlantic express on the Chicago & Grand Trunk road at Battle Creek, Mich., July 16, when the fireman, Thomas W. Crowe, was killed and nearly a score of persons more or less seriously injured. The wreck was caused by the removal of a fishplate, thus loosening a rail and ditching the train. The men are Stanley J. Knowles, John Bodewig, George W. Johnson and Ernest Jewett.

All of these men had been in the employ of the Chicago & Grand Trunk road. The wreck occurred at 3 o'clock on the morning of July 46, when the great railroad strike was practically lost. The Grand Trunk's trains had been tied up near Battle Creek for several days, but had resumed business a few days before. American Railway union meetings were being held every day in Battle Creek and incendiary speeches were the rule rather than the exception.

Knowles and Bodewig in their confessions say all the men interested were members of the American Railway union and that the plan of wrecking the train was made in and about the meetings held by the men in the midst of the excitement incident to the strike. The men claim they were induced to do the deed by the incendiary speeches made at the meetings.

Fusion in Michigan.

GRAND RAPIDS, Oct. 12.—The democratic state central committee met here Thursday and decided to put the name of Perry Mayo, of Calhoun county, on the state ticket for lieutenant governor to succeed J. Milton Jordan, declined. Mayo is the populist candidate for the same office. The committee accepted the resignations of C. C. Casterlin, of Mason, and Samuel Robinson, of Charlotte, and elected James J. Fahey, of Marshall, and Frank G. Rounsville, of Fowlersville, to the vacancies.

Electric Railroad Will Be Built.

MONROE, Oct. 13.—The Toledo, Monroe & Detroit Electric railway is an assured fact. President Clarke, of Toledo, who has been in the east negotiating bonds, telegraphs that money has been secured and work will be commenced at once all along the line. The company will also put in a street railway here. The road will be both a passenger and freight carrier.

Michigan Stock Fed on Wheat.

LANSING, Oct. 13.—Reports made by several hundred correspondents from as many sections of the state show that 18 per cent., or one-fifth, of the wheat crop of Michigan is being fed to stock. Most of this is now being fed to hogs. Later it will be fed more extensively to other stock and the percentage will materially increase.

Michigan Crops.

LANSING, Oct. 13.—The Michigan crop report for October estimates the total wheat crop of 1894 at 21,637,649 bushels with an average yield per acre of 16.79 bushels. Oats are expected to yield 28¼, barley 18¾ and corn 40 bushels ears per acre. Of wheat 1,523,271 bushels are reported marketed in September.

How to Avoid Farm Work in Summer

It never gets so hot in the South as it does in the North. There are more sunstrokes in the South. The hotter the weather the harder the Northern farmer has to work to save his crops, while down South the farmers do little farm work during the Fall, Winter and Spring, when the weather is cool, and during the Summer they take it easy. It is always cool in the shade down South, and the nights are always cool. The thermometer seldom gets above 90. The hottest day during the past ten years was 97 degrees.

You can grow one crop during the Winter, another during the Spring, and another during the Fall on the same land each year. You will net more money from each one of these crops than you can make from a similar crop in the North. You can get a home cheaper. It will cost you less to live. You can make more money. You will have better health, live longer, and enjoy life better in the South than in the North. A beautiful pamphlet telling all about it sent free to all applicants. Go South now and investigate. Diamond Crystal Dairy Salt.

No matter what brand you have used, just give this a fair trial. It is first in flavor, first in grain, and first in purity. Whether for dairy or table use, you will find it to your advantage to be acquainted with the salt that's all salt.

The Woman. "I'll be ready in just one second, dear."

The Husband. "Then I'll have time to run down town and get shaved before we start, love"

NOW AN ASSURED THING.

The much-talked-of Toledo, Monroe & Detroit electric railroad now seems to be an assured thing. Late last evening City Attorney Golden received a message from Dr. Gardner, of Toledo, president of the company, and who has been in the east for some time furthering the interests of the project, with a view to placing the bonds of the company, saying that the money necessary to build and equip the road has been secured, and that the work of construction will begin this fall. Besides the road running north and south of Monroe to Toledo and Detroit, the company will build lines in the city boundary at the west of the piers, thus opening up and facilitating travel to the popular resort. The company already has a franchise granting the use of certain streets for their line. They will build and open for public use a handsome steel bridge over the river Raisin. The citizens are elated to know that the enterprise is at last an assured thing.

All this and more, can be cured by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a purely vegetable compound, which restores the action of the liver, gives tone to the flagging energies of the dyspeptic's stomach, and thus enables "good digestion to wait on appetite, and health on both." MONOPOLY SLAVERY.

The New York Sun states that the annual income of John D. Rockefeller is $20,000,000. This requires the constant labor of 54,794 laborers at $1 per day. Surely this control of labor by the control of money is more profitable than to own the laborers as chattel slaves. The wealthiest slave-holder of the South never dreamed of being able to hold 50,000 slaves under the system of unrestricted chattel slavery. But under our present system of debt and wage slavery it is not unusual. It requires the labor of one man six days at $1 per day to furnish John D. Rockefeller his income for one second. And Rockefeller is but one of thousands of monopolistic masters of greater or smaller dimensions. Is it strange that the slaves are not satisfied?

Men are not usually to blame for taking advantage of circumstances or conditions, and it is not against such men that reform measures are directed. It is against the laws which make such conditions. Good men often make the mistake of assuming that these demands are aimed at the millionaires personally. It is not true. It is directed against that system of national economy which makes these millionaires. Mr. Rockefeller is here; by some means he has amassed a large fortune. Under the law it is his. These reform measures do not propose either to hang him or take away his property. But the people don't want any more of his kind, nor will they permit him to use this immense lever to enslave his neighbors. It is proposed to wipe out a system that will bring about such results. Who will gainsay that doctrine?—The Watchman.

The Development of the South,

is being furthered by the Queen and Crescent Route by means of a special series of Monthly Excursions to southern points at One Fare for Round Trip. These rates are in effect from Cincinnati, O., Louisville and Lexington, Ky., June 5th, July 5th, Aug. 7th, Sept. 4th, October 2d, November 6th and December 4th: good twenty days from date of sale for return. They are sold on these dates to all points in Kentucky, Tennesse, Alabama, Mississippi, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida (except Key West), and to New Orleans, and all points on our line in Louisiana. The Q. & C. has over a million acres of farms and timber land for sale along its line at $3.00 to $8.00 per acre.

Stop-overs are permitted on these excursions at any point South of the Ohio River, within the final limit of the tickets. This offers an excellent opportunity to those who desire to go South to look into the great movement of Northern farmers to that section.

Send us your name for advertising matter and any information you may want as to lands and immigration to the South.

Carlyle says: "The great man shapes the age." Herbert Spencer says: "The age shapes the great man." Probably both are right and both are wrong. A great man is the product of past influences acting by means of heredity, which give the peculiar organism which operated on by present conditions, results in the development of the peculiar cast of character referred to.

Three Leading Scientists
Proclaim the Superior Value of
Dr. Price's Baking Powder.

Scientists are devoting closer attention to food products. Recent examinations of baking powders by Prof. Long, Dr. Haines, and Prof. Prescott, were made to determine which powder was the purest, highest in leavening strength, most efficient in service, and most economical in cost. They decide that Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder excels in all the essentials of an ideal preparation for household use. They write:—

"Chicago, March 28th, 1894.

We have purchased in the open market cans of Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder and also of the other leading brands of baking powders, and have submitted them to chemical analysis. We find that Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder is a pure cream of tartar powder, that it has a considerably greater leavening strength than any of the other baking powders we have ever tested.

Their son, Jerome, of Lansing, and daughter, Mrs. Helen Hatch, and husband, of Battle Creek, were in attendance. Jerome Travis gave an historical speech of their lives and then, in behalf of the company, presented each one with a purse containing six dollars in gold. SYMPTOMS OF CHRONIC CATARRH

As Described by Dr. Hartman, one of the Greatest Authorities and Writers on Catarrh

The symptoms of chronic catarrh vary according to the stage and exact location of the disease. The first stage of catarrh of the nose and head produces discharge from the nose, sneezing, pain in the eyes and forehead, weak, and sometimes watery eyes, occasionally loss of memory. In the last stage the discharge ceases, and dry, offensive scabs form in the nose; polpi growths sometimes form in one or both nostrils, and the pain in the head and eyes is much less. Unless something is done to prevent, the catarrh will follow the mucous membrane into the lungs, where it will be followed by cough, night sweats, rapid loss of flesh, and the other dread symptoms of consumption.

Pe-ru-na is a specific for every case of catarrh, whether the disease is located in the lungs, kidneys or stomach. The dose of Pe-ru-na should be a large tablespoonful before each meal and at bedtime. Women and some delicate men should begin with a teaspoonful, and slowly and gradually increase to the above full dose.

Free books on chronic catarrh, la grippe, coughs, colds and consumption are being sent to any address by The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company of Columbus, Ohio.

Powell's Pocket Rate Book

is the title of a new work just issued which is destined to find a place on the desk of every general advertiser in the country. It will also prove of inestimable value to business men generally who wish to study the subject of advertising and learn something of its cost.

Powell's Pocket Rate Book is the only one of its kind ever published. It tells you at a glance, so to speak, how much it will cost to advertise in any of the leading magazines in New York, Boston, Chicago or other cities, as well as the principal dailies and weeklies throughout America.

Nearly one-fourth of the entire 200 pages is devoted to New York City publications, for here it is that the great national publications are mostly issued, including such as Harpers, Scribners, Cosmopolitan, and others of this class.

The low price for which the book is sold, 50c a copy in flexible silk cloth binding, brings it within reach of every business man in the land. Published by G. H. Powell, Springfield, Mass.

A Piano at a Nominal Price.

Chicago's largest music house, Lyon & Healy, has moved into a magnificent new building. They have a number of slightly used and second-hand pianos returned from World's Fair renting, etc., etc., which they have determined to sacrifice rather than to try to make room for. These instruments comprise Square pianos at $40, $65, $100 and $125. Upright pianos at $125, $140, $150, $165, $190, $200, $225, $240 and upward. Grand pianos at $200, $250, $300 and upwards. Nearly all originally sold for from two to four times their present price. Almost all prominent makes (in squares and uprights) are represented, including among numerous others Chickering, Knabe, Steinway, Weber, Decker, Steck, Fisher, etc. This is an opportunity that will not occur again, as Lyon & Healy have not moved for twenty years. Immediate attention is therefore necessary. A good plan will be to order a piano, leaving the selections to Lyon & Healy. However they will send a list and full particulars on application. Any piano not proving satisfactory may be returned at their expense. Address at their new salesrooms, corner Wabash Avenue and Adams street, Chicago. Distance is no obstacle in taking advantage of this remarkable chance to obtain a piano, for in proportion to the saving to be made the freight charges are insignificant. If you do not already know them by reputation any banker will assure of Lyon & Healy's entire responsibility and record of over a third of a century for honorable dealing. Write to-day so as to avoid disappointment.

Ann Arbor Sets the Mark.

Reports from Ann Arbor indicate that the attendance this year at the University of Michigan will exceed 3,000, surpassing all previous records for that institution and again setting the mark for all American colleges. That distinction belonged to Michigan two years ago; but last year Harvard passed its western rival by several hundreds. The race has been for half a score of years between these two institutions, and western people have watched with growing interest the noble part played by the western university.

A large attendance is not of course a final test of merit in an institution of learning, but it is not without significance, either. Our people like success and all the signs of success, just as they shiver in the atmosphere of failure. An increased roster at a university is a token of increased confidence on the part of the people in its value. The people do not send their children for enlightment to a waning light.

But better still is the indication that the higher education is a growing force in the west, and year by year takes stronger hold of the people. Not only Michigan, but nearly all the western colleges and universities open their doors this fall to an increased clientage and begin the year with larger hopes and aspirations. It is impossible that such a seeding should fail of an abundant and welcome harvest in the years to come.—Chicago Record.

There is nothing essentially shocking in the idea of sending Buddhist missionaries from India or Japan to this country. Buddhism is at least as good as Ingersollism.

TECUMSEH, MICH., OCT. 25, 1894.

Col. Breckinridge says that he "knows not what the future has in store" for him. Nobody will question this statement.

How would it do for Mr. Morton to make his opening speech in Bungville? Bungville would do very well for a starter.

Senator Hill possesses the ability to go to the people and give reasons for his election. Is such ability to be so easily bowled down by a barrel?

Congressman Wm. L. Wilson is making a rattling campaign in West Virginia and he is likely to be re-elected by the largest majority he ever received.

At the recent election in Georgia a legislature was chosen consisting of 219 members. Of these 166 are Democrats, 50 Populists, and 3 Republicans. That shows how politics run down South.

John Sherman advises the farmers of Ohio to turn their attention to corn. John was ever a thoughtful man about the farmers, and corn is known to be good; but what is the matter with rye as a source of consolation?

Secretary Carlisle may be prevented from making Hill speeches in New York, but a prosecution of Levi P. Morton for the importation of an English coachman will make more Hill votes than the most eloquent and exhaustive analysis of the tariff question.

The New York World says the Massachusetts Democrats read a lesson to their New York brethren in frankly and squarely indorsing the income tax. "A return to correct theories of taxation," the Bay State Convention stamped this popular measure. So it is. And it is thoroughly and righteously a Democratic return.

The tariff reform movement in Argentina has been stimulated by the action of the United States, and the Congress has now under consideration a bill making a general reduction in customs duties. The people of Argentina have found out that the tariff is a tax and they can see no advantage in paying higher prices for the benefit of the few.

The Boston Herald says: Opposition to the income tax is in a bad way indeed. Here is the Republican Convention of Massachusetts without a word to say against it, and the Democratic Convention of the same State declaring in its favor. Those who think that a wrong step was taken when it was passed must oppose it individually if they oppose it at all. There is no organization in the whole broad land that will aid them to such an end.

In his letter of acceptance Mr. Morton says in one place that he is hopeful in favor of "an acceptable excise law," and in another place he calls for "an excise law that will promote temperance." And there you are! If asked to define "an acceptable excise law," he would say that it is a law "that will promote temperance." And if asked what kind of law "will promote temperance," he would say, "why, an acceptable excise law." See?

The Republican candidate for Governor of New York has displayed very poor political foresight in attempting to import his English coachman before election. A plain every-day colored coachman will be all Mr. Morton will require if he isn't elected, and if he is he might have hired an English coachman who had imported himself. In his bungling attempt he has failed to secure his imported coachman, and if he should fail of an election he will probably find that the coachman episode has contributed to the result.

No wonder Debs was against Pullman and the railroads. All other labor leaders, it appears, travel on free passes; but Debs, for some reason, never got any. That was enough to convince him of the heartlessness of corporations. Vice President Howard, of the Railroad Union, owns up to annual passes on forty railroads, with a Pullman sleeping car pass besides. It would be interesting under these circumstances to know what Mr. Howard charges his traveling expenses up to the Union. That is one of the great advantages of official position. You get a free pass and charge mileage. And still the tax-payers and the members of the Union are not happy.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, Oct. 19, 1894.

Should a rumor persistently circulated in Washington this week prove to have a substantial foundation the greatest political sensation of recent years will in the near future be eclipsed. Its improbability has not prevented lots of people believing that there was something in it. The story, different in detail when told by different people, is substantially that President Cleveland has fully made up his mind to again be a presidential candidate and that he will make a strong bid for southern and western support by coming out squarely, either in his regular annual message to Congress or a special message a little later in the session, in favor of the free and unlimited coinage of silver. It is pointed out by those who would like it that such action on the part of Mr. Cleveland would not offend as many members of his party as his unexpected and sensational tariff message did in 1887, and that it would gain him many more votes in the west than it would lose in the east, and that it might easily be made to appear consistent with his previous utterances on the subject by prefacing it with the statement that America had waited until patience had ceased to be a virtue for the cooperation of European governments in an international agreement for the coinage of silver, and that he believed the time was at hand when America should declare its financial independence by adopting free coinage. It is pointed out by those who are half inclined to accept the rumor as true that close friends of Mr. Cleveland have upon several occasions recently publicly stated that silver had no better friend than Mr. Cleveland. They are disposed to regard these statements as indicating some future action on the part of Mr. Cleveland to prove his friendship for the white metal. A long experience in Washington has convinced your correspondent that consistency never plays any very important part in influencing the acts of a politician. Still, nothing but the sending of the message would convince him that President Cleveland will ever advocate the free and unlimited coinage of silver, although it is altogether probable that he may write something that, from his point of view that will be friendly to silver before the close of the coming session of Congress.

If it be fair to judge from the talk of the politicians who come to Washington, sugar is very much mixed up in politics this year. The statement recently made on the stump by the Vice President, that the sugar trust was about to break up and that the price of sugar would be lower instead of higher on account of the new tariff, was astonishing, even to Mr. Stevenson's party associates. It had been generally conceded, on account of testimony taken by the Senate investigating committee and of statements made by business men to the Finance committee when the sugar schedule of the tariff bill was pending, that the duty imposed on sugar would raise the price from one to two cents a pound, and if Vice President Stevenson can prove to the contrary he should lose no time in doing so, as such proof would be very valuable to his party in the closing days of the campaign. The sugar trust, according to the best obtainable information, was never more alive nor more powerful than now. A New York merchant who belongs to Mr. Stevenson's party was in Washington this week and while discussing this subject he offered to wager five to one, any amount from one to fifty thousand dollars, that the wholesale price of sugar would be two cents a pound more on the first of December than it is now, but there were no takers; his heart is either being of the same opinion or opposed to betting.

Much surprise and more regret has been expressed at the announcement that the army officers now serving as Indian agents are to be returned to their commands and the old system of appointing civilians to be Indian agents resumed. Secretary Lamont gives as the reason for the change that the army needs the services of all its officers. It is well known that army officers have never sought to be detailed as Indian agents; on the contrary, they have looked it as a very undesirable berth, but once detailed they have faithfully and honestly performed the duties. The proposed change is regarded as a step backward by the government in its dealing with the Indians. And recalls many of the scandals which were so plentiful when Indian agencies were regarded as part of the political spoils to be distributed after every Presidential election, and when unscrupulous men sought the position of Indian agent for the purpose of getting rich at the expense of the Indians. If the old system is to be revived it is too much to expect that the scandals will not also be revived. No scandal has been attached to any Indian agency in charge of an army officer.

The St. Louis Republican states the situation thus: "In New York the campaign is knitting together all elements of the true Democracy; and as the true Democracy there has a natural majority of 40,000, Senator Hill's prospects are decidedly better than Contract Labor Levi's. But whatever the New York Democrats do or leave undone, Western and Southern Democrats will not have a tremor every time New York gets frightened. If our New York friends win, we shall be glad. If they lose, it is their loss. For in 1896 we are to have a Western man or bust."

Are These Conditions Just?

The following are a few samples of incomes of American millionaires: William Waldorf Astor's daily income is $83,877,; J. D. Rockefeller's $20,833, Cornelius Vanderbilt's $11,000, W. K. Vanderbilt's $10,397, and Gould's $11,008.

Whence comes the money to pay this enormous tribute? In the last analysis it comes from the men whose toil produces all wealth—the wage-earners whose daily wage, and they work from morn till night, is something like $1.

Is it strange that the rich grow richer and that in the ratio they ascend the scale of accumulated wealth the other side, the real wealth producers, drop to the point of bare existence?

The same unjust conditions which make the pauper create the millionaire. Those conditions may be comprehended in one simple phrase—the control by the few of the natural opportunities which belong equally to all.

The supreme duty of the hour is the restoration to the people of their God-given rights and the taking from those who now possess them of all special privileges. Every other question now before the people pales into insignificance in comparison with this, and until this is accomplished the present evils will only increase in intensity; the incomes of the millionaires will mount higher and higher, the wages of the producers will drop to the starvation point, and that means involuntary servitude. This work should begin with financial reform.—National Watchman.

Must Have It.

Yes, you must have it. It is the only way you can learn what is going on about you; the news of the city, village or farming district in which you live. You must have your home paper, whether you can afford anything else in the way of current reading or not. And a great deal besides home news you will find in it. The editor of your home paper aims first of all to give you the home news, with intelligent and helpful comment thereon. But he does not stop there; he does the best he can to give you the general news and the best thought of the whole world. Of course he does not and cannot give you as much as you ought to have, and if you ask him about the matter he will frankly tell you so. He will also advise you what you ought to get to supplement your home paper and keep you and your growing boys and girls up with the times in the great fields of politics, sociology, finance, commerce, science, religion, art, education, and the literary and book news of the day. He will tell you that there is one weekly journal, unique in this respect, made up of carefully selected, condensed and classified extracts from the newspapers and magazines the world over, and that he has made special arrangements by which he can give you a reduced subscription rate for this unique journal, if taken in connection with the HERALD. He will tell you that the name of this journal so admirably suited to your wants is PUBLIC OPINION, that it is published at Washington, D. C., and that the regular subscription price is $2.50 per year, but that he can give you both the HERALD and PUBLIC OPINION for one year for $3.00. He will also tell you that PUBLIC OPINION and the HERALD are exactly what you need during the political campaign. PUBLIC OPINION will be sent you for ten weeks on trial for fifty cents.

TO PUT ON needed flesh, no matter how you've lost it, take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It works wonders. By restoring the normal action of the deranged organs and functions, it builds the flesh up to a safe and healthy standard—promptly, pleasantly and naturally. The weak, emaciated, thin, pale and puny are made strong, plump, round and rosy. Nothing so effective as a strength restorer and flesh maker is known to medical science; this puts on healthy flesh and not fat of cod liver oil and its filthy compounds. It rouses every organ of the body to activity, purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood so that the body feels refreshed and strengthened. If you are too thin, too weak, too nervous, it may be that the food assimilation is at fault. A certain amount of bile is necessary for the reception of the fat foods in the blood. Too often the liver holds back this element which would help digestion. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery stimulates, tones up and invigorates the liver, nourishes the blood, and the muscles, stomach and nerves get the rich blood they require.

I paid a doctor on Tremont St., Boston, in one day (for his advice only,) the sum of $10.00 with $5.00 for medicine, and derived no benefit. A LIE NAILED.

Spencer O. Fisher's Strong Speech at Bay City.

Republican Extravagance Disclosed, Democratic Principles Clearly Defined and His Own Position Before the People Declared—Truths Frankly Put.

At an immense mass meeting at Bay City recently Hon. Spencer O. Fisher, democratic candidate for governor, was most enthusiastically received by the great audience. Mr. Fisher made a very strong speech, the most striking and important portions being given below. In opening the speaker referred to "the attack, the treachery, the intriguing of designing men, masquerading wolves in sheep's clothing within the democratic party," and said:

"I feel that I should make a statement at this time and I am glad to speak here in my home—the cities of my adoption—where I am so well known, of an attack that has just been made upon me by Hon. Timothy Tarsney, of Detroit, Mich. This, as you all know, is but the result of the sting of a defeated rival in the contest which secured for our city the United States court and government building. I feel as if you will believe what I say without going into great detail, that the statements made by him are false in some particulars and distorted in others. I belong to no secret society—political or other—and have no affiliation or sympathy with any, and have had no conference at any time or at any place with any members thereof. I am not the candidate of any secret organization, church or faction, and have made no 'bid' for their support. I resent the charge or imputation, by whomsoever made, that connects me with any faction or any controversy of a sectarian or religious nature. At the Grand Rapids convention I was pledged the support of a united democracy and stand only as the candidate of the entire democracy. If I were elected to the high office of governor of this state I should be the servant of the whole people and not of any faction, church or society.

"My life is an open book, to be investigated, and I challenge the fullest and freest investigation of the same in relation to the charges made by Hon. Timothy E. Tarsney. • • • The charge that I was in conference at the Normandie hotel in Detroit with Messrs. Traynor and Beattie, or either of them, is unqualifiedly false. Many hundreds of my dearest friends in this, the city of my home, give religious fealty and devotion to the Catholic church. I ask every one of them here to give answer to the charge that by the letters referred to I have ever intended to show hostility to those of the Roman Catholic faith. If the people of this state, away from my home, have been deceived by these false charges, I ask them to refer to you, and I ask you to bear me willing witness, as I believe, yes, I know you will."

To substantiate his denial Mr. Fisher stated that he would place a certified check for $10,000 in any man's hands for proof that he held a conference with A. P. A. leaders in the Normandie hotel in Detroit.

"On the tariff question we have been somewhat divided, but as a manufacturer of lumber on Saginaw river I make a statement, without fear of contradiction, that the placing of lumber on the free list was a Godsend to this community. I am in favor of free wool. I am the principal stockholder in between seventeen and eighteen thousand sheep in Colorado. I have been in favor of free wool in season and out of season. Why? Because I think it is for the best interest of the entire country. I am sincere in my opinion, not only that it would enhance the price of wool but that it would start the wheels of the woolen industry in this country. Protection? Protection for what? The laboring man? I believe the time has gone by when the laboring men of this country can be hoodwinked into thinking that protection protects labor.

"But the question that overshadows them all and which affects every business man, and which, in my judgment, I believe to be the greatest question before the country, is that of currency. It is that one which brought about the depression last year. I stand before you to-night pledged to the platform of the Michigan democracy, and in that platform is a plank which they call Fisher's plank. I demanded of the convention that it be placed in the platform, and it reads that we declare in favor of free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of sixteen to one [applause], and I was never more sincere in my life than I am in this silver question."

The speaker then referred to the ruin brought upon the country by the demonetization of silver by Germany, the Latin union and England, and predicted dire results if silver was not placed on the same ratio or footing with gold. He then presented a table showing that with the decrease in the value of silver there had been a corresponding decrease in the value of wheat, cotton and other products. Continuing, he said:

"The Ohio democracy declared in favor of the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1, and I am pleased to see that our candidate for congress is in favor of that measure. That is what the populists are after. They want the dollar of their daddies. That is what Worthy L. Churchill is after, and see to it that he is on your ticket."

Mr. Fisher then made a strong appeal for the election of the democratic senatorial and legislative tickets.

Mr. Fisher then took up the question of direct taxation by the state and compared the state expenses between the two parties. He said that he believed in liberal appropriations to the state institutions, but believed that many abuses exist that should be done away with, and before the end of the campaign he hoped to be able to reveal startling facts concerning this matter. These things would have been different had that sturdy old man, Gov. Winans, been returned to the governor's chair. Gov. Rich, he said, has never written one word to the legislature recommending that the railroads bear their part of the taxation.

Mr. Fisher then put some pertinent questions to the republican party that will take longer than the present campaign to answer. In concluding, he said:

"If I am elected governor of this state, I pledge you that I will work to do away with class legislation; as I believe in equal rights and justice to all. The republican party today is not the party of Lincoln [applause] of Grant and Garfield. The modern republican party to-day is the party of monopolists, of trusts and corporations. Lincoln's prophecy was that if the republican party kept on in its career that corporations would be enthroned and an era of corruption would follow, and the money power would prolong its reign. I make the same prediction. If the people do not rise in their might, if silver is not made as good as gold, we will see the words of Lincoln carried into effect."

Mr. Fisher read an extract of the letter written by ex-Gov. Blair to the effect that "the railway people were active for Gov. Rich, and this ought to ruin him."

In closing Mr. Fisher referred to the words of Grover Cleveland: "Equal rights for all and favors for none."

Here's Democratic Prosperity.

Plenty of work and good wages is now the rule in the upper peninsula. The legislative work of democracy is bearing fruit.

AFRAID TO FIGHT SQUARELY.

Republicans Striving to Cover Up and Confuse the Real Points at Issue.

In the congressional contest in this state the issues, of course, are national ones, as they are in all the states. It is eminently proper that candidates for congress should discuss these issues, and that they should be required to tell those whom they seek to serve plainly and unequivocally what their attitude is in respect to tariff legislation, to finance and all other subjects likely to come before congress. There is a disposition, however, on the part of the republican leaders in this state to have the battle for state officials waged on the same plane. They hope in that way to confuse the people and distract their attention from the real questions which underlie the state contest. Such confusion and distraction must not be permitted. The republican party, its orators and organs must be kept confronted all the time with the true issue involved in the state election—the issue which they themselves have raised by two years' maladministration of the state government. The history of that period is a history of extravagance, rapacity and criminal misgovernment. The money of the taxpayers has been ruthlessly and needlessly squandered; and a considerable portion of it has apparently gone to line the pockets of state officials whose bills for "expenses" are simply outrageous. Through the willful neglect, moreover, of the head of the state government a gigantic fraud has been perpetrated on the people of Michigan, and the perpetrators are still unwhipped of justice. The alleged criminals were kicked out of office not so much because of their assumed guilt as for the purpose of making places for the governor's friends; and with this accomplished the governor's zeal seems to have appreciably abated. The entire administration of Gov. Rich has been a travesty on good government; and this is really the chief fact to be considered in the state election.

It is not really a political question, except as the republican party in the state has made it so. By renominating Gov. Rich and indorsing his administration the party has taken upon itself the responsibility for all the extravagance and wrong which have disgraced the state for the past two years. Only by driving the governor and his "gang" from office can the good name of the state be restored and assurance given the taxpayers that their affairs will be managed in a business-like manner, and not for selfish personal or partisan ends. There will be no mistake made in choosing Spencer O. Fisher to succeed Gov. Rich.—Detroit Free Press.

PROSPERITY IN MICHIGAN.

Times Better Than Ever in Spite of the Republican Croaker.

"The northern two-thirds of western Michigan," writes Mr. Weston, ex-mayor of Grand Rapids, "is generally a hard wood region, less than one-tenth of it being under cultivation." The timber pays for clearing, and in favorable years the farmers generally get from one hundred to five hundred dollars per acre for their crops. It was claimed that a free lumber schedule would paralyze this industry, but the fact is there are more men lumbering in that section now than ever before, and the value of the forestry output is greater. Twenty years ago the west shore, from Grand Haven north, furnished Chicago with most of its pine lumber. It was about the only commodity the region then shipped. The mammoth pine mills at Grand Haven, Muskegon and points further north have largely gone out of business, and this has led to the impression that lumber is a declining industry. That's what is being talked on the stump, but it is not true. To-day there are more men working in the forests and mills than ever before, and the volume of the forestry output is greater. Hundreds of small mills have started up all over the state and are running to-day. Instead of getting out pine, however, as they used to, their output is largely hemlock, cedar, oak and hard timber. There are five sawmills running in the state to-day where there was one twenty years ago. They are employing more men and bring five dollars into the state where pine shipments ever brought one dollar.

"Local manufactures are all doing well. They are running full time, but most of them are turning out goods of a cheaper grade than they handled several years ago. At present Manistee and Ludington are producing about eight thousand barrels of salt a day, or more than all other towns in the state combined. This gives employment to an enormous force of coopers and other workmen. Even the fishing industry of our state, which largely supplies the Chicago markets, has prospered greatly during the past season. The big blast furnaces on Spring Lake, near Grand Haven, have laid in a winter stock of iron ore, given contracts for charcoal and will start their fires in a few weeks, after a long shut down. Altogether our section of the state is very prosperous and none of the dismal predictions made before the passage of the Wilson bill applies in our case."

Expenses Compared.

The Lansing Journal gives the following comparative figures of the expenses of the last three sessions of the Michigan legislature, as follows:

Regular session 1889—Republican, 183 days, cost $119,243.03; cost per day, $653.

Regular session, 1891—Democratic, 178 days, cost $141,913.33; cost per day, $799.

Regular session, 1893—Republican, 146 days, cost $148,212.51; cost per day, $1,009.

The expense of the 1893 session is shown to be $119,925.66, but this amount was the sum paid during the fiscal year 1893 for per diem and mileage. There was paid through the board of state auditors for supplies and incidentals, as shown by the report of the auditor general in 1893, $12,713.86, and in 1891, $13,532.42, making the total cost $146,212.51, as above stated. By omitting these items for supplies and incidentals the republican press has made a showing favorable to their party.—Bay City Times.

The location of Arkansas is such as to exempt it from extremes of heat and cold. Its elevations and richness of soils adapt it to the production of a greater variety of crops, fruits and general products used for the sustenance and comfort of man than any other State in the Union. While its salubrious climate, joined with the other combinations mentioned, give to its fruit and food products a peculiarly delightful flavor that can be found nowhere else. It justly boasts of more health-giving springs and better well-water than any other State. Lands are cheap and productive, markets accessible; health good; no blizzards; no drouth; never a failure of crops; good schools, churches and society, and what is also important, a hearty welcome for all. Saved from St. Vitus Dance.

"Our daughter, Blanche, now fifteen years of age, had been terribly afflicted with nervousness, and had lost the entire use of her right arm. Her nervousness and symptoms of St. Vitus dance are entirely gone, she attends school regularly, and has recovered complete use of her arm, her appetite is splendid."

Albion College.

October 23, '94.

The topic of most interest to nearly every sport-loving college student in America during the first half of the fall term is football. Just as spring brings with it base ball and tennis, fall brings its football, and of these three sports football is most distinctively the college, the American college game. The football contests of our great American institutions of learning arouse more interest and more healthy enthusiasm than do any other inter-collegiate sports; and nothing could take the place of the football field as a battle ground upon which the friendly rivalry of two colleges may be settled.

Albion college puts into the field this year probably the strongest team that she has ever had. Early in the season, Mr. Gage, a graduate of Harvard, was secured as coacher, and under his efficient management the team is rapidly developing. After only a week and a half of practice, Albion met her strongest opponent, the U. of M., at Ann Arbor, on October 13th. Although the first game of the season for Albion, she played strong ball and the game was exciting throughout. The University eleven won by a score of 26 to 10.

On Wednesday, October 17th, Albion defeated Battle Creek by a score of 75 to 0.

As yet, there has been but little class strife between the Freshmen and Sophomores. A few days ago the Freshmen appeared in chapel with little pieces of ribbon, of their chosen class colors, sewed on their coat lapels. Securely as the colors were fastened, however, few Freshmen reached home with them safely, and before noon nearly every "Soph" and Junior was wearing some poor Freshman's ribbons.

Dr. Fiske, who has been quite ill during the summer, is rapidly improving in health and is now able to meet his college classes. Dr. Fiske's illness was watched with great anxiety by all interested in Albion College. He has been intimately connected with the college for many years, and during the years of his official relations to it the college has been very prosperous. W. E. B.

OBITUARY.

Rev. J. Oscar Heck was born Nov. 19, 1861, at South Bend, Ind., at which place his early childhood was spent. At the age of eleven his family moved to Flowerfield, Mich., and there, at the age of 17, he gave his heart to Christ, became his follower and was faithful to the end. A few months after his conversion he was baptized by Rev. A. G. Pierce into the fellowship of the Schoolcraft Baptist church. Soon after he changed his membership to the Tecumseh Baptist church. While yet in his youth he suffered from an attack of rheumatism, which was very severe in its character, and reaching the heart, caused chronic disease of that organ. It is probable that at no time in his after life was he free from suffering, to some extent, from this cause, but patiently endured all without murmuring. Knowing the great hinderance which his heart trouble would be to him, and yet feeling the call of the spirit, he determined to give himself to the work of the gospel ministry and to do all he could in the time which the Lord should allow him on earth. He was licensed to preach by the Tecumseh church during the pastorate of Supt. C. E. Conley. He studied for a time at Kalamazoo College and supplied for a part of a year at Port Austin. His first regular pastorate was with the Rome church in the Lenawee county association. By this church he was ordained and served them two years. Called to the pastorate of the church at Milan in the winter of '93, he accepted and served them one year, closing his work Jan. 1, 1894. It was only by great effort that he did the work here, so great was his suffering and the consequent weakness. His last church work was in connection with the council recently held for the ordination of Bro. Frank Fistl thus helping to send one out to take the place he was so soon to vacate in the ranks of Christ's ministry. From Jan., 1894, when he closed his last pastoral work, he made his home with his parents at Tecumseh, active in supplying pulpits as he had opportunity and strength, and in doing other work, until God said: It is enough, come home. Although a light has gone out from his home, heaven is brighter for his departure. During the last few days of his illness his mind dwelt much upon his life work, even in his delirium he would utter fragments of sermons and prayers, and at one time he told his wife: "I preach the gospel of Jesus Christ and urge the people to accept it. That is all I can do, the Holy Spirit must lead them." After preaching a few weeks at Rome, he was united in marriage with Miss Anna Mynn, of Schoolcraft. She, with one child, is left to mourn his going. His death occurred Oct. 3d, 1894. The services of the funeral were held at the church in Tecumseh, Friday afternoon, Oct. 5th. They were conducted by Pastor H. A Smith of Tecumseh, assisted by Pastors Holden of Rome, Stone of Milan, and Whitney of Adrian.

DEATH OF HAMILTON J. DENNIS.

The following obituary tribute is taken from the Topeka Capital of Oct. 13th. The deceased was brought up at Pennington's Corners and went from there to the State University, graduating with high honors. He then studied law and moved to Kansas, where he became a prominent citizen. Many of the older residents of Macon will remember him.

Hamilton J. Dennis died at his home, 919 Tyler street, last evening at 7:30 o'clock. The time of the funeral has not been arranged and will not be until it is ascertained whether the relatives of the deceased can come from the east.

Mr. Dennis has been suffering acutely during the past six weeks from hemorrhage of the brain. The immediate cause of his affliction was the too close application of the deceased to the recent annual report of the state library. That completed, he was apparently satisfied and ready to take the needed rest his friends had been urging upon him for two years, but it did not come soon enough. Mr. Dennis was in the 59th year of his age. He was born in Lenawee county, near Adrian, Mich., on a farm. At 19 years of age he took up the literary course at the University of Michigan, graduating at the head of his class and with very high honors in 1859. Taking up the law course of the same institution he completed that, after which he left Michigan and came to Kansas, settling at Leavenworth. Being a very bright young man he was immediately recognized by the citizens of that community and was the recipient of lucrative public trusts. The first was that of county clerk, followed by his election to the office of clerk of the court. He held the position of city clerk and other important offices for several years. Becoming associated with the law firm of Clough & Wheat, Mr. Dennis was engaged in practicing law, when the Supreme court of Kansas appointed him to the position of state librarian in 1881. He immediately removed to Topeka and has occupied the position until the day of his death. At the time of his receiving the appointment he was an intimate friend of Chief Justice A. H. Horton and Justice Brewer. These gentlemen together with Mr. A. A. Robinson, president of the Mexican Central railway, were Mr. Mr. Dennis' most intimate friends. A wife and three daughters, Joe, Mary and Alta, survive the husband and father. Mr. Charles M. Foster, for many years one of the most regular attendants of the state library and with the exception of Mr. Dennis, more intimately acquainted with the library than any other person in Kansas, contributes the following to the Capital on Mr. Dennis as a librarian: "In the death of H. J. Dennis Kansas has lost one of its most faithful public officers. He was a model librarian. He knew the library thoroughly and had no interest elsewhere. He was modest and unassuming to a fault. With small means and cramped accommodations he made the state library one of the most valuable in the country. He knew it thoroughly. With all his cares he never lost his patience. He was ready to give information cheerfully to all who asked it. As long as any one wished to use the library it was kept open. He was well informed on books and his selections always showed good taste. His good nature never gave way and he was willing to give assistance to every one. He was a good lawyer and without reward or the expectation of reward he would prepare well digested briefs for lawyers in distant parts of the state. He worked conscientiously and kept an account of every book sold. The stock of books on hand ran into tens of thousands of dollars and these he sold and turned the proceeds into the state treasury according to his own accounts which no one ever questioned. On these accounts he spent the last few months of his life and in spite of warnings of friends and orders of his physicians he continued in his work which he just had strength to finish. His annual report as state librarian was printed only a few days before his fatal illness. His nature was kind and gentle and he made friends of all with whom he came in contact."

A Long Life Ended.

Mrs. Hannah Chaffee, at the advanced age of 102 years, died Sunday afternoon at 3:55, at the home of her grandson, Wm. Nicholson, corner of Front and Ormsby streets, of old age, and the immediate effects of a fall she received two weeks ago last Wednesday.

Deceased was without question the oldest person in Michigan. She was born at Pontford, Vt., September 24, 1792, and spent her childhood in that place. It was during this childhood that she rode 20 miles on a horse's back, seated behind her brother, to have the privilege of shaking hands with General George Washington.

She married early in life, moving to New York state. Her first husband was Mr. John Fogeson, by whom she had one child, her father's namesake, who is now living in Fredonia, Mo. Mr. Fogeson died young, and she was soon afterwards married to Mr. Warner Fay Chaffee. They came to Michigan in 1833, taking up land in Hillsdale county. In 1849 they came here, buying a farm in Raisin Valley, where they lived a peaceful life for many years. They also owned a farm on what is known as the plank road. Mr. Chaffee died seven years ago, in the 87th year of his age. Three children were born to them, only one of whom is living, Mr. Oscar Chaffee, of Onsted.

She kept her faculties up to the time of her death, and was always pleased to talk over old times with those who came here at an early day. She has 12 grandchildren and 16 great-grandchildren, who are left to mourn her loss.—Michigan Messenger.

TEMPERANCE TOPICS.

(Edited by the Tecumseh W. C. T. U.)

A Celebrated Physician's Experience.

Dr. Norman Kerr, at a recent meeting of English physicians, related the following incident, making a personal application to his brothers and sisters of the profession:

"Before I practiced what I taught in regard to this matter, I found that, sing however sweetly I might, my advice penetrated very little into the life and character of the inebriates who came before me; but when, in order to save a man whom I was called up to see thro' the night, I took the pledge, my practice then squared with my precept. I said to this man, "What on earth do you mean by calling for me about once in every month in this way and wasting your substance, only for the benefit of your wine merchant and your doctor? You must be an unmitigated fool; why do you not take the pledge?" When I went to see him next morning, drunk as he had been the night before, he grasped what I had said. "Doctor," he said, "you told me last night to take the pledge; I will, if you will." What was a poor doctor to do? It was a case of the spider and the fly, and the result was that we took the pledge in that house together, and that man has kept it to this day. I saw him on Monday last before I came here, not as a doctor, for he is of no use to me, as now he is never ill, but he has been the means of making hundreds of people abstainers, mostly amongst the slaves of drink as he was himself."—National W. C. T. U. Bulletin.

Archdeacon Farrar, writing of total abstinence in the British Workman, says: "I was not a total abstainer till after I was forty years old, because the desirability of setting the example had never been brought home to me. But from the day that I became one, the total abstention from alcoholic liquor has never given me the smallest trouble nor caused me the least regret; nor would it cause any real trouble to any healthy man who had always been moderate and temperate, and had never fatally persuaded himself that drink was a necessity to him."

The importance of Japan not only in the far East, but among the nations of Europe as well, is being very rapidly increased. Her brilliant victories over a nation ten times as large in population are accompanied by the beginning of a series of treaties which will be of no less importance to her. The special feature of these treaties is that they for the first time recognize Japan as a civilized nation. Present treaties regard her as a barbarous or semi-barbarous country; but her progress in the arts and sciences during the last 30 years has at last entitled her to a place in the sisterhood of civilized countries. She has remodeled her Government after the English form, and proposes to throw open all her territory to foreigners either for travel or residence, stipulating, however—and wisely so, we presume—against alien ownership of the land. Her demands upon Corea, to enforce which she is now making war upon China, are, in part, that the Prime Minister and his cabinet shall be invested with greater discretionary powers, instead, as now, of being required to submit all matters to the Corean King; the demand—amounting in fact, to one—for a change from a despotic monarchy to a constitutional monarchy. In addition, the following is demanded by the Japanese minister at Seoul, the capitol of Corea. He says:

I most respectfully recall your Majesty's attention to one more subject, a subject to which I would fain avoid any allusion. I refer to the necessity that all interference of the ladies of the court in politics should be strictly prohibited. In my country, as in all other civilized countries, the household department is strictly kept apart from politics. This is a measure absolutely necessary for the permanent prosperity of your Majesty's dynasty."

This is amusing. At a time when women of England and America are pushing so earnestly for full political equality, Japan serves notice upon Corea that his Government will be ruined unless he passes a law prohibiting the women even to exercise influence in politics. It is an embarrassing position in which to put a monarch. It is one thing to issue such an edict; it is quite another thing to enforce it. When women set their minds on interference in politics, edicts of the most lurid sort can't prevent it, as the unfortunate Breckinridge has just found out down in Kentucky.

C. C. Stacy, who for some time has been suffering from a severe cold, is rapidly convalescing. He is becoming quite frisky as was demonstrated Monday when he did the county seats of both Wayne and Lenawee.

They are repaving the gutter on the north side of east Chicago street from the St. James block to Wright's Drug store. This will be a great improvement. Why not continue the good work on west Chicago street. The paving is not only in bad condition but very narrow.

Mrs. D. W. Clark has rented her house to Rev. Chas. M. Brown, and leaves today for Lawrence, Kansas. She will spend the winter with friends there and may possibly make it her future home. The best wishes of many old friends here will accompany her, although they will regret to have her leave Tecumseh.

Fred Burrell and Oscar Hall, the Tecumseh boys who confessed to robbing the money drawer of the Globe mill, were each sentenced by Judge Lane this morning to five years at Ionia. The above from the Adrian Daily Times of Tuesday's issue would be correct if they had made it 5 months instead of 5 years.

C. S. Hampton, of Petoskey, was in town an hour or so between trains last Tuesday, and during his brief stay he made the acquaintance of some of our local Democrats. He was on a short campaign tour in this section. He says that Spencer O. Fisher is making a lively campaign in the northern part of the State and will make a big run in that section.

A dispatch from Kalamazoo, dated October 22d. says: Foreman Wilcox, of the Tecumseh Table factory, visited his wife at the asylum yesterday, and, with the doctor's permission, she took a walk with him. She worked Mr. Wilcox for $5, gave him the slip, hired a livery, went to Vicksburg and took the train for Battle Creek. She has not been captured yet. Mr. Wilcox was nearly frantic over the misfortune.

Just thirty years ago last Friday afternoon at four o'clock, Horace Baker walked into the drug store across the way, and the next morning he began work there. He has been in the same store ever since and during that period he has been off duty but a very few days. He was in partnership for many years with Dr. Wm. C. Fisher, and since Dr. Fisher's death the firm name has been Baker & Hall. His record for faithful attention to business is excelled by no man in this community.

In a communication from Chas. J. Robinson of Manchester, to Jno. J. Orr, received Tuesday morning, he states that there is not a case of small pox in the village and none within several miles of the corporation, and these very mild cases. We quote the above for there are so many flying reports going around, so misleading in character that even some of our people are really alarmed. Mr. R., we know personally and his statement may be relied upon as correct.

The members and friends of The Young Men's Prohibition Club met at the home of Mr. Wm. Smith, Monday evening, Oct. 22. The club was called to order by the president and after prayer by J. P. Varner, and music by the quartette, Dr. North gave a short talk on "What Legislation Can't Do." Dr. Steinhoff spoke on "The Free Coinage of Silver" and was followed by Rev. J. P. Varner on "Party," and Mr. Jones on "Work." The Club is well organized and zealous in the work of the good cause.

George Gould, son of his father, passed through here yesterday, over the Wabash road, on his way to St. Louis, Mo. The train was a special, composed of locomotive, baggage car and Mr. Gould's private car. The train reached here about 3 p. m., and stopped about 5 minutes. During this time Mr. Gould got off the car, walked down the platform, took a squint at Adrian's factories on the horizon, figured out that we are a pretty thrifty appearing city, went back into his rolling palace, and moved west.—Evening Telegram of Monday.

Fred B. Wood spent Sunday with his family here.

John Orr, John Anderson, Ben Ellis, Will Mobbs, Cleo Hall, Art Gove and John Vedder visited their K. O. T. M. brothers at Adrian, Monday evening, and saw the work of the order exemplied. They were royally entertained and did not get home until the wee small hours.

No person can read the endorsements of Sousa's Band, by musicians, press and people, without the inevitable conclusion that the band is without an existing peer, and that no music lover can afford to miss its concert to be given in Adrian, Monday afternoon, Nov. 5th. Bandmaster Sousa has fifty perfect musicians, and his vocal artist is equally renouned and equally great, and the combination is one which can hardly be resisted by the music lover, the critic, or the average popular audience.

Last Thursday Mrs. J. D. Shull and Mrs. W. C. Fisher entertained about seventy-five of their lady friends at five o'clock tea, at Mrs. Fisher's residence on Chicago street. Supper was served in the dining rooms, and also in the breakfast room and library. The large tables were decorated with smilax and yellow roses; white pansies were used on the small tables. Friday evening at 8 o'clock they held a reception at which about 125 of their gentlemen and lady friends were present. The drawing room was tastefully trimmed with bitter sweet and chrysanthemums; while pink carnations formed the table decorations. An elaborate menu was served the same as on the previous evening. They were assisted in receiving by Mr. J. D. Shull and Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Rue, of Battle Creek.

A dispatch from Manchester to the Free Press, dated October 19th, says: A complete solution of the Conklin mystery will soon be made known to the public, but the doctor will not arrive until late to-night. When Mrs. Conklin was informed of her husband's whereabouts she was frantic with joy. His friends here believe that the doctor's abduction was caused by the recent criminal case at Traverse City, and Mrs. Conklin said that if she ever heard from her husband it would be at the completion of that trial. Mrs. Conklin is in a critical condition, and is anxiously awaiting her husband's arrival. She has never heard from him since his disappearance, until late last night, when she received a telegram from him. All reports of his intended disappearance are not believed by the better class of people here.

We paid Detroit a flying visit last Monday. Found Jud DePuy located at 100 Griswold street. He is now in the employ of the Michigan Fire and Marine Ins. Co. has a good position and is evidently doing well. Frank Smalldige is still running his drug store on Jefferson Ave., where he is nicely located. As he continues at the same place we infer that he must be doing a lucrative business. We had a short chat with F. C. Stoepel at Burnham, Stoepel & Co's wholesale house. He says that the fall trade is opening up very satisfactorily with their house, and they look for a heavy business between now and the first of January. We also made a call at Dr's Kennedy & Kergan's establishment on Shelby street. They are specialists who have resided in Detroit for many years and have worked up a very lucrative practice there, which they hold without any trouble, by their skillful treatment and gentlemanly methods.

Mrs. E. S. Tate, of Clinton, is in town to-day.

The Halloween party this year will no doubt be, like the preceeding ones, very pleasant. The matter is in the hands of stirring young men who will spare no effort to have it a perfect success. MICHIGAN BAPTISTS.

They Act on a Resolution Pledging Themselves to Prohibition.

LANSING, Oct. 20.—The following officers of the Baptist state convention were elected: President, W. L. Farnum, Flint; secretary, H. F. Cochrane, Springport; treasurer, W. W. Beman, Ann Arbor; auditor, T. T. Leete, Jr., Detroit. The report of the executive committee showed a total membership of 40,000; twenty new churches had been established and six church edifices erected during the past year.

Rev. D. D. McLaurin, of Detroit, created something of a sensation by declaring that 40,000 Poles in the city of Detroit, so far as a knowledge of the Saviour is concerned, are as ignorant as the inhabitants of darkest Africa.

LANSING, Oct. 22.—The convention on Saturday disposed of the prohibitory temperance resolution, which threatened to disrupt the entire organization. It was so deftly managed that it was finally disposed of by the adoption of a mild resolution pledging the members to their best and continuous effort for the suppression of the liquor traffic. The question was reopened Sunday night, and the result was that the report of the committee embodied in the above was not only rejected but ordered expunged from the records and a resolution adopted calling upon the next legislature to either enact some sort of a prohibitory law or submit to the people a constitutional amendment for this purpose. A resolution was adopted to the effect that the use of the gospel hymns was not conducive to the development of the best devotional culture, and recommending the return to the standard hymns and tunes of the Christian faith.

Battle Creek Suspects Make Some Sensational Statements.

MARSHALL, Oct. 19.—A correspondent has examined the sworn statements of Knowles, Bodewig, and Hall, alleged Battle Creek Grand Trunk train wreckers. Knowles admits Bodewig and himself stole the claw bar with which the fish plates were removed. He charges that after the wreck Bodewig admitted wrecking the train with two others. Knowles' confession says the plot was concocted in the A. R. U., and that Bodewig was the chief conspirator. Bodewig admits in his statement having had connection with the crime, but says he was not present when the job was done. Hall disclaims any knowledge of the wreck, but says Bodewig and another man did it.

QUINCY, Ill., Oct. 20.—The case of A. M. He denies that he is Van Auken, but refuses to say who he is.

Escape in Spite of Trainmen.

GRAND RAPIDS, Oct. 22.—Three confidence men attempted to "flim-flam" Rev. Father O'Connell on the Detroit, Lansing & Northern railroad out of this city Saturday night. They were overpowered by the train hands and left in charge of the brakeman, but succeeded in pulling the bell rope and when the train slowed up, jumped off and escaped, intimidating the brakeman by placing a revolver to his head.

BRASSEY TO SELL HIS LAND.

Will Offer Inducements for Settlers on Michigan Property.

MARQUETTE, Oct. 23.—Thomas Lord Brassey, principal owner of the Michigan Land & Iron company, left this city Saturday night after a visit of three days, during which he completely revolutionized the policy of the corporation in a manner which promises to be greatly beneficial to the development of this region. Lord Brassey bought the entire land grant of the Marquette, Houghton & Ontonagon Railway company fifteen years ago, paying $2,000,000 cash for it. Until recently the control remained in the hands of certain men in Boston, who having put little or nothing into the property themselves cared nothing about its development. Lord Brassey said:

"These lands have hitherto been unproductive of minerals in paying quantities. A small income has been derived from pine, but this will shortly be exhausted. We have now resolved on a large policy for agricultural development. We propose to convert the forests into farms. I am satisfied both from the reports received and from personal examination that over one-half of these lands are of excellent quality for farming, and the policy determined upon is in brief this: We will offer the lands for sale on twenty years' time with interest on the deferred payments at 3½ per cent. If the purchaser desires, we also advance a reasonable amount to put up necessary buildings and to clear ten acres of land, and let these advances stand as a part of the purchase price at the same rate of interest. I want to give any industrious man a home on these lands."

How to Avoid Farm Work in Summer.

It never gets so hot in the South as it does in the North. There are never sunstrokes in the South. The hotter the weather the harder the Northern farmer has to work to save his crops, while down South the farmers do their farm work during the Fall, Winter and Spring, when the weather is cool, and during the Summer they take it easy. It is always cool in the shade down South and the nights are always cool. The thermometer seldom gets above 95. The hottest day during the past five years was 97 degrees.

You can grow one crop during the Winter, another during the Spring, and another during the Fall on the same land each year. You will not make more money from each one of these crops than you can make from a similar crop in the North. You can get a home cheaper. It will cost you less to live. You can make more money. You will have better health, live longer, and enjoy life better in the South than in the North. A beautiful pamphlet that tells all about it sent free to all applicants. Go South now and investigate. Low rate excursions every month over the Mobile & Ohio Railroad. E. P. Posey, General Passenger Agent, Mobile, Ala.

1000 Meals for Five Cents

Each person eats on the average over 1,000 meals per year. To properly flavor these would require say 17 cents worth of Diamond Crystal Salt. This is a trifle greater outlay than if the other kinds were used, but 5 cents would more than cover the difference, and pay for the luxury of having instead of the other kinds. But the important thing about it is the finer flavor your food will have and the greater protection your health will receive when you use the salt that's all salt. Clinton Column.

CLINTON MICH., OCT. 25, 1894.

Edward Cook called on some friends here Sunday.

Mrs. Geo. A. Kies is under the physician's care this week.

Alice Halladay was home from Albion college Sunday.

Charles Carroll started in Monday to learn the cigar maker's trade.

John T. Clark made a flying trip to Blissfield the first of the week.

Will Hall left for his new position in Jacksonville, Ill., the last of the week.

Alonzo Clark is at home. He came Saturday and expects to remain some time.

The hall was filled to its utmost capacity to hear E. P. Allen Monday night.

R. F. Greenleaf and family returned home Monday from a visit with Leonidas friends.

Robbie Woodward and Willie Waterhouse were seen on the streets of Tecumseh Sunday evening.

Eugene Smalley gives a phonographic concert at Addison Thursday evening and at Onsted Friday night.

C. H. Reed, foreman in the HERALD office, and C. D. Keyes drove up from Tecumseh Sunday afternoon.

"Ham" Niblack went over to Ypsilanti Saturday and returned Monday, bringing his wife back with him.

Our venerable friend, Mrs. Maria Hixson is enjoying a visit from her daughter, Mrs. A. S. Kedzie, of Grand Haven.

Alex Kennedy and Grace Stevens spent Sunday at the elegant country residence of L. D. Watkins, beyond Manchester.

Some parties came over from Saline Monday and purchased a fine lot of Jersey heifers of Chas. F. Clark, ten or twelve in number.

F. D. Lancaster went up to Wamplers Lake Tuesday, with a load of furniture for the new cottage. He believes in taking time by the forelock. Fred Sherwood accompanied him.

David Goodrich, we are sorry to chronicle, has been having a severe time the past week. He was doing so nicely, and now he has lost nearly all the strength he had gained.

Stacy had a good house at his Snap Shots last night and the auditors were highly entertained. The views are very fine and Scove's introductory remarks, as well as the lecture, are intensely interesting. Quite a number were up from Tecumseh.

Mrs. John J. White left Tuesday for Detroit to visit a sister from London, Ontario, who has been in Detroit for some time undergoing surgical treatment from Dr. McLean. Mrs. W. was expecting a visit from her this week, but she being unable to endure the journey, went to her instead.

Our people are very anxious to be vaccinated these days, all on account of the Manchester smallpox scare. Our physicians are kept very busy in consequence. It is always best to be on the safe side and take every precaution, but to believe all the sensational reports that are circulated at such times is sheer folly. There is very little truth in any of them.

During the peculiar electrical storm Saturday morning, when, as it were, a great battle was in progress, with heavy and constant cannonading, L. H. Johnston's barn, which is lighted by electricity, was struck by lightning, the moulten stream escaping on the wires, which caused utter destruction to most of the fuses north of Chicago street. The electric light force were kept busy to repair the damage before evening. It was a strange experience.

G. D. Ellis has moved his cigar factory into his new quarters, the old postoffice building on Chicago street, and he has a very attractive place. He has put in some partitions, and in the back of the store he will have his factory. In front he has a very tasty tobacco store well stocked in that line. He contemplates putting in a news department in the near future, which has long been needed, and will have all the popular periodicals of the day. Call in and see for yourself.

At the Episcopal church last Sunday evening it was a case of "where was Moses when the light went out." As the rector was reading one of the lessons the electric lights went out and all was in darkness. They soon came up, but only for a moment, and out they went. A lamp was procured at J. B. Wells' and the services went on, the single light reminding one of our grandfather's days. While singing the last hymn suddenly all was bright for a moment and then dense darkness. They could not explain the cause satisfactorily.

Our people were greatly excited Friday, when it was reported that a dress and other articles of wearing apparel were found on the bank of the race, and it was not long ere a large crowd was on the spot. Many were the surmises, and some were so sure it was a case of suicide that it was decided to draw the water out, which was accordingly done. While thus engaged, Mrs. Etta Johnson appeared and recognized the clothing as belonging to Eda VanGieson, which had been taken from the carriage the night before. The search was accordingly discontinued.

"Am I Married or Not?"

asked Mr. A., despondently. "I declare, my wife is so nervous and irritable that I don't stay in the house a moment longer than I can help. My home isn't what it used to be." "Mrs. A. is suffering from some functional derangement, I presume," said B. "Yes, she has been an invalid for years." "Exactly. Her experience is that of my wife, but she was cured by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Get this remedy for Mrs. A., and the happiness of your home will soon be restored." Mr. B. was right. For prolapsus, painful periods, irregularities—in short, all "complaints" peculiar to the female sex—the "Favorite Prescription" is a sovereign specific.

THE MICHIGAN FARMER.

Why Michigan Farmers Should Take It.

It is the recognized State agricultural organ. It contains matter written by educated successful agriculturists, who are practical farmers, live stock breeders, horticulturists and dairymen of this State. It gives all the agricultural, live stock, dairy and horticultural news of this State. It publishes full and reliable markets from all important points where Michigan farmers sell their products. It reaches every post-office in the State within twelve hours after it is printed. Its editors and correspondents are Michigan men, thoroughly in earnest in their desire to advance, protect and improve the agricultural interests of this State. It is filled with original paid for matter written expressly for it. It is first-class in every particular, its publishers sparing no expense to make it the equal of any paper of America. It admits no immoral, snide or swindling advertisements. It is a weekly of 52 issues a year—64 columns in each issue—and is furnished at the lowest possible price that such a paper can be published at; and last and greatest—Because it is many times more valuable and instructive to the agriculturists of Michigan than any agricultural paper published outside of the State can be.

Must Have It.

Yes, you must have it. It is the only way you can learn what is going on about you; the news of the city, village or farming district in which you live. You must have your home paper, whether you can afford anything else in the way of current reading or not. And a great deal besides home news you will find in it. The editor of your home paper aims first of all to give you the home news, with intelligent and helpful comment thereon. But he does not stop there; he does the best he can to give you the general news and the best thought of the whole world. Of course he does not and cannot give you as much as you ought to have, and if you ask him about the matter, he will frankly tell you so. He will also advise you what you ought to get to supplement your home paper and keep you and your growing boys and girls up with the times in the great fields of politics, sociology, finance, commerce, science, religion, art, education, and the literary and book news of the day. He will tell you that there is one weekly journal, unique in this respect, made up of carefully selected, condensed and classified extracts from the newspapers and magazines the world over, and that he has made special arrangements by which he can give you a reduced subscription rate for this unique journal, if taken in connection with the HERALD. He will tell you that the name of this journal so admirably suited to your wants is PUBLIC OPINION, that it is published at Washington, D. C., and that the regular subscription price is $2.50 per year, but that he can give you both the HERALD and PUBLIC OPINION for one year for $3.00 cash. He will also tell you that PUBLIC OPINION and the HERALD are exactly what you need during the political campaign. PUBLIC OPINION will be sent you for ten weeks on trial for fifty cents.

—BOOK BINDING—

Bring along your magazines and portfolios that you may want bound and get our prices. Now is the time to have your books bound.

Are These Conditions Just?

The following are a few samples of incomes of American millionaires: William Waldorf Astor's daily income is $33,877,, J. D. Rockefeller's $20,853, Cornelius Vanderbilt's $11,000, W. K. Vanderbilt's $10,397, and Goulds' $11,068.

Whence comes the money to pay this enormous tribute? In the last analysis it comes from the men whose toil produces all wealth—the wage-earners whose daily wage, and they work from morn till night, is something like $1.

Is it strange that the rich grow richer and that in the ratio they ascend the scale of accumulated wealth the other side, the real wealth producers, drop to the point of bare existence?

The same unjust conditions which make the pauper create the millionaire. Those conditions may be comprehended in one simple phrase—the control by the few of the natural opportunities which belong equally to all.

The supreme duty of the hour is the restoration to the people of their God-given rights and the taking from those who now possess them of all special privileges. Every other question now before the people pales into insignificance in comparison with this, and until this is accomplished the present evils will only increase in intensity—the incomes of the millionaires will mount higher and higher, the wages of the producers will drop to the starvation point, and that means involuntary servitude. This work should begin with financial reform.—National Watchman.

ORR & TEMPLE.

The tariff reform movement in Argentina has been stimulated by the action of the United States, and the Congress has now under consideration a bill making a general reduction in customs duties. The people of Argentina have found out that the tariff is a tax and they can see no advantage in paying higher prices for the benefit of the few.

The Boston Herald says: Opposition to the income tax is in a bad way indeed. Here is the Republican Convention of Massachusetts without a word to say against it, and the Democratic Convention of the same State declaring in its favor. Those who think that a wrong step was taken when it was passed must oppose it individually if they oppose it at all. There is no organization in the whole broad land that will aid them to such an end.

In his letter of acceptance Mr. Morton says in one place that he is heartily in favor of "an acceptable excise law," and in another place he calls for "an excise law that will promote temperance." And there you are! If asked to define "an acceptable excise law," he would say that it is a law "that will promote temperance." And if asked what kind of law "will promote temperance," he would say, "why, an acceptable excise law." See?

The Bay View Reading Circle.

One year ago the new Bay View Reading Circle was launched. It had a shorter, lower priced and more modern course than the Chautauqua Circle. Instantly it met with popular approval and at the end of five months was in use over much of the country. The new course for 1894-5 is just out, and is said to be even finer than the first. The four books and monthly magazine, which constitute the course, cost only $3, and the three great subjects to be studied—France, Social Reform, and Art, promise to be as useful as they are sure to be enjoyable. A reader of the Bay View Course will at the end of a few years have a useful body of classified knowledge which the desultory reader never has. J. M. Hall, Flint, Michigan, is the person to address for circulars of information.

These rates are in effect from Cincinnati, O., Louisville and Lexington, Ky., June 5th, July 5th, Aug. 7th, Sept. 4th, October 2d, November 6th and December 4th; good twenty days from date of sale for return. They are sold on these dates to all points in Kentucky, Tennesse, Alabama, Mississippi, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida (except Key West), and to New Orleans, and all points on our line in Louisiana. The Q. & C. has over a million acres of farms and timber land for sale along its line at $3.00 to $8.00 per acre.

Stop-overs are permitted on these excursions, at any point South of the Ohio River, within the final limit of the tickets. This offers an excellent opportunity to those who desire to go South to look into the great movement of Northern farmers to that section.

Golden Honors

Golden Coast

Dr. Price's Baking Powder

California, empire of the Pacific, salutes the world. Her Midwinter Fair closed in a midsummer blaze of glory. Second only to the Columbian Exposition in extent, variety and splendor, the coast display was a veritable triumph. Out of her abundance the state poured her treasures—and the nations of the earth came to aid her in her noble exhibition.

Memorable were the exhibits—of gold and silver, of wheat and oil, of fruit and wine, of silk and wool—of all that man and nature could combine to produce. And no exhibit attracted more attention or excited warmer approval than that of Official tests showed it to be highest in leavening power, purest in quality, and most efficient in results of all baking powders made. Accordingly, the Highest Award and Gold Medal were conferred on Dr. Price's at the Midwinter Fair.

The triumph at San Francisco confirms the victory at Chicago. The Midwinter Fair verdict sustains and vindicates the bestowal of highest honors on Dr. Price's by the jury of awards at the World's Columbian Exposition.

PENTECOST POINTERS.

Marion Daniel's many friends will be sorry to hear of his serious illness at the home of his brother, John, in Chicago.

A lady of this place has a Calla that sent up a single stem to a height of about eight inches, which then unfolded two perfect and complete leaves. It is a queer freak of nature.

"There is again a strong oder of orange blossoms in the air," said one lady to another, recently. A little girl who heard this statement innocently remarked "that it was more likely to be the onions and celery Mr. Wilson was loading on the cars". How is it, girls?

Mr. Freeman Card is a freeman no longer, having allowed himself to be fast bound by the chains of Hymen. Rev. W. T. Williams riveted the bonds, and Miss Hattie Joseph, one of Franklin's best known young ladies, will henceforth "double the joys, and divide the sorrows" of Mr. Card.

The old French basket maker, with the very aristocratic name, has left his home on the shores of Sand Lake and gone with all his family to spend the winter among his countrymen in Monroe. There are few homes hereabouts that do not possess some specimen of his handiwork, or that of his industrious, nimble fingered wife.

The S. S. concert, at Pentecost Hall, is voted a success. Pentecost has some very fine elocutionary talent, as all will agree, we think, who heard the recitations on that occasion. The thanks of the S. S. association are due to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cooley, of Adrian, who assisted in the entertainment. Mrs. Cooley rendered very finely the solo, "The Lost Ship," but where all did so well, it is unjust to discriminate. It was a temperance program, and many of the pieces were very pathetic, and one good lady was heard to remark, as she applied her handkerchief to her eyes, "if they don't quit that I shall be crying pretty soon."

The people of this vicinity met at the hall last Saturday evening, and organized a Library Association, with a view to profitably spending the long winter evenings, now at hand. The membership fee is only ten cents, and quarterly dues of ten cents thereafter. They propose to form a nucleus for a library by voluntary contributions of books from both the members and any others generously inclined, who may wish to contribute, and cordially invite everybody to join. The officers chosen are as follows: Pres., M. E. Case; Vice-Pres., Mrs. Rufus Fisk; Sec., Miss Claudia Case; Treas., G. W. Fuller. Librarian, Mrs. Smith German. Directors: Rev. W. T. Williams of Tipton, and Mrs. Smith German of Pentecost, who, with the president, constitute a committee to purchase books, and devise means of raising funds, by entertainments, etc. The next meeting will take place on the evening of Nov. 10th, at Pentecost hall. Everybody is cordially invited to attend, as the books are still open for members, and this meeting is a public one.

The Populists will hold a meeting here on Friday evening, Nov. 2d, at Conlin's hall. It will be addressed by John O. Zabel, of Monroe county. Let everybody turn out and hear him.

While Ezra Simmons was driving along the road the other day, one whiffletree came loose, which let the tongue drop down. The team ran about forty rods, but luckily the road was smooth and Mr. Simmons stopped them.

The Cornelian Ladies' Quartette, of Adrian, will give a grand concert, at Hampton's hall, on Wednesday evening, Nov. 7th, under the auspices of the Ladies of the Maccabees and for their benefit. This quartette has made a great hit wherever they have appeared. Admission, 20 and 10 cents.

Stacy's Snap Shot lectures on the World's Fair, opened on Monday evening to a slim house, as it was a very stormy night. There was a good crowd in attendance on the next two evenings however. The entertainment was pronounced one of the best ever given in this place. The Christian Endeavor Society will add a good sum to their treasury.

TEMPERANCE TOPICS.

(Edited by the Tecumseh W. C. T. U.)

There is only one party before the American people to-day pledged to the overthrow of the liquor traffic. Will you vote for that party?

Is it right for you to teach your children that saloons are wicked places while all the time you are voting for the creation and protection of these places?

How can you vote for home protection and saloon protection at the same time? You can't do it. Nov. 6 you will vote to protect one or the other. Which shall it be?

The republican and democratic parties are pledged to protect the saloon. The Prohibition party is pledged to annihilate the saloons. You vote for your party and whatever your party does you do.

Is it right, is it consistent to denounce saloonkeepers, and to preach against the liquor traffic, and to ask God to save our neighbors and friends and children and then turn right round and vote for a party which licences men to conduct a traffic which will corrupt, degrade and dam them?

Rev. Washington Gardner of the Detroit M. E. conference, is the nominee for Secretary of State of the republican party which is responsible for the 245,000 saloons in our nation. A man is no better politically, than the party he represents. The Republican party is no better than the 245,000 saloon keepers. This Rev. Washington Gardner is no better politically than the 245,000 saloons which his party endorses and protects.

Rev. C. T. Allen is the nominee for Secretary of State of the prohibition party. That party has not a saloonkeeper in it. That party is pledged to the destruction of the saloon root and branch. Which man will you vote for? They are both ministers of the same conference, but one represents hell on earth and the other represents the coming of Christ's Kingdom on earth and peace and good will to men.

At the Rev. Washington Gardner, g. o. p. meeting at the Opera House there was a group that interested a few people present. Well up towards the front sat a group of Methodist men, leading members, officials, etc., of the church. Just in front of them sat a saloon-keeper. Whenever the saloonkeeper clapped his hands the Methodist brethren clapped theirs and it looked as if there was perfect harmony in their line of thought. But what strikes us is this, why should members of the M. E. or any other church endorse anything that pleases a saloon-keeper and why should a Methodist minister make a speech that would be cheered again and again by a saloon-keeper? Why, the M. E. church says: "The liquor traffic can never be legalized without sin," and the same church will not allow a saloon-keeper to be a member of its great body. These Methodist men won't allow that saloon-keeper to belong to their church, but they stay in and work and vote for a party which is controlled by 245,000 saloon-keepers and we would like to know the reason why?—Living Issues.

Henry Latchford in his article "A Social Reformer," in the Arena for October, quotes Henry D. Lloyd's opinion of the two old parties. "Though brot' up in the nature and admonition of the Puritans he occasionally voted the democratic ticket, even in a municipal election. 'The democrats, as rulers of a city, are not angels,' he said, 'but they are ever so much better than the other fellows. The republicans are as slick and smooth and clean and well-shaved as Herman, the magician. They have had such a long lease of power that they can give the devil points in the political game and beat him every time. They are pillars of stolid, external respectability, and it would be like flat blasphemy to impute even political wickedness to them. But you know that a man may be a church pillar and be a rascal, just as another man may smile and smile and be a villian. Yes, I much prefer the unblushing, ostentatious wickedness of the democrats. You can watch them and sometimes detect them. At all events you are never afraid of being overwhelmed by an avalanche of righteousness from their hands; and when by accident they do the right thing—well, they are honest enough to laugh, apologize and say they didn't intend it. They never boast about their well-doing. In fact all the bragging many of them do is concerned with their rascality, so you know where to place them."

The Peruvians have looted Harvard's Arequipa observatory, but they would fly in abject terror from Harvard's football team.

Climatic Influence on Health.

It cannot be denied that the influence of climate upon health is great, and it is in recognition of this fact that physicians send patients suffering with pulmonary diseases to great distances for "change of air." But when the sufferer happens to be too poor to act upon the advice his lot is hard indeed. But it is not necessarily hopeless. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery can be had at any medical store, and to it thousands whose cases were considered desperate owe their lives.

Up to a certain point in the progress of Consumption, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a positive remedy. But delay is dangerous with Consumption. In all the conditions that lead to it, the "Discovery" is the remedy. With severe lingering Coughs or Weak Lungs, nothing acts so promptly. Every disease that can be reached through the blood yields to this medicine. The Scrofula affections of the lungs that's called Consumption is one of them. For this, and for every other form of Scrofula, for all blood-taints and disorders, and all chronic Bronchial, Throat, and Lung affections, the "Discovery" is the only remedy so certain that, once used, it is always in favor.

Can anything else be "just as good" for you to buy?

Don't you believe it.

Read what the Chicago newspapers say about Sousa's band:

Record—Sousa's is the best concert band on the continent.

Times—Such playing has never before been heard in America.

News—It is without an equal among American bands.

Evening Post—The band's performance was a revelation. There is not a military organization in the country that can play with such exquisite finish.

Herald—One blast from Sousa's Band was worth more to the Exposition than all the bands the management could furnish in a year. It was the one musical success of the World's Fair.

TECUMSEH, MICH., NOV. 1, 1894.

It is claimed that England is a customer of the United States for half of her domestic produce.

Breckinridge's trying to go to the Senate may be differently received by the various old women said to be there

Wise and just legislation is surer protection against riot, discord, and revolution than a standing army of Gatling guns.

The Populists make this prophecy for the next Congress. They claim eight Senators, forty-five Congressmen, and the controling vote of seven states.

Spencer O. Fisher is making a brilliant campaign in this State. He intends to deserve success, at least, and the indications now are that he will achieve it.

George Gould may be more successful in getting on close terms of intimacy with the American bear under Buffalo Bill than he had in training the British lion under the Prince of Wales.

The New York World says: The question of what church a man belongs to or if he belongs to any at all has no rightful place in the politics of New York or any other American State. Drive it out!

The financial policy which enriches a few unproductive drones, at the expense of the great hive of human industry, is not only unjust but criminal, and surely fatal to national progress and even national life.

Col. Breckenridge is going to take the stump for Owen, his successful rival in the Ashland district. If the colonel's repentance were sincere he would forgive his enemy and not handicap him in any such way as that.

Gen. Spaulding's private appeal to the old soldiers to vote for him will have little effect. The old soldiers are voting for a principle this fall. The old war issues have been settled long ago, and the voters of this district will send Tom Barkworth to Congress this year.

Senator Hill is always at home in New York politics, and he is showing himself more than usually at home in this campaign. And The HERALD repeats for the benefit of whom it may concern that those who expect to beat him will have to rise early in the morning and keep hustling until dark.

Senator Hill has entered upon the New York campaign like a master. He stands in no defensive attitude, but attacks the enemy with all the force of his nature. By his energy and his insight he has already accomplished much. He has encouraged the wavering and given heart to the timorous. He has pointed out how the battle can be won, and if Democracy in New York means anything or stands for anything he is bound to win.

The farmers are to a great extent to blame for their own financial misfortunes. Existing evils could not have been brought about without their acquiescence. Of course this acquiescence was gained through misrepresentation, deceit, and the betrayal of confidence bestowed in ignorance; but now that they begin to understand the situation in all its native ugliness, it rests upon them to retrieve the loss they have suffered and correct the evils that they may not descend to their children. The farmers are the power of the land. United they may decree what they will within the bounds of justice. Let them use this vast power wisely, but determinedly.—National Watchman.

A Mr. Frazer of Martinsburg, West Va., a woolen manufacturer who employs 700 hands, is a strong advocate of Wm. L. Wilson's re-election and is stumping for Wilson. He carries a lot of samples with him to exhibit. Goods that sold for $2.25 a yard under the McKinley law he is now selling for $1.75 a yard. Goods that he sold for $1.50 under the McKinley law, he is now selling at $1.18 a yard. Goods that he sold for $1 a yard under the McKinley law, he is now selling at 75 cents a yard, and so on. He has not reduced the wages of his employees nor does he expect to; on the contrary, with the increased demand for woolen goods, under the stimulus of natural prices he expects to be able to increase the wages of his laborers within a short time.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, Oct. 30, 1894.

The leaders of the republican and democratic parties must be strongly impressed with the strength of the populists, that they will hold the balance of power in the next House, if it be true that they have held several conferences to devise a way to prevent the populists controlling the organization of the House even if they do elect enough members to give them the balance of power. According to my information an agreement was reached at the last conference, on the following basis: If the republicans elect more members than the democrats, but not enough to organize the House without the assistance of the populists, the democrats are to furnish enough votes for the candidate nominated for Speaker by the republican caucus to elect him, and in return are to receive certain specified extra committee assignments, and if the democrats elect more members than the republicans, but not enough to organize the House without the aid of populists, the republicans are to furnish enough votes to elect the democratic candidate for speaker and to get in return extra committee assignments. The populists say they would ask nothing better than to see this programme carried out to the letter. They say it would make them voters by convincing the people that their claim that there is no real difference between the old parties was true.

Chairman Taubeneck, of the populist national committee, has stirred up the politicians by the statement that the populists will elect Senators in Colorado, Wyoming, Montana, Idaho, Kansas, South Carolina, Washington and two southern States which he declines to name at this time, and that they will be strong enough in California and Illinois legislatures to dictate the successors to Senators Perkins and Cullom. He figures on at least 12 new populist Senators.

Secretary Hoke Smith knows more about the relations of the military to the civil branch of the government than he did a few days ago. When Secretary Smith received a communication from the Indian Territory setting forth the deplorable condition of affairs, owing to the inability of the officials to suppress the lawless bands of ruffians, he sent it to the War Department with the request to send enough U. S. troops into the territory to suppress lawlessness, and doubtless dismissed the matter from his mind under the impression that the nearest troops would be at once ordered by telegraph to proceed to the locality in which the trouble exists. He knew better the next day. Assistant Secretary Doe, who was in charge of the War department when Secretary Smith's communication was received, referred the papers to General Scofield, the commander of the army, who returned them with the suggestion that the request for the aid of troops be maturely considered, with a view to ascertaining the legality of the proposed action, thus implying his own doubt. Assistant Secretary Doe is accused of having a bad case of "big head," but it is creditable to his judgment that he did not attempt to decide this question off-hand, but referred it to older and more experienced hands. Meanwhile Secretary Smith's request remains unacted upon.

If ex-President Harrison is wise he will make at least one speech in New York for his old running mate. His declining to do so has already revived among republicans who do not like the ex-president over much the gossip which followed the Minneapolis convention of '92, connecting him with the deal that shelved Mr. Morton and made Whitelaw Reid the candidate for Vice President. If he persists in declining to speak for Mr. Morton he will be certain to hear more about that gossip between now and the meeting of the national convention of his party in 1896, no matter who may be elected governor of New York this year. No Presidential candidate can afford to even appear to sulk.

Somebody made an error in announcing last week that all army officers acting as Indian agents were to be supplanted by civilians, or else the administration has in deference to public opinion changed a policy very suddenly, as an officer was this week detailed to act as Indian agent at an agency that has had a civilian agent, and it is hinted in official circles that no more civilians are to be appointed, but that army officers are to be detailed as fast as vacancies occur among the civilian agents. Some funny things happen in Washington, but they cannot always be told by a correspondent, unless he is willing to close some of his sources of valuable information relating to contemplated official acts.

Of what benefit is it to the people for the Constitution to declare that all men are born free and equal if the law-making powers enact discriminating laws which virtually contradict the declaration and in effect close to a class certain fields of industry, while the gains from them are turned over to a more favored few?

Senator Hill's Splendid Fight.

Senator Hill is a strong and bold campaigner, and he is making a strenuous fight for success against odds which would have intimidated a less daring leader.

He found the Democratic party in the state apathetic, discouraged by the failure to redeem Democratic pledges, disgusted at the spectacle of the intimate relations between such great monopolists as Havemeyer of the sugar trust and the most influential members of the Cleveland cabinet, weary with waiting for the president to assert himself with his old-time vigor, indignant at the refusal of Democratic senators and representatives to support the income tax and other measures of Democratic reform, and scandalized to the last degree by the disclosures of the unspeakable corruption of New York municipal politics under the pantata system.

In spite of these discouragements Senator Hill has opened his campaign with such vigor that he is rallying Democrats who a little while ago seemed hopelessly disgusted and discouraged. In the face of his determined and able campaign the Republicans no longer feel the absolute assurance of victory with which they entered the field, and before they are many days older they may condescend to go to work for all they expect to get.

Senator Hill is without doubt the most resourceful and plucky political leader in New York, if not in the United States. He is meeting the first condition of success—that of deserving to win.—N. Y World.

Gold Demonetized.

Very few people are aware that gold itself has been demonetized, yet such is the case. When the mines of California and Australia began to pour into Europe a stream of yellow metal in 1849 and 1850, the money owners became frightened for fear it would become so plentiful as to make money cheap, and consequently the price of labor and its products dearer. This alarm spread throughout Europe, and many nations actually demonetized gold and made silver the standard money. Prof. Levi says:

"Frightened, and not without reason, at the possible consequences, some countries heretofore anxious to attract and retain gold in circulation, even at great sacrifice, showed a feverish anxiety to banish it altogether. In July, 1850, Holland demonetized the gold ten florin piece and the Guillame. Portugal prohibited any gold from having current value except the English sovereign. Belgium demonetized her gold circulation (that is, repealed the laws making it legal money.) Russia prohibited the export of silver, and France, alarmed but less hasty, issued a commission to look into the matter."

In 1855 Germany demonetized gold and made silver the only legal money. Even in England numerous cabinet meetings were held to consider the advisability of doing the same thing. Silver has been demonetized here for exactly the same reason. When will the people learn where their interest lies?

MOTHERS

and those about to become mothers, should know that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription robs childbirth of its torture, terrors and dangers to both mother and child, by aiding Nature in preparing the system for parturition. Thereby "labor" and also the period of confinement are greatly shortened. It also promotes an abundant secretion of nourishment for the child. During pregnancy, it prevents "morning sickness" and those distressing nervous symptoms from which so many sufer.

THAT'S QUEER!

You say a collar and cuff that are waterproof?

Yes.

And perspiration will not affect them?

Yes.

And when dirty you need only wipe them off with a wet cloth or sponge?

Yes.

Wonderful! How are they made?

A linen collar covered on both sides with waterproof "CELLULOID." Looks exactly like a linen collar.

Is it the only waterproof collar and cuff made?

No, but it is the only one made with the linen interlining and consequently the only one that can give entire satisfaction, because it is the best.

How can I know that I get the right kind?

Because every piece is stamped as follows:

TRADE CELLULOID MARK.

Inquire for that and refuse anything else, or you will be disappointed.

He probably has, but if not, send direct to us, enclosing amount. Collars 25c., Cuffs 50c. State size, and whether collar wanted is stand-up or turned-down.

HON. SPENCER O. FISHER.

A Glimpse at His Home and Business Life.

The Democratic Banner-Bearer Is a Shrewd and Straightforward Business Man and a Model Husband and Father—A Clean Man Throughout.

S. O. Fisher is one of those men that people in the community where they live speak of to strangers with a sort of conscious pride. They like to call attention to them, not as successful politicians or philanthropists, or as financial geniuses or anything of that kind, but simply as men who inspire a good deal of life into a town and make the town in a way more important because they live in it.

In the twenty-two years that Mr. Fisher has lived in the Bay district he has become wealthy. One thing that the people like him particularly for is that wealth has not created a spirit of exclusiveness in him, or fostered an atmosphere of snobbishness. To them he is just the same as when, early in the '70's, he used to drive his own ox team to get his lumber from the backwoods into the market.

His First Business Success.

The democratic candidate for governor likes to recall his early struggles in Hillsdale county, where he was born and where he spent his boyhood days. In those times he showed much of the same spirit that has made him the conspicuous citizen he is in this district. The first money he earned was from peddling milk. Next he was a porter in a general store. His wages were only five dollars a week, and at the outset he determined that some day he would see his own name on the sign over the door. Circumstances changed this determination and made him a partner in another store before he was twenty-five years of age, and it was while conducting this store, that he made his first bold strike. A railroad line had been surveyed from Hillsdale to Ypsilanti, and bids for building it were solicited. Young Fisher saw a chance to open up a new line of trade for his store. Though he didn't have the remotest idea of how to build a railroad, he underbid the experienced contractors for the first twenty-five miles out from Hillsdale. The young contractor adopted a system of paying wages in part in orders on his own store. He fulfilled his contract, which netted him about $30,000.

This was capital enough for him to engage in lumbering, which he had for some time been ambitious to do, and at twenty-six he came into the Bay district, took up a tract of pine some eight miles east of Bay City and built a small sawmill at what came to be known as Fisherville. There was no way to get his lumber to a market except with teams, and many a load he himself brought over the rough road to Bay City with oxen. Those were days when the lumber industry was flourishing, and it wasn't many years before Mr. Fisher came to be numbered among the leading operators of the region.

Mr. Fisher at Home.

Mr. Fisher's home, Elm Place, on the west side of West Bay City, is familiar to delegates of the State Press association, as well as to the delegates that have attended conventions of every kind of state organizations that have been held in Bay City for some years past. Just before he built it he said he was half-inclined to move to Detroit, but the Bay district was where his interests lay. It had always been loyal to him, and there, in his expressive words, he decided to drive his stakes and remain. During all state gatherings at Bay City the house is open for an informal reception to the delegates, and the townspeople will tell you that whenever there is a reception at the Fisher home you don't have to remain away because you can't afford to wear a dress suit.

Mr. Fisher is a man of domestic tastes, and when not engaged with his business affairs can usually be found with his family at his home, which comprises, besides Mrs. Fisher, three daughters, the eldest, Miss Grace Fisher, having recently graduated from an eastern seminary. He is a regular attendant, with his family, of the Presbyterian church.—Detroit Evening News.

Another Object Lesson.

The Ionia Standard contains the following object lesson on the effects of free wool:

Some two months ago the late James Whitaker, of Pewamo, was desirous of disposing of his large purchase of wool. He invited bids, and the best offer made him loser by some twelve hundred dollars.

About two weeks ago and after free wool was a certainty Mr. Ruel sold Mr. Whitaker's wool at the increased market price and at a figure which netted the latter a profit of eighteen hundred dollars.

Will Gov. Rich Kindly Explain?

Will Gov. Rich kindly abandon the scheme of conducting the state campaign on national issues for a sufficient length of time to explain the scandals and the extravagances that have been the only distinguishing features of his administration?—Detroit Free Press.

RALLY TO THE STANDARD.

No Good Reason Why the Democrats Should Play a Losing Game.

In facing a critical situation it is folly to ignore the dangers which it is imperative to overcome before victory is possible. It is useless to disguise the fact that the chief if not the only obstacle to a repetition of the democratic triumphs in 1890 and 1892, is apathy. The people appreciate the evils of McKinleyism as much now as then. The fallacies of high protection are as apparent to them as ever, and the disasters for which it is responsible have multiplied. Harrison's administration which impoverished the resources of this country, and the notorious Reed congress that made the nearest possible approach to partisan absolutism, do not strike the country any more favorably now than they did when chafing under the blundering policy of the one and the tyranny of the other.

Basing the conclusion upon the actions of democratic conventions in every part of the union, President Cleveland is personally stronger with the people than ever before during his remarkable career. They have no more confidence in the republican party or in republican principles than they had when they elected a democratic president and a democratic congress in 1892. Their intelligence and wide-awake interest in national affairs will not permit them to be hoodwinked by the republican claim that the financial stringency and attendant depression were the result of placing the democratic party in control at the dictation of the greatest popular vote ever received by a party aspiring to the management of national affairs.

From every quarter the testimony is that better times are at hand and that there is a universal revival of business which means in the future the restoration of general prosperity. There is every reason then that the democrats of the country be loyal in their allegiance and active in their efforts to retain the supremacy which came to them in such an overwhelming expression of favorable public sentiment. All over the country most deserving men have been nominated to the national house of representatives, and in that body the unshaken loyalty of democracy to its pledges is conceded. It there vindicated the confidence reposed in it by the people, and every congressional candidate now in nomination by the party should receive its undivided support.

In the state we have a ticket to which the party should rally in united and determined support. To indorse the scandals and extravagances of the current administration by giving it a further lease of power, while rejecting the claims of those whom the democratic state convention placed in nomination, would be for the party to stultify itself and to disregard the best interests of the state. In Wayne county there has been presented as strong and clean a ticket as ever went before the people for their indorsement. No democrat can say aught against it. It reflects the highest credit upon the party which placed it in nomination and which now owes it a vigorous, determined and winning support. The party is in full command of the situation and for it to sacrifice its opportunity would be little less than treason. Let every democrat do his duty.—Detroit Free Press.

DISHONEST TWADDLE.

The Ridiculous Kind of Cant the Republican Party Is Relying on for Success.

The down-town calamity organ tries to raise a partisan cry about cedar being on the free list, and says that "this will practically kill the business in Alpena," and then modifies the claim by adding: "at least for this winter."

A review of the shipment of cedar during the last five seasons will convince any fair-minded, reasonable man that the cedar business in Alpena will not suffer one fence post during the coming winter on account of "free trade." Look at the figures. Cedar has been shipped from Alpena during the five seasons now drawing to a close, as will be found in the following table, where we give the total number of pieces shipped each year, which includes posts, ties, telegraph poles and grape posts.

1891	887,500
1892	1,044,000
1894	1,117,100

From the above it will be seen that there have been more pieces of cedar shipped from Alpena up to September 22, this year, than for any previous year, and when the important fact is taken into consideration that there are more than a million pieces now in the river, cut last winter, an honest man does not have to go far to ascertain why the cedar cut in this section must naturally be very light the coming winter—simply because there was a supply cut last year sufficient for two years.

Will the calamity howler please give the above figures and facts to his readers?—Alpena Argus.

That Banner at Ionia.

An immense banner bearing the legend: "Our factories are all running night and day; the result of the Wilson bill," greeted the eyes of Gov. McKinley in Ionia. And the banner told the truth. To counteract that truth, Mr. McKinley raised the English bogey and proceeded to demonstrate to the Ionia workmen that they were in the last throes of bankruptcy.—Grand Rapids Democrat.

Crump's Composition.

We now know who wrote Crump's composition. It was the chap who is traveling with him and sending back glowing accounts of Crump's triumphal progress and the enthusiasm of the people over the reading of the composition. Only Macduff could "lay on" in such language.—Bay City Times.

Not So Angry as to Refuse an Advance.

So far it is not recorded that any of the protectionist wool growers are so thoroughly enraged by the abolition of the tariff that they refuse to accept the advance prices offered for their product.—Grand Rapids Democrat.

The location of Arkansas is such as to exempt it from extremes of heat and cold. Its elevations and richness of soils adapt it to the production of a greater variety of crops, fruits and general products used for the sustenance and comfort of man than any other State in the Union. It justly boasts of more health-giving springs and better well-water than any other State. Lands are cheap and productive, markets accessible; health good; no blizzards; no drouth; never a failure of crops; good schools, churches and society, and what is also important, a hearty welcome for all. It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

The Hay Question.

The following communication from a prominent citizen of Palmyra gives a few inside facts in regard to the price of hay, which will be of interest to the farmers:

PALMYRA, MICH., Oct. 30, '94.

EDITOR HERALD:—

I noticed in the Adrian Times an article on the hay question, and was surprised to think that any one would make such a statement, to mislead people for political purposes.

I am shipping a little hay from southern Michigan and Ohio, and know that I am selling hay now only fifty cents less than in the month of July, and that is the same price I have sold it for in past three months. I am paying $7.50 per ton for loose hay now, and paid $8 in July, and have had hay in Boston market every week for the past year, and have sold no hay for $12 per ton in Boston market.

And now a few words regarding Canadian farmers. Mr. Roche claims Canadian farmers can sell their hay at $6 per ton and make more money than American farmers can at $10, because the Canadian farmer does not pay out money for labor, but they club together and make their own hay, raise their own tobacco, and therefore have no use for money. Does that sound sensible to think that farmers have no expenses? Doesn't it cost to exchange works? Can hay stand when fit to cut, and wait for neighbors to change about? And concerning freight and tariff, I will say that when the McKinley bill took effect the Canadian railroads reduced their freight rates, and as soon as the Wilson bill took effect, I am informed that they have added 80 cents per ton on their rates, that only leaving a difference of $1.20 a ton between the McKinley and Wilson bills. According to Mr. Roche's statement, hay dropped $4 per ton on account of fifteen hundred cars of Canadian hay in Boston within three weeks. I will state that there were only sixteen hundred cars, all told, in Boston in the first three weeks of September, and about two-thirds of that number was American hay, and 231 cars of Canadian hay, went through in bond and exported from Boston, are also to be deducted from 1600 cars.

Now my opinion in regard to the hay market is, there being such a drought we commenced to bale and ship one month earlier than ever before, and new hay was on the market long before the old crop was cleaned up, and caused the market to weaken the latter part of July (instead of all at once in September), and an overrun market every week caused prices to gradually decline, and while we do not look for any very high prices, we look for a stronger market, as wheat being so low for the past few years caused a greater acreage of hay to be raised, therefore greatly increasing the supply. While the demand or consumption has gradually decreased, both by electricity and bicycles, and last year there being a short crop in foreign countries we exported a great deal of hay and still had lots of old hay held over, and we produced one-fourth more hay in Lenawee county for shipment this year than we did two years ago. Then how do we expect to get as high prices as we did last year with a large foreign demand? We do not expect to buy hay at $4 per ton, as Mr. Roche does, (and if what we hear is true, has bought for even less,) but we do expect to pay $7.50 a ton, and no less. I make this statement, not for political purposes, but only for the benefit of the farmers, and to right an injustice, in my opinion. H. H. DUBOIS.

OBITUARY.

Little Ruth Tilden, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Tilden, bid farewell to the sorrow and tribulation of this earthly life and went to meet her Savior on Tuesday, Oct. 2d, '94. She was a lovely child and the idol of her parents. She lacked but four days of being fourteen months old, when called home.

When we see the precious blossom,
That we tended with such care,
Rudely taken from our bosom,
How our hearts almost despair!
Round its little grave we linger,
Till the setting sun is low,
Feeling all our hopes have perished
With the flowers we cherished so.

Bertis Westcott, son of Hiram H. Westcott, who has been in feeble health for several weeks, departed this life on Friday last, at the home of his father in this village, being 20 years and 10 months old. Bert's health had never been very rugged, but he was a very ambitious boy and had kept about his daily avocations until a few days prior to his death. The funeral services were conducted Sunday afternoon at his father's residence on Pottawatamie street and was attended by a very large concourse of sympathizing friends. The W. R. C. were present in a body and brought beautiful floral offerings. The obsequies were in charge of the "Baptist Nine," of which the deceased was a worthy member. Rev. B. A. Smith spoke words of consolation to the mourners, and the remains were deposited in our beautiful evergreen cemetery. His death is a sad blow to his father, brothers and sisters who are left behind, but they are consoled by the fact that their loss is Bert's eternal gain.

CARD OF THANKS.

To the many friends and neighbors who so kindly assisted us in our late bereavement, the loss of our beloved son and brother, we wish to extend our heartfelt thanks. Words fail to express the gratitude we feel.

MR. AND MRS. H. H. WESTCOTT AND FAMILY.

SETTLING THE ISSUES.

Questions Which Should Be Disposed of Outside of Politics.

Record of Rascality and Extravagance of Present State Officials Should Be Condemned at the Polls by Voters Irrespective of Party.

In a communication to the Detroit Free Press W. S. H. Welton, a citizen of Owosso, presents so clearly and forcibly the duty of every respectable voter in Michigan that we reproduce it complete. He addresses himself to "the honest, fair-minded voters of Michigan, irrespective of party.

"For the first time in the history of our state you are called upon to meet an issue which ought to be disposed of outside of politics. The question, are public servants to be held to their legal and moral responsibility to the people, is to be decided at the polls.

"Within the last two years a spectacle of official depravity and neglect of official duty in state officers has developed well calculated to arouse the indignation of a law-abiding community. A conspiracy to override the will of the people by falsifying the election records and looting the public treasury has been brought to light that calls upon the moral sentiment of the country for condemnation and rebuke. What is your duty and the remedy for this deplorable condition of state affairs? Three members of the present state administration have been charged with and indicted by a grand jury for the commission of crime and conspiracy, which a trial by an impartial jury would consign to a felon's cell for a term of years. Not only this, but the governor himself is justly charged with the criminal neglect of a clearly-defined official duty, which had he conscientiously performed would have rendered the crimes of his subordinates impossible.

"Farmers, mechanics and laboring men of all classes, professional men and Christian gentlemen, you whose sacred honor is your business capital, ministers of the Gospel whose duty it is to rebuke sin wherever found, what is your duty and how do you propose to meet this moral issue?

"With brazen effrontery these public servants, with the unquestioned evidence of their guilt confronting them, refuse to restore their ill-gotten gains to the public treasury. With unparelleled impudence they ask the voters of Michigan what they are going to do about it. Fellow-voters, it is this important question that we are called upon to answer at the polls in November. What is our duty in regard to it? The renomination of Gov. Rich fills the public mind with the fear that should he be elected similar schemes of robbery and wrong may be made possible through his incompetency or lack of official vigilance.

"It was the political outlook from a moral standpoint that sent James M. Turner into political retirement four years ago. The same moral sentiment at this time should send John T. Rich to keep him company. Fellow-freemen, when you enter the polling booth to prepare your ballots, remember the duty you owe to yourselves and your state, and, acting according to your convictions, you will make no mistake.

"W. S. H. WELTON."

PROSPECTS BRIGHT.

What a Lieutenant Governor Says Regarding the Democratic Prosperity.

A Grand Rapids gentleman, just returned from a business trip in Indiana, reports Lieut. Gov. Nye of that state as saying: "If the election had taken place six weeks ago, the republicans would have had a very substantial victory. So great has been the change, however, under the workings of the new tariff law, that the democrats are sure of success; and, if we had six weeks more of campaign, the republicans would hardly know that they were running." Similar reports from all directions. The community at large is influenced, more or less, in political action by the existing condition of business. At present, that condition has reached a point of prosperity and of promise that the results of democratic national legislation are seen and recognized. The immediate effect is to increase democratic prospects of success. If there were to be six weeks more of the campaign, the Fifth district would elect Gen. Rutherford by an overwhelming majority. As it is, his prospects are improving every day. —Grand Rapids Democrat.

Somewhat Embarrassing.

One of the republican organs which find it hard to make news pages agree with editorial pages as to the business situation is the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette. "At no time during the past year," says that paper's summary introducing business matters, "have the conditions been more favorable and the indications for a general improvement in the immediate future better than at the present time." This must be somewhat embarrassing to the editor who has been preaching that ruin must inevitably follow the enactment of the democratic tariff.—Grand Rapids Democrat.

The Best Vindication.

Hon. Spencer O. Fisher has made such a declaration of principles as leaves no doubt as to his position on the questions raised by his accusers. This unfortunate episode in the midst of his campaign should rally the loyal members of his party more strongly to his support. He has been maligned and the best vindication that can now be given him will be the united indorsement of the democratic party.—Detroit Free Press.

Republicans Without an Argument.

"Every idle factory is an invincible argument in favor of republican principles," says the Eagle. There is not an idle factory in Grand Rapids to-day and several of the factories are running overtime. The republicans are without an argument.—Grand Rapids Democrat.

The reception given last evening at the Armory in honor of the "We Nine," was one of the neatest parties ever given in Tecumseh. While not on so elaborate a scale as some, everything was tastily arranged. The rooms were made very attractive and every detail carefully looked after by those having it in charge. Those from out of town were Miss Louisa VanDe Mark, of Clinton; Messrs Roy Auchampaugh, Robert Thompson, James Cornelius, George Rose, and Miss Maggie Knapp, of Adrian. No person can read the endorsements of Sousa's Band, by musicians, press and people, without the inevitable conclusion that the band is without an existing peer, and that no music lover can afford to miss its concert to be given in Adrian, Monday afternoon, Nov. 5th. Bandmaster Sousa has fifty perfect musicians, and his vocal artist is equally renounced and equally great, and the combination is one which can hardly be resisted by the music lover, the critic, or the average popular audience.

NIGHT OF TERROR.

The Town of Portland the Scene of Hours of Lively Shooting.

PORTLAND, Oct. 28.—From midnight until nearly daybreak Saturday morning the town was in a state of terror. Revolver shots rang out frequently; the marshal was twice fired at from ambush, and half the town turned out. The trouble started on Friday in the evening when Melvin McRoberts found two strangers on his premises and drove them away. When he returned from down town he induced Marshal Copenhaven to accompany him. As the two men were passing a dark corner two shots were fired, the bullets passing through McRoberts' hat, and the two strangers that McRoberts had chased away early in the evening jumped from a dark corner. The shots aroused several citizens, who turned out to assist the marshal in rounding up the suspects. Before daylight the marshal had been fired on twice more, but with the assistance of an impromptu posse he captured Charles Stewart, Henry Wilson, Charles Clark, Fred Merrill, and Lou Noyes, all believed to be the burglars wanted at Grand Lodge. All through the night at least half the citizens of this place were either in the streets armed, or else guarding their homes and getting ready for all kinds of emergencies. Over fifty shots were fired between midnight and daylight. The men captured were all heavily armed.

DISASTER IN A MINE.

Collapse of a Roof Kills One Man—Heroic Rescue of Eleven Others.

IRONWOOD, Mich., Oct. 28.—Thursday afternoon, at the Pewabic mine, No. 1, the sandstone capping which overhung a room gave way with sufficient force to crush the timbers without any warning. The settling began in an old room above the third level, about 100 feet in height. One man was killed, and his body was soon recovered. Eleven others were entombed. The work of rescue, which was extremely difficult, began at once, as large a force as could be employed being placed in the narrow shaft to clear away the rubbish.

At 6 p. m. Friday evening the rescuers had advanced so far that the imprisoned men could be heard signaling with hammers. By 4 o'clock a. m. on Saturday it became known that all were still alive, as the rescuers were near enough to talk to them, and at 5:30 they were taken out of their living tomb.

The imprisoned men had an exceedingly narrow escape from drowning. Soon after the crash came the water rose about them until it was waist deep. A hole sufficiently large to permit the water to partly run off was drilled after much labor, but the men still suffered greatly from the cold. Not until Friday afternoon did they have real hope of rescue. Some of them assert that they have done their last mining.

STRUCK A NEW LEAD.

A Supposedly Worked-Out Copper Mine Gives Rich Promise.

MARQUETTE, Oct. 27.—About two months ago the directors of the Central Copper Mining company voted to permanently discontinue operations at their mine in Keweenaw county, as the vein, after a continuous productiveness for forty years, had apparently become exhausted. Orders were issued for pulling up the pumps, and the machinery was offered for sale. A few miners asked and obtained leave to work the slopes on tribute while the mine gradually filled with water. They began at the bottom and worked upward as the water rose. Recently they happened upon some very rich ground, and in following it they discovered that it was a spur of the main vein, the existence of which has been unknown. They endeavored to keep their good fortune a secret, but somehow the fact leaked out, and has just come to the ears of the company's management. This week orders were given the tributors to cease work forthwith. The machinery has temporarily been withdrawn from the market and the company will undoubtedly take steps to determine the extent and continuity of this new deposit. It is highly probable that this mine, which has already paid $2,000,000 in dividends, will soon be the scene of renewed activity, and the almost deserted village around it will be reinhabited.

DETROIT ENJOYS A FOX HUNT.

Riding Club Runs Over a Stiff Course—Winds Up with Dinner.

DETROIT, Oct. 27.—Detroit society was out to witness the long heralded fox hunt. At 1 o'clock people began to wend their way out Grand avenue to the course marked out for the hunt. At 3 o'clock vehicles of every kind lined the avenue. It is estimated there were 3,000 onlookers. The hunt was under the auspices of the Detroit Riding club, and several members of the London (Ont.) Hunting club were guests of the Detroiters. The hounds used were the property of the London club. The Canadian riders wore the regulation hunting costume, red coats, etc., while the Detroiters wore black, with velvet caps. The hounds were unleashed at 4 o'clock and in forty minutes the anise-seed brush was captured. The course was circuitous and was about 8 miles in length. There were some stiff jumps and some forty-three in all were taken. There were no accidents and all the participants were delighted with the experience. Misses Moran and Edson were the only ladies who joined in the chase, the London contingent failing to appear. The riding club entertained their London guests with a banquet in the evening.

IN SERIOUS TROUBLE.

A Michigan Postmistress and Her Son Charged with Robbery.

GRAND RAPIDS, Oct. 25.—Mrs. Addie B. Holland, postmistress at North Grand Rapids, and her son, F. Marion Holland, were arrested for robbing the North Grand Rapids post office, and held in $2,000 bail each, for examination. The alleged method of operation was for the son, F. Marion Holland, to make out money orders signed by his mother, drawn on various post offices of western Michigan payable to John Sutton, a myth. After the letter of advice had been sent, it is declared F. Marion Holland would visit the office on which the order was drawn and get the money. Grand Haven was frequently tapped, and the books show some one got $1,200. The other places which have suffered by the scheme were Sparta, Rockford, Coopersville and Ionia. The whole amount will reach $3,000 or more. After arrest the son made a full confession, detailing the whole scheme. His mother still denies any knowledge of the embezzlement. Mrs. Holland was appointed postmistress six years ago.

Output of the Mines.

ISHPEMING, Oct. 26.—Within less than a month the ore-shipping season will have closed. In fact, a large number of the vessels engaged in the ore trade will tie up for the winter on November 1, the marine insurance companies making it an object to do so. Shipments for the balance of the season will hardly exceed 350,000 tons, giving an output for the year of about 7,250,000 gross tons for the entire Lake Superior district, including the Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota mines.

Plaster Pool Reorganized.

GRAND RAPIDS, Oct. 27.—It has been learned here the land plaster pool, which has been somewhat demoralized for the last year, was reorganized on what is intended to be a firm basis at the secret meeting of plaster and stucco manufacturers held in Chicago last week. The reorganized trust is called the Michigan & Ohio Plaster company, and the headquarters are to be in this city, with offices in Chicago, Detroit and Sandusky.

Ellis Refuses to Help Detroit.

LANSING, Oct. 27.—Attorney General Ellis has declined the request of the city of Detroit to ask the supreme court for leave to commence quo warranto proceedings against the Citizens' Street Railway company. The attorney general holds that extension of the company's franchise for thirty years was valid. The city's next step will be to appiy for a mandamus to compel Ellis to make the application.

Must Stay in Prison.

LANSING, Oct. 27.—The supreme court quashed the writ of habeas corpus Friday by which William H. Thatcher, the Henzonia wife poisoner, sought to gain his liberty. No written opinion was handed down in the case, the simple announcement being made. Thatcher may now bring his case before the court on a writ of error, but it is believed his last hope is gone.

How to Avoid Farm Work in Summer.

It never gets so hot in the South as it does in the North. There are no sunstrokes in the South. The hotter the weather the harder the farmer has to work to save his crops, while down South the farmers do farm work during the Fall, Winter and Spring, when the weather is cool, and during the Summer they take it easy. It is always cool in the shade down South, and the nights are always cool. The thermometer seldom gets above 90. The hottest day during the past 10 years was 97 degrees.

You can grow one crop during the Winter, another during the Spring, another during the Fall on the same land each year. You will not have to spend money from each one of these crops than you can make from a similar crop in the North. You can get your land cheaper. It will cost you less to live. You can make more money. You will have better health, live longer, and enjoy life better in the South than in the North. A beautiful pamphlet telling all about it sent free to all applicants. Go South now and investigate. Low rate excursions every month over the Mobile & Ohio Railroad. E. P. Rogers, General Passenger Agent, Mobile, Ala.

Considering the inclement weather, the Perry recital at the Congregational church, Monday evening, was well attended, although the society did not quite pay expenses, about $40 being the receipts. Those who did attend were highly entertained, for this musical genius is something wonderful. It was too bad that it was so rainy for it is not often our people have an opportunity of hearing so accomplished an artist.

A party of young men, consisting of Will Every, Earl Conklin, Will Barnsdale and George Wilson, left Tuesday noon for Cheboygan county on a hunting expedition. They have been contemplating this trip for some time and expect to be gone from four to six weeks. Judging from the preparations made, the game will have to suffer. Just why the boys took Barnsdale's little dog seems a mystery to many. The boys will no doubt have a grand, good time, and they deserve to, as they have worked hard and long, and this experience will be a pleasant change for them.

In next week's issue we will have a fitting obituary for Mrs. Jennie Kimball, whose death occurred Saturday, Oct. 27th.

Christopher Theeke and wife had an experience Friday evening they do not care to have repeated. As they were returning home and near Belding Mills, the horse was frightened at something and wheeled around, upsetting the carriage and spilling them out. The horse then ran violently back to and through town. Mr. Theeke, with Peter Gragg, who came along, went east two or three miles but could not overtake the horse, so gave it up. The next morning, with his son, he started out and found the horse and carriage at Saline. The carriage was badly wrecked. Mr. Theeke's shoulder was badly bruised, but Mrs. T. escaped injury. It was a fortunate escape for them.

GEN. SPALDING'S GALL.

The Argus has been given the following letter, addressed to E. B. Norris, Esq.:

Monroe, Mich., Oct. 19, 1894.

MY DEAR COMRADE:—

As you know, I have been nominated on the Republican ticket for Congress. Although the outlook is very favorable, yet in order to win, every man who can aid us must be mustered for the fight. Therefore I ask of you, your kind aid and assistance and I am certain that you will heartily respond to this request of your old comrade, who at all times during the war had your interests at heart. You have tried me and I hope you can say that I have never been found wanting. See your neighbors, relatives and friends, and urge them to vote for your personal friend as well as the friend of all soldiers. Remember that one-half of the population of this district have grown to manhood since the war; they know nothing of the services which you rendered; they can never comprehend the privations that you endured; they cannot understand how these services sapped and undermined your constitution and left you, to-day, a prey to all the aches that human flesh is heir to.

Make a strong effort in my behalf, doing it quietly, and see that all old veterans are at the polls. It is well to have a friend at Washington.

Yours truly,

GEO. SPALDING.

Now, General, this comes pretty near a violation of the rule of G. A. R. posts, which prohibits the use of the organization as a political engine. The spirit, if not the letter, of the rule is badly "infracted." Every democratic soldier who is asked to drop his principles and vote for the general on personal grounds, should vote against him. The letter also has its humorous side. The democratic, "Dear Comrade," to whom in the instance here given the letter was addressed, has no acquaintance with the writer and does not know wherein the general was his "personal friend," and moreover does not feel like 'seeing his relatives, neighbors and friends" to get them to vote for a red-hot republican candidate. After a pathetic effort to moisten the lachrymose glands of "My Dear Comrade" with a reminder of the terrible experiences which had "sapped and undermined the constitution" of said "Dear Comrade" (of which said "Dear Comrade's" experiences the general knew nothing) he turns with vigor to the real business in hand with, "Make a strong effort in my behalf." The Argus believes that many of the old boys after reading the letter will feel as did a vet who, after listening to the lengthy appeal of a congressional candidate for votes, chiefly on the ground of his tremendous services and sacrifices in the army, sought him out after the speech, and mopping his moist eyes with a corner of his coat tail, exclaimed, "I'll be blamed if you haint done enough for your country, and I'll vote for the other man!"—Ann Arbor Argus.

CATARRHAL DYEPEPSIA.

A Discouraged Invalid Restored to Health and Happiness.

Catarrh of the stomach causes a condition known as dyspepsia or indigestion. It usually results from catarrh in the throat, but sometimes occurs in people who have never had catarrh elsewhere. The symptoms of dyspepsia are: liver complaint, biliousness, sour stomach, water-brash, bloating after eating, constipation, piles, and, in many cases, low spirits, dizzy head, sympathetic heart palpitation, pain, indigestion, and looseness of the bowels. Peru-na and Man-a-lin, taken according to directions on the bottle, will cure every one. The following is a specimen of the letters received from patients:

O. S. McQuillan, Spring Hill, Iowa, writes: "Four years ago last fall my stomach, without any previous warning, refused to perform its functions, and I soon lost strength. During this time food was forced through my stomach by using cathartics. With flesh wasted away, strength exhausted so that it took all my energy to even get into a bath tub, hopes all gone, I began to take Peru-na and Man-a-lin, following free advice which Dr. Hartman gave me. In a short time I could eat nourishing food, and the piles, kidney trouble and constipation disappeared. Flesh, strength and a splendid appetite returned, and I went to work."

For treatise on catarrh, cough, colds, consumption, and all climatic diseases of winter, send for Family Physician No. 2. Address The Peru-na Drug Manufacturing Co., Columbus, Ohio.

LABOR'S INDORSEMENT.

Letter from the Labor Leader to Hon. Spencer O. Fisher.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 2, 1894.

TO THE HON. SPENCER O. FISHER:

Dear Sir:—I am much pleased to see the position taken by you on the financial question. It is time the truth be told to the public. The fallacy of the single gold standard has so long been taught by the public press, that the people have accepted and begun to regard it as a truism, and it is indeed encouraging to see it questioned by a standard-bearer of the democratic party.

You say: "All money should be issued by the government, both coin and paper."

Had this been done since 1865, we should not be in the pitiable condition we are to-day. We should not have had tens of thousands of our people idle and hungry during the past winter.

In adopting the constitution the people have delegated their sovereign right to issue and control the currency to their representatives in congress. The people have, moreover, reserved this right to congress and denied it to the separate states. This position has been repeatedly upheld by decisions of the supreme court and of the various state courts. * * * * *

You say further: "There is no doubt in the minds of all fair-minded business men but what we must coin and use silver in this country." "The question of silver is an overshadowing one." * * * * *

I agree with you in saying "we want more money." We have not too much money. With wages eighty cents a day for common labor; wheat, fifty cents a bushel; and cotton six cents a pound, the possibility of the mass of the people extricating themselves from debt nowhere exists.

All the great nations of the earth at the present time are trying to solve this greatest factor in modern progress—the best currency. Why cannot we, the greatest of nations, solve this problem for ourselves, once and for all?

This letter is not written to you because you are a democrat, but because I believe the position you have assumed on this question is right. I can heartily join in the sentiment expressed in your recent letter to me: "I shall continue in that course, and make the fight on that line, whether I succeed at present or not, as in the end we shall win."

Sincerely,

RICHARD F. TREVELLICK.

PRESS OPINIONS.

Some of the Good Things the Papers Are Saying of Spencer O. Fisher.

Spencer O. Fisher is putting up a fight for the governorship that is proving a veritable eye-opener to the republican calamityites.—Lansing Journal.

As the Gazette anticipated, Spencer O. Fisher is making a red-hot campaign. He is an energetic, braidy and magnetic man, and is making friends wherever he goes.—Kalamazoo Gazette.

The state campaign is now far enough advanced to make it plain that in selecting Spencer O. Fisher to head the state ticket, the democrats made no mistake in picking out their candidate for the high office of governor.—Muskegon News.

In his address at the Dowagiac union fair, Hon. Spencer O. Fisher again demonstrated his gifts as a campaigner. He talks to the people as his friends and neighbors, and with conversational frankness gives them the views which he holds and which he asks them to support. His sincerity is his strength, and the more audiences he can address the more votes he will receive.—Detroit Free Press.

Spencer O. Fisher has twice served the people in congress and the record he made was without a flaw. He is a democrat all the time, and when as a manufacturer, according to republican theory, his business would be assailed and injured by the legislation he voted for, he simply said, let 'er assail, or to that effect. He wasn't there voting for himself, but in the interest of the people who sent him. No man, no combination, no power on earth can swerve Spencer O. Fisher from the path he believes to be right.—Midland Sun.

—BOOK BINDING—

We have made arrangements whereby we can take orders at this office for all kinds of binding. The work will be done in first-class style at the University Book Bindery in Ann Arbor. Bring along your magazines and portfolios that you may want bound and get our prices. Now is the time to have your books bound.

Must Have It.

Yes, you must have it. It is the only way you can learn what is going on about you; the news of the city, village or farming district in which you live. You must have your home paper, whether you can afford anything else in the way of current reading or not. And a great deal besides home news you will find in it. The editor of your home paper aims first of all to give you the home news, with intelligent and helpful comment thereon. But he does not stop there; he does the best he can to give you the general news and the best thought of the whole world. Of course he does not and cannot give you as much as you ought to have, and if you ask him about the matter he will frankly tell you so. He will also advise you what you ought to get to supplement your home paper and keep you and your growing boys and girls up with the times in the great fields of politics, sociology, finance, commerce, science, religion, art, education, and the literary and book news of the day. He will tell you that there is one weekly journal, unique in this respect, made up of carefully selected, condensed and classified extracts from the newspapers and magazines the world over, and that he has made special arrangements by which he can give you a reduced subscription rate for this unique journal, if taken in connection with the HERALD. He will tell you that the name of this journal so admirably suited to your wants is PUBLIC OPINION, that it is published at Washington, D. C., and that the regular subscription price is $2.50 per year, but that he can give you both the HERALD and PUBLIC OPINION for one year for $3.00 cash. He will also tell you that PUBLIC OPINION and the HERALD are exactly what you need during the political campaign. PUBLIC OPINION will be sent you for ten weeks on trial for fifty cents.

She Would Neither Paint Nor Powder.

"I positively will not use cosmetics," said a lady to the writer, "yet my complexion is so bad that it occasions me constant mortification. What can I do to get rid of these dreadful blotches?" "Take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription," was my prompt reply. "Your complexion indicates that you are suffering from functional derangements. Remove the cause of the blotches and your cheeks will soon wear the hue of health. The 'Favorite Prescription' is a wonderful remedy for all diseases peculiar to your sex. Its proprietors guarantee to return the money if it does not give satisfaction. But it never fails. Try it." The lady followed my advice, and now her complexion is as clear as a babe's, and she enjoys better health than she has for years.

"My dear," said Mrs. Smith, "the first year we were married you always had plenty of small change in your pocket." "Yes," replied Smith, "but I bank it now; the habit was too expensive."

In Memoriam.

MRS. LYDIA HALL.

August 24, 1817—October 12, 1894.

Who shall gather up the precious memories of her seventy-seven beautiful years on earth? Brothers and sisters, look backward and remember her in girlhood and young womanhood, bright and brave amid the privations of pioneer life, loyal and helpful as a sister or as home-maker for the one who had chosen her as his companion. Children and grandchildren treasure the blessedness of abounding mother-love that filled every space of daily life with countless tender ministries, and other hearts sharing her love through kinship have from earliest childish remembrance counted the dear old home with "Auntie" in the midst as the ideal of true, sweet family life. Memories of steadfast friendship, of ready sympathy for the sorrowful, of timely care and helpfulness for the suffering, and of warm-hearted interest in forwarding every good work remain in the hearts of the people among whom she lived, as memorials of a beneficent christian life. The value of her christian faith can never be doubted by any who saw what it wrought in her own character and for the good of others during sixty years of consecrated service for the Master. How full of tender suggestion was a thought in the sacred farewell service, that the departure of our loved one was "The consummation of her noble life; her glorious reward; her bridal day, when her hands clasped again the welcoming ones in the Heavenly home from whom she had long been separated." Very suggestive, too, were the tokens brought by loving hands: palm branches for victory; pure lilies for immortality; and pansies, tiny lily-bells and roses for peace, fragrance and beauty, in remembrance of the beautiful life of a true mother.

We asked for thee new lease of life,
Beloved! from our sight passed on;
God gave to thee, beyond our ken,
Beyond our highest thought of good,
Immortal life at His right hand.

We asked thy presence on our way,
The love-light shining in thy face;
God set the light in higher place,—
A radiance from the heavenly home
To beckon us to follow on.

We mark thy careful footsteps here,
As footprints for our feet to tread,
With light from heaven illumining
The way to go, we follow on
To heaven's reward, we follow on.

Oh rare, sweet life so close to ours!
Transformed to likeness of thy King;
What must thy wondrous beauty be!
What shall it, glorified, become,
Unfolding through eternal years.

GREAT PAINTINGS OF EUROPE.

Feast for Art Lovers.

Of the many publications which come to us there is none which merits so much commendation, for its excellent typographical appearance, high-class illustrations and interesting reading, as "Campbell's Illustrated Monthly." This magazine fills a long-felt want in Chicago, as heretofore that city has not furnished us a publication devoted to a high-class form of illustrations.

The current number is a galaxy of the richest illustrations ever published. Teere is a frontispiece of Oliver Wendell Holmes, and a portrait of the late Prof. Swing, with sketches of both these men. Many of the most gorgeous paintings of Europe, worth several hundred thousand dollars are reproduced in the finest copper-plate engravings. Among them being 'Autumn,' 'Winter,' 'Waiting for His Share,' 'Perfectly at Home,' 'Evening Hours,' 'Cupid Leading the Choir,' 'A Reading from Homer,' 'The Favored Swain,' 'The Prize Jerseys,' 'Ready for the Hunt,' 'My Mother-in-Law.'" Also leading articles on the Chicago University, all the buildings and grounds being illustrated, together with a most interesting description and groupe of illustrations of the "House of Pansa at Pompeii." Many more rich illustrations are to be found in the Home Department, Art Department, etc.

This is beyond question the richest Illustrated Magazine published, and as an educator in the higher realm of Art, Science and Literature, it should be found on every family table. See publisher's special offer. Enclose 25 cents in stamps for October number. J. B. Campbell, 215 Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

A DOCTOR'S PHILANTHROPY.

Thousand's Afflicted by Chronic Catarrh Under Free Treatment.

The first day of November, 1893, Dr. Hartman gave his consent to take charge of the treatment of 10,000 cases of chronic catarrh free of charge. The announcement was at once published in all leading papers, when the applications came pouring in from every State in the Union. With a large number of clerks and stenographers to assist him, the doctor actually directs the treatment of thousands of cases by correspondence, which costs the patients nothing except the necessary medicines, which are obtained at the nearest drug-store. To become a patient it is only necessary to send name and address, describe symptoms, and minute directions as to diet, sanitary regulations, and other advice will be sent promptly.

Whatever Dr. Hartman is known the name of Pe-ru-na has become a household word. It is safe to say that no medicine in existence is used by so many families as Pe-ru-na. This is especially true of this time of the year, when the people are liable to catarrhal affections, coughs colds, grippe, etc. Pe-ru-na has cured more cases of chronic catarrh than all other medicines combined. The great majority of those who use it buy the remedy themselves, use it according to directions, not even reporting their case to Dr. Hartman until after they are entirely cured. But now that a limited number of cases can secure the personal attention of Dr. Hartman free of charge, it is not to be wondered at that many prefer to do so. Pe-ru-na never fails to cure catarrh when properly used.

The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company of Columbus, Ohio, are sending free to any address a book on chronic catarrh which gives the latest treatment for catarrh, coughs, colds, la grippe, bronchitis, and all other affections of head, throat and lungs.

Neely—Dewey.

Between seventy-five and a hundred invited guests assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. B. Neely, of Cambridge, on Thursday evening, November 1st, to witness the marriage of their daughter Minnie and Mr. Cassius M. Dewey.

Promptly at half-past six o'clock, to the familiar strains of the famous and time-honored Mendelssohn wedding march, played by Miss Stella Dewey, the bridal party entered the parlor and took their places beneath a canopy of clematis, where Rev. C. E. Thomas, of the Presbyterian church in Brooklyn, in an impressive and beautiful, but simple service, spoke the words that made them man and wife. Mr. Victor F. Dewey, brother of the groom, acted as best man, and Miss Anna C. Boneman, of Brooklyn, as bridesmaid. At the close of the service, during the rendition of Sydney Smith's Op. 33, the happy couple received the congratulations and good wishes of the entire company. Elegant refreshments were served, which seemed to satisfy all the cravings of the inner man.

The house was profusely decorated with chrysanthemums, evergreen and autumn berries. They were beautiful in their neat arrangement and natural simplicity. A fine array of elegant and useful presents were received, and spoke with silent emphasis of the estimation in which the young couple are held by their friends.

The bride was tastily and beautifully attired in white henrietta, with ribbon and lace garniture, and carried a large bouquet of bridal roses. Miss Boneman was dressed in pink cashmere and carried pink roses and carnations. The gentlemen were in the usual conventional black.

At 9:30 o'clock the happy pair left in a carriage for Napoleon, where they took the train for their future home in Schoolcraft, Mich. It was finished, and Miss Minnie Neely was no more, but had blossomed into sweet womanhood as Mrs. Dewey.

Both the bride and groom have always lived in Cambridge, have moved in our best society, and will be sadly missed by their many associates, who unite in wishing them all the happiness and prosperity that comes to mortal kin, for they deserve the best.

There were guests present from Philadelphia, Pa., Hillsdale, Decatur, Adrian, Tecumseh, Raisin, Napoleon and Brooklyn.

TECUMSEH, MICH., NOV. 8, 1894.

Election is over for this year. Now let every man stop talking politics, buckle down to work and boom business.

As this page goes to press on Tuesday, we can express no opinion on the result. Full returns may be found on another page of the paper.

James G. Blaine, Jr., is a law student at the University of Virginia, and has earned a big reputation as the center rush of the University foot-ball team.

It is stated that the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge will confer honorary degrees upon United States Ambassador Thomas F. Bayard, when he returns to England.

There is a horrible rumor that the word "obey" is to be put in the man's part of the marriage ceremony. The women must really not go too far. The men are hard to land as it is.—Atchison Globe.

The Chicago Dispatch says: We cannot help but feel that Mr. Pullman would materially add to the hilarity of the political situation if he were to subscribe $250,000 to each one of the campaign funds.

Fact is stranger than fiction, and, to paraphrase another axiom, coincidence makes strange bedfellows. The company playing "The Burglar" lost their valuables through a burglary in a Pennsylvania town the other night.

The monopolist believes in competition between those who must live by their labor, and he stands by waiting to accept the offer of those willing to work for the lowest amount that will sustain life when this competition has compelled it.

Chairman Wilson's canvass of his district continues to be marked with cheerful courage, pertinacity and eloquence on his part and abounding enthusism on the part of the people. All the indications point to his election by a substantial majority.

Harper's Bazar has this news from the seat of war: "This," said the enterprising contributor, "is a map illustrating certain phases of the Chinese-Japanese war." "We never touch upon such matters," said the editor. "This is a fashion paper." "Good!" cried the enterprizing contributor. "That being so you can use this same map for a pattern. Cutting up here along the Corean boundary, and running down here and ending up at Pekin, will give you the finest pattern for a winter dolman, suited to a woman of 40, you ever saw."

In 1888, speaking on the Mills bill Thomas B. Reed said: "We will keep our wealth here. We mean to do it, even if we build a Chinese wall of tariff taxes around this country." To keep all our wealth in this country would be to make wheat, corn, cotton and pork unsalable. Then that form of wealth would lose much of its value, the standard of living among producers would be lowered, wages would be reduced and distress would ensue. McKinleyism has been for four years enough of a Chinese wall to cause some of these phenomena.

The Courier-Journal says: Despite the depreciation in the value of cotton the South is better off than any other section of this great and glorious country. Crops of all kinds are enormous. Farmers are claiming in some sections as high a yield of corn as seventy bushels to the acre. Everything has been on a big scale this year. The flowers are bigger and finer, the corn crop is larger and better, the cotton is finer and there is more of it, and even the babies weigh more and are prettier, and there are many more of them than in ordinary years. Even with the prevailing low prices the South is very well-to-do, thank you!

George P. Rowell & Co., the well-known advertising firm of New York, issue a publication called "Printers' Ink," and in a recent issue, in referring to the position of Hon. Tom. Reed regarding the readjustment of the tariff for protection on the McKinley basis, the Printers' Ink says:

Printers' Ink believes that the McKinley foolishness had more to do with the panic of 1893 than any influence emanating from silver or democratic rule; and Printers's Ink is just as good a republican as the Chicago Inter-Ocean or the New York Tribune. The republican who wishes to meddle with the tariff any more within the next half a dozen years is seeking an opportunity to commit political suicide.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, Nov. 3, 1894.

Well, the campaign is virtually over, but there is very little that is certain about the result. Senator Faulkner, chairman of the democratic committee, still claims that his party will elect a majority of the House, and the same claim is made for his party by Representative Babcock, of the republican committee, while chairman Taubeneck, of the populist committee, is more positive than ever that the populists will hold the balance of power in the House, and also in the Senate, after the fourth of next March; and at both the republican and democratic headquarters they readily admit their fear that Mr. Taubeneck's claim may be good, as far as the House is concerned, but at both they ridicule his Senate claim. Very few people can be found here who really believe that the democrats will elect a majority of the next House. The general impression among those who sift all obtainable information without prejudice is that the margin between the republicans and democrats in the next House will be very narrow. That is why so many people believe, against their wishes in lots of cases, that the populists have a better chance to secure the balance of power than either of the other parties have to secure a majority.

There is no longer any doubt about President Cleveland's position. It is as clear as if he had said so that he doesn't care a straw about the result of the campaign, and that his position has weakened his party is certain, although your correspondent lacks the proof to endorse the current gossip which says that it was his intention that it should. According to this gossip Mr. Cleveland desires the defeat of his party because of its failure to follow his ideas in Congressional legislation, believing that such a defeat will be a vindication of himself and will result in giving him absolute control of the party hereafter, and most of all he desires the defeat of Senator Hill, because he believes a defeat will remove him from the field of possible rivals for the next Presidential nomination. According to a story told this week, Senator Faulkner, in company with Hon. Don M. Dickinson, called at the White House to make a last effort to get Mr. Cleveland to say something that might be used to help his party and to close the mouths of those who are publicly saying that a democrat cannot please the President more than by remaining away from the polls. Senator Faulkner has a very persuasive tongue, and he proceeded to work it for all he knew how for something like half an hour when he was interrupted by Mr. Cleveland, who said: "By the way, Faulkner, do you remember what you told me last spring about the fishing in your section of West Virginia?" Mr. Faulkner doesn't need to have a brick house fall on him before he takes a hint.

A reason has been found for the action of the German government in shutting out American cattle and dressed beef from every German port. It isn't the very flimsy excuse—the fear of Texas fever—given by the German government, nor is it to retaliate for the discrimination against German refined sugar made by the sugar schedule of the new tariff. It is, if the discoverers are not mistaken, the result of the political "pull" upon the German government of the class of Germans known as "agricultural barons," a powerful "trust," it would be called in this country, which finds American competition undesirable. It was the same combination that succeeded in having the first embargo placed upon American meat and meat products, not only by Germany but also by France and upon the same pretended basis—sanitary grounds. When Bismarck was in power the "agricultural barons" wielded great influence in Germany, for the very good reason that he is himself one of them. Those familiar with the manner in which the first embargo was put on American meats and the long and strong efforts that were necessary to get it removed knows that it was not removed on account of American diplomacy, but because of protests made by Germans of the poorer classes against the high prices which the "agricultural barons" were making them pay for meat, in the absence of competition. It is also said that attempts are now being made to get our meats again shut out of France, and that the same parties are behind them. It will be easy enough for this government to show that Germany has nothing to fear from Texas fever, but it may not be so easy to get the embargo off our meats, if this statement be correct as to its origin.

Chicago's male registration foots up 302,424. This indicates a population of a million and a half. No wonder New York's "Greater New York" association is very active. The Gothamites will soon have to play second fiddle if they don't haul in Brooklyn.

"WHERE FARMING PAYS."

Is it in the north-west with wheat at less than 50 cents a bushel, with zero weather and blizzards in winter and cyclones in summer? No! Go to Virginia; land is cheap, climate perfect all the year round. Ask any one who knows and he will tell you that in the tidewater section one acre of land has produced as high as $2,000.00 in one season. It is worth looking into. Apply to C. H. Boyce, Gen'l. Land and Excursion Agent, Coldwater, Mich., for pamphlet "Facts for Farmers" free. No statements made that are not corroborated by practical farmers who have grown rich on their Virginia farms.

Chicago's Wonderful Growth.

The total male registration in Chicago this year is 313,676. The registration in New York is 309,931. Upon the basis of one voter to seven of the population this would give Chicago 28,000 more inhabitants than New York.

After every explanation that can be made of this showing, the fact remains that Chicago has for the moment beaten New York in the contest for first rank in voters and population. That Chicago has achieved this result by consolidating the territory and population that naturally belongs to her does not detract from her credit. That the Greater Chicago is bigger than the smaller New York is a reflection upon our sagacity, public spirit and enterprise, not a reflection upon the methods of the mighty metropolis of the West.

Chicago has an area of 189 square miles, while the technical New York has less than 40 square miles. The Western city is 24 miles long north and south and 10.5 miles wide at the broadest part. Its increase in population is without a parallel in the history of the world. It is the greatest triumph in the annals even of American growth, energy and enterprise.

The city was a mere trading post sixty-three years ago. Its charter is dated March 4, 1837, when the population was 3,170, of whom only 703 were voters. In 1840 the population had increased to 4,470, in 1850 to 29,963, in 1860 to 112,172, in 1870 to 298,977, in 1880 to 503,185 and in 1890 to 1,099,850. Upon the basis of this year's registration the newspapers of Chicago claim a population of 2,175,732.

This is indeed a marvellous showing. It is one of which all Americans have reason to be proud, even as they were proud of that greatest and most beautiful of Chicago's achievements, the White City of the World's Fair.—N. Y. World.

HAIL TO THE CHIEF.

Here's Something Every Michigan Voter, Irrespective of Party, Should Read.

Sometimes democrats stray away from the fold and lose sight of the cardinal principles which entitle them to fellowship with the party of the people and the significant appellation of democrat. The Enquirer likes to make mention of instances where the name of democrat is most appropriately applied. For example—Spencer O. Fisher, the democratic candidate for governor of Michigan, has declared himself against national bank currency and for the government issue of all currency, the immediate recognition of silver and its free coinage, without consulting the wishes of European or other foreign governments. He undoubtedly voices the sentiments of four-fifths of the voters of Michigan, and they would elect him governor if freed from party shackles and allowed to express their opinion at the ballot box.

It is a source of great satisfaction to know that a candidate for governor has the courage, independence and manliness to establish his right to be called a true democrat by proclaiming such principles. It is not a legitimate function of banking to issue currency. Whatever is issued as money or currency should be supplied by the government. Silver has been for thousands of years the favorite money of the people. It is to-day the only money known to a thousand millions of the human family. The democratic party is the party of the people. If the intelligent people of Michigan would elect Mr. Fisher governor there would be at least one democratic governor in the United States. The trend of public opinion is in the direction briefly outlined by this candidate for gubernatorial honors. The money power is still in authority, but a people determined to be free is stronger than the gold worshipers and bankers combined.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

HOW'S THIS FOR GRATITUDE?

Incident of the Characteristic Bigotry and Knavishness of the Republican Party.

In his lecture at Port Huron recently, Mr. Finerty mentioned the services of Gen. Shields in Mexico as the commander of a brigade under Gen. Scott, but did not make all that could have been made out of the gallant work of that Catholic Irishman.

At the battle of Cerro Gordo he was shot through the body with an ounce ball of the heavy muskets of those days, and a silk handkerchief was drawn through his lungs from breast to back to clear the fearful wound that was thought mortal, but he survived it with a ghastly scar that testified to his courage, loyalty and patriotism.

He returned to Illinois and became active in politics on the democratic side. In the midst of the know-nothing excitement when Catholics, and particularly Catholic Irish, were being proscribed, Shields came before the people for election to the United States senate, and in answer to the bigotry that disputed his claim for high office because of his religion, he would bare his scarred breast to his audiences as proof that he was an American who loved his country and its flags as dearly as life itself and that his life blood was drained almost to its last drop at Cerro Gordo, where

"Columbia wrote another page
In her bright book of glory."

The awful scar of that wound appealed to the brave and patriotic people of Illinois with an argument that was irresistible. Though dumb it spoke with an eloquence that was irresistible and carried the heroic Shields back to the senate despite the bitterness of the zealot and the knavishness of the demagogue.

TWO EXCELLENT REASONS.

Why You Should Vote the Democratic Legislative Ticket.

Two reasons should induce democrats to stand firmly by their nominees on the legislative ticket, namely: The extravagant expenditures of the last republican legislature, which appropriated nearly a half million dollars more than the democratic legislature of 1891, and the fact that two United States senators are to be elected. The democratic party has boldly named its candidates, but the republicans have put the offices up to the highest bidders—those who will pay the most into the campaign fund to be used in electing a republican legislature. It has been the practice for years for the candidates for the United States senate to pay the expenses of the candidates for the legislature, in consideration of their vote in the legislative caucus, and as there are four republican aspirants, the bidding is likely to be lively. The second reason is that the nominees of the democratic party are the most capable and trustworthy men before the public, worthy the support of all citizens.—Bay City Times.

McKinley in Michigan.

McKinley is smooth and oily—as greasy as glycerine. He can mourn in the most touching manner and therefore he devoted much space to his exhibit of grief. He presented his protectionist argument in its best light. His conclusions were based upon false premises, yet one was compelled to admire the astuteness with which he concealed the weak points in defense of his hobby, and the show of sincerity he made in lauding the exploded theories of McKinley.—Jackson Patriot.

The Most Convincing Kind of Proof.

That the "A. P. A." charges against Spencer O. Fisher are without foundation is shown by the fact that Congressman T. A. E. Weadock, of Bay City, is warmly supporting him. Mr. Weadock is one of the best known Roman Catholic laymen in the country, one of the highest officers in the Ancient Order of Hibernians. Mr. Weadock would not support Mr. Fisher if there was the slightest foundation for the story.—Grand Rapids Democrat.

The Ticket is Invincible.

Read the ticket over. There is not a weak spot in it. Every man adds to its strength, and in its entirety it is invincible.—Detroit Free Press.

WHERE HE STANDS.

The Stable Convictions of Hon. S. O. Fisher on Important Issues.

Mr. Fisher's attitude on the tariff question was clearly defined by his course during his congressional career and it has not since been changed. He might be called an advanced tariff reformer—one of those rare tariff reformers, a consistent one, in that he does not seek protection to his own industries and free trade for everything else. He is an extensive wool grower, and his reasons for advocating free wool were clearly set forth in his famous letter to Congressman Burrows last spring in reply to Burrows' charge against him that if he were a sheep breeder he would not be a free wool disciple. Lumbering, however, being his chief business, it was for a duty on lumber that he would reasonably be expected to contend. The course of some of the republican lumbermen of Bay City during the democratic convention at Grand Rapids in selecting a committee, with Mr. Fisher as chairman, to go to Washington and urge the rejection of the Allen amendment putting all wood products on the free list, is spoken of yet as a scheme to place him in an embarrassing position. The talk is that their purpose was to make him compromise himself by appearing as an advocate of a duty on lumber while professing to be a tariff reformer. If this really was the object it didn't work, for Mr. Fisher positively refused to be one of the committee. He had been appointed without his knowledge, and the proposed mission was one in which he did not care to engage.

Mr. Fisher has never been anything but an uncompromising democrat who, while insisting that the best government always can be given by the democratic party, yet is not so invariably partisan that he will not deny some merit in a political opponent, nor will he permit himself to be blinded to the shortcomings of public officials of his own political creed. He proved this by opposing the last democratic administration of West Bay City for its arrogant methods. Politics has claimed considerable of his attention ever since he was old enough to vote. Before he came to the Bay district he had been an alderman at Hillsdale. In West Bay City, where he has made his home, he has been alderman, mayor, school trustee for fifteen years, and twice this district's representative in congress. In addition, as is well known, he has frequently represented his party in state and national conventions. As mayor and alderman he made a record by his efforts in the direction of retrenchment, and, as one citizen remarked, to get the city departments on the same kind of a basis as that upon which he built his own business.

As president of the state bankers' association and principal owner of the Lumbermen's state bank of West Bay City, Mr. Fisher's opinion on the silver question is of more importance than the declaration of a mere candidate for office. He is an out and out silver man who regards the reenactment of the silver law repealed in 1873 and the remonetization of silver as the true solution of the issue. He wants to see silver on a parity with gold without any qualification and recognized as legal tender for every obligation.—Detroit Evening News.

ON THE RUN.

Republicans Full of Doubt and Concern for the Outcome.

The republican papers and speakers in this state seek to make it appear that they are perfectly confident, absolutely sure, of an overwhelming victory in the coming election. They ridicule any suggestion of the possibility of defeat. Now, for men who are so sure of anything as these republicans claim to be of triumph in Michigan, the most extraordinary steps are taken, the most remarkable efforts made. Rarely, if ever, in a presidential campaign have the republicans of Michigan put forth so great efforts as are manifested at this time, when they profess to believe that no special effort is necessary. In every congressional district and in every county there is an appearance of that sort of doubt concerning the prospects which manifests itself in desperate efforts to keep up an appearance of confidence. The most eminent speakers among the republicans of the country are imported into Michigan and the most desperate efforts are made to produce a showing of hope. The fact is the democrats have their opponents on the run, and there is a splendid prospect of running them into defeat. The presence of every outside republican speaker in the limits of the state is a confession of increasing republican weakness and lack of hope.—Grand Rapids Democrat.

Wool and McKinley.

When American wool began to fall in price immediately after the passage of the McKinley tariff act, Mr. McKinley said the decrease in price was not due to his bill, but to the decline in the prices of wool abroad. Now the McKinley press is raising a howl because the price of wool in foreign markets are advancing and they say it is caused by the free wool of the new tariff. But if the decline in foreign wool in 1892 carried the price of American wool down, will not the advance in foreign wool now carry the price of American wool up? It is certain that the price of American wool is advancing.—Bay City Times.

Can No Longer Be Disputed.

Says the Philadelphia Ledger: "The improvement of business conditions can be no longer successfully disputed; it is so general and so manifest as to render ridiculous those unscrupulous partisan organs which, closing their eyes to the truth, continue to ignore it as if it had no real existence."

Red Heads and a White Horse.

It is in accordance with the old superstition that some of the enemies of Hon. S. O. Fisher should get "red-headed" because his white horse knew no better than to lead every procession that took place in West Bay City.—Detroit Free Press.

TUESDAY'S ELECTION.

We have met the enemy and we are theirs.

The Republicans had their innings last Tuesday and the result was a landslide for that party. They swept this county, this congressional district and this state. Hill was snowed under in New York state by a majority exceeding 100,000, and the Tammany tiger is pretty badly demoralized. The Republicans also gain the Lower House of Congress and will have a good working majority in that body.

The returns given below show the result in detail here in Tecumseh.

IN TECUMSEH.

The election boards here were constituted as follows:

First Precinct—
Thos. Elliott, J. F. N. Bowen, Jehiel Davidson.

Clerks—Geo. S. Field, Sam'l. J. McClure.
Gate-keepers—Will F. Baker, Thos. Wyrrell.
Challengers—Frank Bauer, Albert N. Conger.

The first name under each office in the table below is the Republican candidate; the second, Democrat; the third, Prohibitionist; the fourth, Populist.

Chicago's Wonderful Growth.

The total male registration in Chicago this year is 313,676. The registration in New York is 309,931. Upon the basis of one voter to seven of the population this would give Chicago 26,000 more inhabitants than New York.

After every explanation that can be made of this showing, the fact remains that Chicago has for the moment beaten New York in the contest for first rank in voters and population. That Chicago has achieved this result by consolidating the territory and population that naturally belongs to her does not detract from her credit. That the Greater Chicago is bigger than the smaller New York is a reflection upon our sagacity, public spirit and enterprise, not a reflection upon the methods of the mighty metropolis of the West.

Chicago has an area of 182 square miles, while the technical New York has less than 40 square miles. The Western city is 24 miles long north and south and 10.5 miles wide at the broadest part. Its increase in population is without a parallel in the history of the world. It is the greatest triumph in the annals even of American growth, energy and enterprise.

The city was a mere trading post sixty-three years ago. Its charter is dated March 4, 1837, when the population was 3,170, of whom only 703 were voters. In 1840 the population had increased to 4,470, in 1850 to 29,963, in 1860 to 112,172, in 1870 to 298,977, in 1880 to 503,185 and in 1890 to 1,099,850. Upon the basis of this year's registration the newspapers of Chicago claim a population of 2,175,732.

This is indeed a marvellous showing. It is one of which all Americans have reason to be proud, even as they were proud of that greatest and most beautiful of Chicago's achievements, the White City of the World's Fair.—N. Y. World.

TEMPERANCE TOPICS.

(Edited by the Tecumseh W. C. T. U.)

A MOTTO FOR A SALOON.

According to a recent census, Philadelphia has 16,859 unemployed working people."

No one who knows anything about the struggle for existence in the large cities is likely to read the above item without a shudder. It means hunger and hardship for thousands of men. The condition in Philadelphia is an illustration of conditions elsewhere, as winter begins to breathe his icy breath upon the land. The people of America are not brutes, and the distress that prevails touches their hearts, and numberless provisions are made to relieve the suffering and feed the hungry.

But out of the office of a certain New York journal comes in the midst of all this destitution the following brutal statement:

"The man, woman or child who goes hungry in this country has only himself or herself to blame, and if he or she dies of starvation it is simply suicide."

The journal that delivers itself of this atrocious sentiment, which, if accepted as true, would paralyze compassion and dry up all the springs of charity, is The Wine and Spirit Gazette, of this city, one of the most prominent journals of the prosperous liquor trade. And of all the other journals that represent that business in this country not one, thou' a month has passed by, has uttered a word of protest!

Think of it! This business, which preys upon the weak and defenseless to the extent of twenty millions a week which gorges itself on the earnings that should have clad the shivering forms of women and children and should have filled larders empty the Lord only knows how long—this business, glutted with wealth and swaggering in rotund prosperity, looks out upon the unspeakable misery it has caused and blandly meets all reproaches with the heartless assurance that

"The man, woman or child who goes hungry in this country has only himself or herself to blame, and if he or she dies of starvation it is simply suicide."

Not the fault of unjust laws or an unjust system, mind you! Not somebody else's fault! Oh, no—"the man, woman or child . . has only himself or herself to blame." At least, one would have thought, the children might have been left out of this arraignment. Surely the little ones crying for bread in the dark districts of this city, surely they are entitled to pity and free from responsibility for their own suffering. But The Wine and Spirit Gazette, organ of the pampered brewers and distillers, the swaggering wholesalers and retailers of alcoholic poisons, declares that every "man, woman or child who goes hungry in this country has only himself or herself to blame;" and by their silence its patrons and other organs of the same trade assent to the black and heartless words.

It is a characteristic utterance, wonderfully appropriate coming from the organ of a trade that thrives on the misery of others, that waxes prosperous on the deprivations of its customers that is as cruel as hell, as relentless as fate in the pursuit of its victims till the last cent is drained out of their pockets and the last spark of manhood or womanhood out of their hearts.

Hang it up in every saloon, gentlemen of the trade"! Frame that utterance and put it along side the license on your walls! It would be very fitting there. Hang it over the doors in your elegant homes, you wealthy brewers, that your children may learn to use it in defense of their father's business! Hang it in the hymn-book rack of your church pews, engrave it in your hearts, for as God lives and humanity suffers you will need some justification to yourself on your dying bed and to your Maker on the Day of Judgment; and what could be better than this one which your organ furnishes you and you by your silence have accepted, namely:

"The man, woman or child who goes hungry in this country has only himself or herself to blame, and if he or she dies of starvation it is simply suicide."

Chicago's male registration foots up 302,424. This indicates a population of a million and a half. No wonder New York's "Greater New York" association is very active. The Gothamites will soon have to play second fiddle if they don't haul in Brooklyn.

"WHERE FARMING PAYS."

Is it in the north-west with wheat at less than 50 cents a bushel, with zero weather and blizzards in winter and cyclones in summer? No! Go to Virginia; land is cheap, climate perfect all the year round. Ask any one who knows and he will tell you that in the tidewater section one acre of land has produced as high as $2,000.00 in one season. It is worth looking into. Apply to C. H. Bovee, Gen'l. Land and Excursion Agent, Coldwater, Mich., for pamphlet "Facts for Farmers" free. No statements made that are not corroborated by practical farmers who have grown rich on their Virginia farms.

THAT JOYFUL FEELING

With the exhilarating sense of renewed health and strength and internal cleanliness, which follows the use of Syrup of Figs, is unknown to the few who have not progressed beyond the old time medicines and the cheap substitutes sometimes offered but never accepted by the well informed.

Why in thunder doesn't the price of sugar go up? That's what the republicans who have been howling about the Sugar Trust want to know.

While in Britton Saturday, we took occasion to call on some of the hustling merchants there. We found all as busy as bees. In Lee Bros' the boys were selling people to shoes, hats and caps, and the array of each placed before their customers were very attractive. In Hardson's they were showing dress goods and other goods in great profusion. We found Jas. Haight busy as usual in his cosy hardware store which is a model of neatness; the stock is nicely arranged, complete, and tastily displayed. Owing to our time being limited we could get no further, but on our next visit will call on the rest of the busness men. Everywhere there was an air of business that was refreshing.

For the Star Course this season the Maud Powell String Quartet will be one of the greatest attractions. Miss Mabel Hayden, whose own musical education and talents render her well qualified to judge, has written the following graceful tribute to Miss Powell's art:

Dear Mr. Anderson:—I cannot resist the temptation to write thanking you and the others of the committee for bringing Miss Maude Powell here this year. She is the only lady violinist who played at the International Music Festival at Vienna two years ago, and she is an American girl! She is ranked with Camilla Urso and Madame Neruda, and we Americans have every right to be proud of her. Her violin is a rare Cremona whose sweetness she brings out with grace and skill. I have not heard the Mlersch Brothers, her support, but I know their world-wide reputation. It is one of the gala evenings, three celebrated artists! I know there are many who feel like thanking you all for such a musical treat.

With sincerity,
MABEL HAYDEN.

The free reading room at the Universalist church was a happy thought on the part of the pastor. It is well patronized.

Ben Lauer, of Cambridge, was a caller at the HERALD office last Tuesday. He does not get down this way as often as he used to.

An apple twig, containing several blossoms, taken from a tree in N. M. Sutton's orchard, was on exhibition in this office last week.

Mrs. F. P. Coder, of Norvell, was in town Tuesday morning, on her way home from Elgin Ill., where she has been visiting friends for a couple of weeks.

The Tecumseh Coal & Lumber Co. are utilizing their large brick office near the Lake Shore depot, in a new way, having put a fine stock of groceries therein. They invite a share of the public patronage.

Cyrus W. Wells, of Minneapolis, does not forget his old Tecumseh friends. He is hustling in business as usual, and does not grow old a particle. He finds the HERALD a very welcome weekly visitor in his household.

Garlinghouse & Co. are now putting agents on the road to sell their Stimpson scales. They have had some special trunks made to carry a sample scale. These trunks are models of convenience, made by M. Maier & Co. of Detroit. The outlook is good for building up a large trade for the sale of these scales.

Rev. C. M. Brown's second lecture on the "Life of Christ," illustrated with the stereopticon, was given at the Presbyterian church last Sunday evening. The lantern worked smoothly and the descriptive portions were exceedingly entertaining. About forty views were presented to an audience that filled every seat in the church.

Maurice Nay, of Holloway, who has been sick with the typhoid fever for some time, died last Monday. The Holloway items in the HERALD came from his pen, and they were always spicy and newsy. Maurice was a young man of excellent character and bright promise and a universal favorite among his acquaintances. The funeral was held this forenoon at the Universalist church, conducted by the pastor.

Geo. W. Knapp wife and child left Tuesday for St. Louis, Mich. He will there join a party of friends for a hunting expedition in the northern part of the lower peninsula. While George is slaughtering deer, bears and wolves, Mrs Knapp will visit friends. They expect to be gone some weeks.

Mesdames Avery, Hanly, Jordan, Spaulding, Thompson and Aldridge, of Beers Relief Corps, attended the district convention at Hudson, Oct. 25th. They had a lovely day given to them and upon arriving at Hudson, were highly entertained. The meeting was instructive and much interest manifested.

Mr. Wendling is a native Illinoisian—had a University Education—a young lawyer with a large practice—received an invitation from one of the leading bureaus to lecture—accepted the invitation intending to remain on the platform only a few weeks. His lectures achieved instant and universal popularity. He has since given a portion of each year to work. His home is at Washington, D.C. In reponse to many inquiries we state that he is an Episcopalian. He devotes most of his time now to literary work. His private affairs are such that he cannot fill many engagements. One hundred and thirty nights upon the platform during the first five months of his career as a popular orator, and over 1,400 nights in the eight following years, is Mr. Wendling's record—a record not surpassed since the earlier days of Beecher, Gough and Phillips.

PRECAUTIONARY MEASURES.

The State Board of Health Advocates a System of Disease Inspection.

LANSING, Nov. 1.—Secretary Baker, of the state board of health, said that an attempt would be made this winter to secure an appropriation by the legislature for a contagious disease inspection. What is actually needed in this state, he says, is three experts, whose duty shall be to look after outbreaks of diphtheria, scarlet fever and smallpox. Efforts to secure an appropriation for the salaries of such experts have been made to the legislature without avail, but Secretary Baker says that an appropriation of a few thousand dollars for such a purpose would save many thousands of dollars to the people of the state as well as in the saving of many lives. At present the state board of health has no one whom it can detail to make these inspections and no fund upon which to draw for such a purpose. The necessity for such an appropriation and the establishment of such inspection is illustrated by the fact that the outbreak of diphtheria in Elkton, Huron county, which has lasted eighteen months has already cost the county over $4,000.

ATTEMPTED TRIPLE MURDER.

Two Women Will Die from the Blows of a Hammer.

COLUMBIAVILLE, Nov. 1.—At 3 o'clock a. m. Wednesday an unknown man broke into Fred Skinner's house, about 3 miles from here and attempted to murder Mr. and Mrs. Skinner and the latter's mother, Mrs. Stanley. The man entered the house through the cellar, went first to Mrs. Stanle's room and struck her with a hammer, crushing her skull. He then went to Skinner's room, struck Mrs. Skinner three times on the head and face and attempted to brain Skinner, but the latter warded off the blow with a pillow. The murderer then ran from the house and has so far eluded capture.

The deed was done with a hammer taken from Skinner's tool chest. Mrs. Skinner and her mother are just alive, but there is little hope of the recovery of either. Mrs. Skinner's life was insured for $2,000 and suspicion points to those who would be benefited by her death.

The mayor shortly afterward asked the common council to impeach Goodfellow, the president of the commission, for malfeasance in office. On this charge Goodfellow's present suit is based. This makes a total of $80,000 damages claimed against the mayor, all growing out of the same controversy.

LAND GRANT LITIGATION.

Important Michigan Case Soon to Be Heard by the Supreme Court.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—The supreme court will hear arguments within the next few days in the somewhat famous land grant cases from the state of Michigan, in which the Lake Superior Ship Canal, Railway and Iron company is plaintiff and Walter Cunningham, Hugh Finan and Michael Donohue the defendants. These are only test cases. Their determination will settle a long contested dispute over the ownership of about 400,000 acres of valuable land. This land the canal and railroad company claims under grants made by congress through the state of Michigan in 1864 for the purpose of aiding in the construction of the canal. The defendants and many other people settled upon the land and made tender of declaratory stamps under the preemption law which the local registers and receivers refused to receive. They have brought the cases through the interior department and the courts, alleging the company's title had been secured by irregular and illegal action and by attempting to show the title was not in the United States at the time of the selection, because, they assert, the lands selected were embraced in the grant of lands made to the state for railroad purposes in 1856. J. F. Dillon appears as principal counsel for the company and Don M. Dickinson in the same capacity for the settlers.

A BRIGHT OUTLOOK.

Gov. Rich Thinks Times Have Improved in the Upper Peninsula.

LANSING, Nov. 1.—Gov. Rich has returned from the upper peninsula where he put in several days discussing the political issues. He stated that, generally speaking, he found things in a much better condition than he had anticipated. "There are, of course, many idle people in the iron country," said the governor, "and those who are at work are getting small wages, but there is an improvement over last year. The miners are making a living, and many of them are being employed in the lumber camps at fairly good wages. Those who had money enough got out of the country this spring, and I hardly think there will be any great suffering this winter."

Detroit Has a Sensation.

The police refuse to make public the name of the woman maligned.

Cockrill, receiver of the First national bank of this city, to recover $10,000 and interest on two notes, brought in a verdict at 6 o'clock Thursday morning in favor of the plaintiff for the full amount. The suit was a test case and involves a large sum of the defunct First national bank's liabilities.

DETROIT, Nov. 5.—A strike involving every English daily paper in the city is one of the probabilities of the near future. How to Avoid Farm Work in Summer.

It never gets so hot in the South as does in the North. There are never sunstrokes in the South. The hotter the weather the harder the Northern farmer has to work to save his crops, while down South the farmers do their farm work during the Fall, Winter and Spring, when the weather is cool, and during the Summer they take it easy. It is always cool in the shade down South and the nights are always cool. The thermometer seldom gets above 80. The hottest day during the past five years was 97 degrees.

You can grow one crop during the Winter, another during the Spring and another during the Fall on the same land each year. You will net more money from each one of these crops than you can make from a similar crop in the North. You can get a farm cheaper. It will cost you less to live. You can make more money. You will have better health, live longer, and enjoy life better in the South than in the North. A beautiful pamphlet, telling all about it sent free to all applicants. Go South now and investigate. Low rate excursions every month via the Mobile & Ohio Railroad. E. E. Posey, General Passenger Agent, Mobile, Ala.

OBITUARY.

Jennie Campbell was born at Norwich, Ontario, January 17, 1843. When two years of age her parents came to Michigan and settled on the east side of Sand Lake. Here she grew to womanhood. She was married to John R. Kimball Nov. 14, 1866. In '68 they moved to Leoni, where they resided on a farm until 1878, when, owing to Mr. Kimball's loss of health, they came to Clinton to live. Mr. Kimball died Nov. 24, 1880, leaving her to care alone for the two boys, Leander W. and William A., and certainly no one could have been more faithful to the trust imposed than she has been. She seemed to live only for them. Some two years ago her health began to fail and, for the past year she has been a great sufferer. During all these months she has borne all pain with heroic courage and christian submission. Her only desire to live being to see William settled in life, but it was not so to be. She had finished her work and her Master said: It is enough, come up higher. She passed away Saturday evening, Oct. 27, 1894, at 9 o'clock, aged 51 years, 9 months and 19 days. Mrs. Kimball early in life became a member of the M. E. church and was always an active and consistent member. During her long sickness everything that medical skill or loving hands could accomplish was done to make her comfortable. The funeral was held at the M. E. church Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, the pastor, Rev. D. H. Ramsdell, officiating. The church was filled to overflowing with mourning friends, who by their presence and beautiful floral tributes testified their affection for the departed one. Her memory will be cherished by all who knew her.

A GREAT NEWSPAPER COMBINATION.

For the past 52 years, over half a century, The Michigan Farmer has been published, and it is the oldest regular agricultural journal under one name on this continent.

With largely increased capital and under new management that has had 24 years successful experience in agricultural journalism, this great paper is making rapid strides toward the top in the galaxy of agricultural literature of America. It is most beautifully printed on high grade paper, and employs the most eminent writers on the science and practice of Agriculture, Horticulture, Live Stock, Dairying, Apiary and Poultry. Has a standard veterinary department for free treatment of all diseases of farm animals. A legal and medical department; contains all the agricultural news of the country and an invaluable literary and household department every week. Admits no swindling nor immoral advertisements and is in fact in every way a great sound, practical, agricultural, live stock and family journal, that the agriculturists of Michigan may justly feel proud of, and subscribe for with satisfaction and profit. We are pleased to be able to announce that we can furnish to our subscribers the Michigan Farmer and the TECUMSEH HERALD, both one year, making a total of 104 papers, for the low price of $1.50; certainly a bargain that should be liberally patronized. Specimen copies free.

The State Board of Health Advocates a System of Disease Inspection.

LANSING, Nov. 1.—Secretary Baker, of the state board of health, said that an attempt would be made this winter to secure an appropriation by the legislature for a contagious disease inspection. What is actually needed in this state, he says, is three experts, whose duty shall be to look after outbreaks of diphtheria, scarlet fever and smallpox. Efforts to secure an appropriation for the salaries of such experts have been made to the legislature without avail, but Secretary Baker says that an appropriation of a few thousand dollars for such a purpose would save many thousands of dollars to the people of the state as well as in the saving of many lives. At present the state board of health has no one whom it can detail to make these inspections and no fund upon which to draw for such a purpose. The necessity for such an appropriation and the establishment of such inspection is illustrated by the fact that the outbreak of diphtheria in Elkton, Huron county, which has lasted eighteen months has already cost the county over $4,000.

ATTEMPTED TRIPLE MURDER.

Two Women Will Die from the Blows of a Hammer.

COLUMBIAVILLE, Nov. 1.—At 3 o'clock a. m. Wednesday an unknown man broke into Fred Skinner's house, about 3 miles from here and attempted to murder Mr. and Mrs. Skinner and the latter's mother, Mrs. Stanley. The man entered the house through the cellar, went first to Mrs. Stanle's room and struck her with a hammer, crushing her skull. He then went to Skinner's room, struck Mrs. Skinner three times on the head and face and attempted to brain Skinner, but the latter warded off the blow with a pillow. The murderer then ran from the house and has so far eluded capture.

The deed was done with a hammer taken from Skinner's tool chest. Mrs. Skinner and her mother are just alive, but there is little hope of the recovery of either. Mrs. Skinner's life was insured for $2,000 and suspicion points to those who would be benefited by her death.

Stole Enough to Start a Store.

GRAND RAPIDS, Nov. 3.—Burglars raided the general store of Nicholas Bouman at Fisher Station and stole about $300 worth of goods, including tobacco, coffee, soap, rubber boots, overshoes, print cloth, patent medicines and a lot of flannel shirts and other clothing and provisions. In short, the robbers practically cleaned out the store.

Ex-Senator Palmer Ill.

BATTLE CREEK, Nov. 2.—Ex-Senator Thomas W. Palmer, president of the world's fair, is ill of nervous prostration at the sanitarium. Mr. Palmer attributes his present condition to campaign worry and his hard work in connection with the Columbian exposition.

Close of the Davis Mine.

NEGAUNEE, Nov. 4.—The Davis mine has closed, throwing seventy-five men out of work. The product was being shipped to the Weston furnace at Manistique. The depressed condition of the iron trade and the extremely low price of ore caused suspension of the works.

Tragic Fate of a Young Man.

ELMIRA, Nov. 2.—George Wise, a teamster in the employ of V. L. Parsons & Co., was thrown from a wagon in a runaway and instantly killed. He was about 25 years of age and unmarried. His relatives are in Canada.

May Lose a Professor.

LANSING, Nov. 3.—Clinton D. Smith, professor of agriculture at the Agricultural college, has been tendered the directorship of the Illinois experiment station at an annual salary of $3,000, and will doubtless accept.

Must Have It.

Yes, you must have it. It is the only way you can learn what is going on about you; the news of the city, village or farming district in which you live. You must have your home paper, whether you can afford anything else in the way of current reading or not. And a great deal besides home news you will find in it. The editor of your home paper aims first of all to give you the home news, with intelligent and helpful comment thereon. But he does not stop there; he does the best he can to give you the general news and the best thought of the whole world. Of course he does not and cannot give you as much as you ought to have, and if you ask him about the matter he will frankly tell you so. He will also advise you what you ought to get to supplement your home paper and keep you and your growing boys and girls up with the times in the great fields of politics, sociology, finance, commerce, science, religion, art, education, and the literary and book news of the day. He will tell you that there is one weekly journal, unique in this respect, made up of carefully selected, condensed and classified extracts from the newspapers and magazines the world over, and that he has made special arrangements by which he can give you a reduced subscription rate for this unique journal, if taken in connection with the HERALD. He will tell you that the name of this journal so admirably suited to your wants is PUBLIC OPINION, that it is published at Washington, D. C., and that the regular subscription price is $2.50 per year, but that he can give you both the HERALD and PUBLIC OPINION for one year for $3.00 cash. He will also tell you that PUBLIC OPINION and the HERALD are exactly what you need during the political campaign. PUBLIC OPINION will be sent you for ten weeks on trial for fifty cents.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder
World's Fair Highest Medal and Diploma

From High Government Authority.

No authority of greater experience on food products exists than Dr. Henry A. Mott, of New York. Dr. Mott's wide experience as Government Chemist for the Indian Department, gave him exceptional opportunities to acquaint himself with the qualities and constituent parts of baking powders. He understands thoroughly the comparative value of every brand in the market, and has from time to time expressed his opinion thereof. On a recent careful re-examination and analysis he finds superior to all others in strength, purity, and efficiency. Dr. Mott writes:—

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

"New York, March 20th, 1894.

I find Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder to be superior to all others, for the following reasons:—

1st. It liberates the greatest amount of leavening gas and is consequently more efficient.

2nd. The ingredients used in its preparation are of the purest character.

3rd. Its keeping qualities are excellent.

4th. On account of the purity of the materials and their relative proportions, Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder must be considered the acme of perfection as regards wholesomeness and efficieney, and I say this having in mind certificates I have given several years ago respecting two other baking powders.

The reasons for the change in my opinion are based on the above facts and the new method adopted to prevent your baking powder from caking and deteriorating in strength.

Mrs. Will Allen and children are visiting in Toledo for a few days.

Miss Martha Ackley has been spending a few days with friends in Marshall.

By the death of Mrs. John Allen, which occured Friday, another Ridgeway pioneer has gone over to the majority. Mrs. Allen leaves many sons and daughters and a large family of grandchildren to commemorate her. The funeral took place from her late home Sunday morning.

Kniffen and Hendershot drew the fire Monday evening from their second kiln of brick and tile, and the employes celebrated the event in a suitable manner. By the way, some of the festivities indulged in by the night force at the kiln during the burning, have been truly "amoozin." At these entertainments good things to eat cut no small figure, and the bills of fare have contained some rare dishes, (rare for a brick yard) such as soups, roast chicken, broiled Macon river white fish, turtle on the half shell, baked clams and frogs in every style. Jud promises in the early spring to serve such delicacies as the festive tadpole and juicy pollywog as a first course to a muskrat barbacue and while the roasting possum sizzles on the spit, Jud will "agitate" his ole banjo, and as the music floats (music always floats on the Macon flats in the Spring) you will probably see "the cat come back," floating into the firelight from the darkness beyant, mounted on her last bootjack, drawn gently thither by the—by the—well, by the savory aroma of cooking viands.

GREAT PAINTINGS OF EUROPE.

Feast for Art Lovers.

Of the many publications which come to us there is none which merits so much commendation, for its excellent typographical appearance, high-class illustrations and interesting reading, as "Campbell's Illustrated Monthly." This magazine fills a long-felt want in Chicago, as heretofore that city has not furnished us a publication devoted to a high-class form of illustrations.

The current number is a galaxy of the richest illustrations ever published. Teere is a frontispiece of Oliver Wendell Holmes, and a portrait of the late Prof. Swing, with sketches of both these men. Many of the most gorgeous paintings of Europe, worth several hundred thousand dollars are reproduced in the finest copper-plate engravings. Among them being 'Autumn,' 'Winter,' 'Waiting for His Share,' 'Perfectly at Home,' 'Evening Hours,' 'Cupid Leading the Choir,' 'A Reading from Homer,' 'The Favored Swain, 'The Prize Jerseys,' 'Ready for the Hunt,' 'My Mother-in-Law." Also leading articles on the Chicago University, all the buildings and grounds being illustrated, together with a most interesting description and groupe of illustrations of the "House of Pansa at Pompeii." Many more rich illustrations are to be found in the Home Department, Art Department, etc.

This is beyond question the richest Illustrated Magazine published, and as an educator in the higher realm of Art, Science and Literature, it should be found on every family table. See publisher's special offer. Enclose 25 cents in stamps for October number. J. B. Campbell, 215 Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

THE NATIONAL CO.,

A Skeleton in the Closet.

How often do we hear of this in domestic life at this day. But what is more appalling than the living body made repulsive with skin and scalp diseases, salt-rheum, tetter, eczema and scrofulous sores and swellings. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the positive cure for all of these diseases. If taken in time, it also cures lung-scrofula, commonly known as Pulmonary consumption. By druggists.

Keyser, N. C.

DR. R. V. PIERCE: Dear Sir—When about three years old I was taken with mumps, also had fever, finally I had that dreaded disease, Scrofula. The most eminent physicians in this section treated me to no avail. I had running scrofulous sores on left side of neck and face. I was small and weakly when eight or nine years old, and in fact was nearly a skeleton. Six bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery wrought marvelous changes. Although the sores were healed in eight months, I did not quit taking it until I was sure it had been entirely routed from my system. The only signs left of the dreadful disease are the scars which ever remind me of how near death's door I was until rescued by the Discovery. I am now eighteen years old and weighs 148 pounds; and have not been sick in five years.

Yours respectfully,
HARVEY MC HOLLEMAN,
Agt. for Seaboard Air Line.

Idleness and Its Effect.

Upon this point Senator John P. Jones, of Nevada, says, in his letter on the silver question, dated August 29, 1894:

"The fate of mankind hangs upon the question whether civilization can exist while larger and larger numbers of people in all countries are being relegated to idleness. The compulsory idleness of willing workers, of whom there are millions even in times much more prosperous than the present, is due to a force that acts upon industrial society like a deadly but odorless gas, which, because of its subtle character, escapes detection. In its method it is as silent as time, yet as inexorable as death. Its victims usually attribute their sufferings to every cause but the true one. This fatal influence affects alike employer and employed, agriculturist and artisan.

"What is this power? It is the rapacious and engorging power of an ever-increasing value in the unit of money—that is to say, in the dollar. When an obligation has been entered into requiring the payment of money at a future time, this is the subtile alchemy which, without effecting any change in the written figures, yet enlarges the burden of the obligation by extracting from him who has agreed to pay money—and all business men are in this category—more sacrifice for each dollar than a dollar represented at the time the obligation was made. This process paralyzes industry and relegates to a pitiful and corroding idleness multitudes of willing workers. This is accomplished by producing an artificial and unnatural fall in the prices of property and the products of labor—a fall not rising from the natural operation of the forces of supply and demand affecting the property and commodities, but from a change in the relation existing between the supply of and the demand for money."

Mrs. Jos. Bailey, Cedar Springs, Mich., says: "Adironda," Wheeler's Heart and Nerve Cure, is the best medicine I ever had in my family; it never fails." Sold by Orr & Temple.

The Republican-Populist fusion carried the day in North Carolina by about ten thousand majority, and elected six Congressmen.

The irony of last week's election is the fact that the people have held the Democracy responsible for the evil effects of twenty years of Republican legislation.

The great tidal wave was as much a surprise to the Republicans as to the Democrats. The problem now is: What will the Republican leaders do with their victory?

The "solid south" is broken at last. Let us hope that the Republican leaders will possess enough good sense to treat the southern states as political equals hereafter.

It is not the first time that the people of New York have found it necessary to sweep clean the filthy political stables of Tammany Hall. They did so with the help of Mr. Tilden once.

Henry George may not be right all the time, but he is very right indeed when he says that the overwhelming defeat of the Democratic machine makes it possible to bring Democratic principles to the front. Yes indeed! That is just what the Democrats did it for.

An examination of the election returns shows that the Republican vote was not increased but was held very close to that of Presidential years. The Democratic-stay-at-home vote did the mischief. What caused the stay-at-home vote? That is a good question for the newspapers to discuss.

Twice before in the history of the country the Democracy has received a similar castigation. The first time was in 1840, the celebrated "hard cider" campaign, when VanBuren was defeated. The next time was in the Grant and Greeley campaign, when the sage of the Tribune met his Waterloo.

Mr. Harrison says this is the greatest revolution known in our political history. It is a big one. And yet memory will go back to the election of 1890, when the Democrats carried a majority of the Congressional delegations of 31 States, electing 223 Representatives and leaving the Republicans only 88. But that was one of the revolutions that Mr. Harrison does not care to dwell on.

The New York World says; This is a great year for pluralities. With about 150,000 in New York, over 100,000 in Illinois, over 125,000 in Ohio, over 60,000 in Massachusetts, over 50,000 in Indiana and Iowa, nearly 200,000 in Pennsylvania, and corresponding figures in states that have been close heretofore, the Democrats who went machine-smashing this week are entitled to claim that they did their work thoroughly.

Ex-Senator Bayard of Delaware, says "The path of duty is unmistakable, and the necessity for pure Democratic tariff legislation was never so great as it is now. The bills for free raw materials should be passed immediately and then the country will be able to contemplate the democratic idea of the tariff in full working order for two years before another national election rolls around. If this is done, I have but little fear that the verdict will be other than satisfactory in 1896."

Wm. C. Whitney, of New York, expresses this opinion: "It does not require a seer to see that the causes were both general and special. It is a repetition, to my mind, of 1874, with the parties reversed. The panic of 1873 resulted in the great Democratic tidal wave of 1874, and the hard times of 1893 and 1894 have resulted in this great Republican victory. That is the great underlying general cause, but along with it is the fact that the Democratic party has misbehaved since 1892 and disgusted large bodies of its friends and supporters.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, Nov. 9, 1894.

The results of the elections were surprising, not to say astounding, alike to the people of Washington and to the politicians. The victorious republicans were quite as bold in their claims, but neither had dreamed of any such tidal wave business, notwithstanding the present assertions of republicans, that they expected it all the time. These sudden political changes, which have of late years become so frequent in our national elections, have a deep significance to the student of our political future. Whether they are beneficial or otherwise is a question not easy of final settlement by any other test than that of time. But that they indicate that many thousand voters are influenced by their unrest and desire for a change with the hope of bettering themselves, rather than by their party fealty or belief in any particular principles seems well-nigh certain. If that be correct no political party can hope to control all branches of the government through two consecutive administrations until these discontented voters are made prosperous and contented.

The populists failed to make the gains they expected in the House, but even if they had, they would not have held the balance of power upon which they had figured, as neither they nor anyone else had calculated upon the republican landslide which came. While it is not entirely certain, the chances are that the populists will hold the balance of power in the Senate after the fourth of next March, present indications being that there will be 42 republicans, 38 democrats and seven populists in the Senate, counting Gov. Tillman, of S. C. whose election to the Senate seems assured, as a populist—it would not change the situation if he acted with the democrats. Should those figures prove to be correct it will readily be seen that neither the democrats nor republicans could organize the Senate without the votes of the populists. The republicans have not, however, given up hope of electing enough Senators to give them a majority.

Neither President Cleveland nor any member of his cabinet has seen fit to express an opinion, for publication, on the terrible drubbing administered to their party, but whatever may be the opinions of the members of the cabinet it is not believed that Mr. Cleveland is doing any grieving. He took especial pains to allow it to become public that Tuesday night and Wednesday morning when most people were studying the news of the returns from the elections, he was engaged, at his suburban residence, in going over the papers in a lot of applications for executive clemency, thus indicating that he took no interest in the elections.

There is no doubt about the genuineness of the rejoicing on the part of the rank and file of the republican party over their successes, but for many of their leaders there are prickly thorns on the roses of victory. The leaders do not fancy the debut of a new Presidential candidate. And they know that Mr. Morton will now be considered as such, and that his majority in New York and the skillful management of ex-Senator Platt, who is known to the Harrison men as an opponent not to be despised, will bring him forward very prominently, if he keeps his health. His age will be a help, rather than a detriment, as it would probably result in his getting a much stronger man to take the second place on the ticket with him than a younger man could get. It is certain that the friends of the other candidates are already afraid of Morton.

The new democratic postmaster of Washington had scarcely had time to recover from the effects of the election returns when he received a rude shock in the shape of an official order, informing him that instead of having patronage to the annual cash value of $50,000 at his disposal when he takes charge of the postoffice, which he expects to do next week, his patronage will be limited to the appointment of an assistant postmaster, private secretary, cashier and assistant cashier, superintendents of the three branch postoffices, six watchmen and six laborers. All the rest will be looked after by the civil service commission, when vacancies occur. This order is far from pleasing to the local democrats, who had been calculating to profit largely by the promotion of one of their number to be postmaster, the first bona fide citizen of Washington who has held the position for many years, but the employes of the postoffice are delighted with it.

The calling in of a lot of postage stamps which were so poorly gummed that there was difficulty in getting them to stick and replacing them with better has almost depleted the stock of stamps on hand at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and a night force has been put on in order to increase the supply, and the day force is working two hours extra every day.

Vice-President Stevenson says: "My opinion can be briefly stated. The result is due in part to the financial depression which came upon the country soon after the inauguration of Mr. Cleveland. While the Democrats were in no way responsible for this, they were made the scapegoats. It was also in part due to the delay of Congress in passing the tariff bill. Had the bill become a law 90 days earlier than it did it is quite probable that the business conditions of the country would have so adjusted themselves that the political results would have been different."

Idleness and Its Effect.

Upon this point Senator John P. Jones, of Nevada, says, in his letter on the silver question, dated August 29, 1894:

TAINTED BLOOD.

Scrofula Almost Universal—Some of Its Many Forms.

Scrofula taints the blood of almost every one, and it is the cause of much of our ill health. If it attacks the breathing organs, the issue is consumption; if the digestive apparatus, the issue is dyspepsia and debility; if the muscles, the issue is rheumatism; if the nerves, the issue is paralysis; if the glandular system, the issue is in boils and other superficial exhibitions of corruption. It is a mistake to characterize it as unseen. What festers your skin on every little abrasion? Scrofula. What gives that hack to your cough on exposure to the slightest damp and cold? Scrofula. What makes your food an oppression? Scrofula. What racks and twists the bones and sinews as you grow old? Scrofula. It operates by withholding nutrition and defeating all efforts toward nourishment; life becomes a burden, and the victim knows not the blessing and happiness of health. It is your duty to yourself, your family, and your race, to manfully oppose and dislodge this demon. How? We can only say, that others, who were afflicted as you are, have found relief and a cure in a moderate use of Hood's Sarsaparilla, that compound in which the skill of the modern pharmacist and the science of the most advanced medical knowledge unite for the benefit of suffering humanity.

TWO LIVES SAVED.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mr. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St. San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result every thing else then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medecine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottles at Orr & Temple's drug store. Regular size 50c. and $1.00. 5

THE POET'S MUSE.

Ere you dawned upon my vision
With your "azure orbs divine,"
In the meads and groves elysian,
I consorted with "the nine."
Underneath the sequle hickory
In the woodland would I woo
Clio or the gay Terpsichore
Or the sweet Erato sue.

Then Calliope upon me
Cast the glimmer of her look,
Or was it Euterpe won me
With her accents like a brook?
Grave or gay, my heart elastic
Seemed to each beguiled my view,
But it's ceased to be so plastic
Since I put my eyes on you.

Be not unable to the tender
Protestations that you hear,
Lest a "yes" in soft surrender
Fall upon the poet's ear.
It is modesty that smothers
How a "no" my breast would fill;
I'll go back on all the others
If you'll only be my muse.
—Harry Pelouze in Detroit Free Press.

A COQUETTE.

"I cannot marry my cousin," said Albert to his grandmother. "It is impossible. I know the pain I give you in making this declaration, but nevertheless if you wish Therese and I to be happy you will not insist. You know Therese, too much of a coquette just now to be marriageable! She is 20 years old. I am 25. We can both afford to wait."

"Once you have married her she will reform."

"I fear otherwise. Therese is a coquette. She will always be a coquette. Marriage will only stimulate her coquettish instinct."

"But she is in love with you, and you are in love with her, are you not? Each of you has confided in me. Love will bring more wisdom to her."

"With love on one side and the desire to flirt on the other," said Albert. "With love and the desire to be well dressed and to appear fascinating and bewitching. I think no woman can resist."

"What have you against her?" insisted her grandmother.

"What have I against her? Caprice! Love of display! Love of fine dresses, jewelry, adornment. Love of adulation and flattery, which give me a cold shudder down the back."

"You are too jealous!"

"Say rather too reasonable. Now that I'm a full fledged lawyer I have begun life in earnest. I have learned in my profession to know traits of human nature that I cannot now mistake. I have learned the secrets of seductions and betrayals, and there is nothing like the misfortunes of others to teach one to be on one's guard. Therefore I will not marry my cousin. I will wait awhile. Later, when she has been proved, and when I know that she loves me as I wish to be loved, then I shall make up my mind, but not before."

"What test do you ask for?" demanded the grandmother.

"That is my secret. Do not ask me any more questions."

It was the eve of a ball where he was to meet Thereso that Albert had this conversation with Mme. de Versac.

Therese was an orphan. She lived with her grandmother and was adored by her. She was spoiled by her and had her own way in everything. A wish was a command, and everybody gave in to her.

She was decidedly pretty, with superb coloring, large, speaking eyes, rosy cheeks and fine features. Her figure was that of a Greek statue.

She had been on the watch during the conversation and waited till her cousin had left. Then she came in to her grandmother, humming airs from the opera, and spread out on the old lady's lap a mass of red roses she had bought earlier in the afternoon at the florist's.

"You will not refuse me, grandmother?" she said. "We are to go to hear 'Thais' this week at the opera. Tomorrow, with Leonide, my companion; I am going down to the Boulevard Haussmann to try on my new dress."

"You won't forget the ball the day after tomorrow?"

"Certainly not. On the contrary, I have been thinking of it a great deal and have a surprise in store for you. I shall look so pretty that you will not recognize your little Therese."

"Some new little coquetry?"

"Exactly. Some new little coquetry," replied Therese lightly, "and why not? It belongs to my age, in keeping with my position, and almost a part of my education. Am I to have only one dress, only one way of doing my hair, only one sort of jewelry to wear? What would you think of me if I were like that?"

"Oh! I always make excuses for you. I am on your side. But—but how about others, for there are others? How about Albert, for instance?"

"Albert? He loves me. He should think all I do good and beautiful."

"Are you sure of that?"

"Why should he blame a flirt? It is not for me to make sacrifices for him. He is paying court to me, and paying court to a girl involves letting her have her own way in all things. He plays his part. I play mine. I am a flirt and shall always remain one. But wait till the day after tomorrow and see if you are not proud of me!"

"Be careful," returned the grandmother; "this coquetry will ruin you."

On the day of the ball just at the hour when the festivities were to begin a young girl in a lovely white dress and with golden hair walked with Leonide into the grandmother's room.

A mass of roses nodded their heads gracefully at her waist, and the whiteness of her matchless shoulders was so pure that it almost reflected the golden shimmer of her hair.

The young face was all smiles and happiness, and the light of frivolity and coquetry flashed from the large, veiled eyes.

Mme. de Versac, lost in amazement, advanced to greet her pretty visitor with an amiable smile on her lips, when she suddenly recognized Therese.

"Gracious! Is it you?" she cried. "You have changed yourself completely. Your hair has been dyed from dark to gold! Are you going to the ball in that metamorphosis?"

"Assuredly I am. I think I look charming. You shall see what a success I shall make!"

"But suppose you do not," suggested her grandmother.

"What difference would it make? I wanted to satisfy my whim. Besides the color of my hair was a little faded, I thought, and in this golden tint there is a suggestion of gayety which pleases me immensely."

Mme. de Versac only kept on shaking her head slowly.

"Take care, take care, my child," she repeated.

Albert waited for Therese and his grandmother at the threshold of the ballroom. He was in hope that after talking with the old lady Therese would appear dressed with simplicity and taste, without the brilliance he considered vulgar, and triumphant simply in her youth and loveliness.

But when he caught sight of her leaning on his grandmother's arm, with her hair dyed, and in a rich, showy toilet that would have been more suitable for a wealthy young married woman, his face darkened under a blush.

"Good evening, my cousin," he said to her coldly.

And after a few words of greeting had been exchanged he moved away and lost himself in the crowd.

Mme. de Versac pressed the girl's arm, and in a low voice said to her:

"Was I right? Did you not see how shocked Albert was with your frivolity?"

"I don't think so, grandmother. He will come back and ask me to dance."

But during the whole course of the evening the little coquette saw nothing of her cousin. He avoided her. When the whirling crowd of dancers brought her within his neighborhood, he moved away. He danced a great deal. He was charming and empressed to all her friends and with all the girls at the ball who were not overdressed and had not come there merely to show themselves off. He flirted with some and sat out with others. He was delightful to all.

Therese, of course, noticed all this, and affected on her side an unnatural gayety that was intended to show how much she could enjoy herself even when Albert was not by her side.

In her heart she was sad. She left the ball early, saying she was tired and had a headache. The young coquette understood the lesson her cousin wanted to teach her.

And as the days passed away a change began to be noticeable in her toilets and finally in the color of her hair. The tint grew softer and began gradually to give way again to the natural color.

Was it the effect of love deceived and of a lost lover? Therese had sacrificed her golden hair and her exaggerated dresses. She was gradually becoming the excellent little manager that moralists love to praise.

She read good books, she knitted, she did embroidery work and engaged in such reasonable conversation with the grandmother that the old lady noticed with pleasure and surprise the change that had taken place in her protegee.

The grandmother was very happy over the transformation of her beautiful Therese. She wrote to her grandson to say that she had changed.

She wrote that she had never known so reasonable a girl, so simple, natural, reserved and with such simple tastes. The best thing he could do was to come and see her. He would see no more golden hair and no more exaggerated and showy costumes. He would find a girl who had sacrificed her coquetry to her love, and a girl who was ready to love him with all her heart.

She also said in her letter that if this were the test he had wished to put the girl to she had come through it victoriously.

Albert did not wait to be told twice. He had never forgotten his love for her, and he came to Mme. de Versac with confidence and joy. When he entered the room, he saw Therese.

She rose to meet him lovingly, with her hands outstretched. She let her head fall with a murmur of pleasure on his shoulder, and as he put his arm around her supple waist he pressed a loving kiss on her parted lips.

"Albert!"

"Therese!"

"You still love me?" she whispered.

"Yes, I love you! I love you more than ever, more than formerly, because your love for me is stronger than your coquetry. Now I have confidence in you. You were pretty, very pretty, with your fine dark hair. In order to move with the fashion and to satisfy your coquettish fancy you made your hair golden. From that moment I have kept away from you. Now that you have become yourself again I give you back my heart. I love you more than ever. When your hair turns golden again, I shall know that you no longer love me."

"It never will," she cried, with passion.

"Never?" he asked in a low voice.

"Never!"

Alas, the word "never" has no meaning for the majority of womankind.

Two years later Therese was to be seen driving daily in the Bois with a mass of golden hair on the top of her head. But Albert was not by her side! —From the French.

How to Avoid Farm Work in Summer.

It never gets so hot in the South as it does in the North. There are never any sunstrokes in the South. The hotter the weather the harder the Northern farmer has to work to save his crops, while down South the farmers do their farm work during the Fall, Winter and Spring, when the weather is cool, and during the Summer they take it easy. It is always cool in the shade down South and the nights are always cool. The thermometer seldom gets above 90. The hottest day during the past five years was 97 degrees.

You can grow one crop during the Winter, another during the Spring, and another during the Fall on the same land each year. You will net more money from each one of these crops than you can make from a similar crop in the North. You can get a home cheaper. It will cost you less to live. You can make more money. You will have better health, live longer, and enjoy life better in the South than in the North. A beautiful pamphlet that tells all about it sent free to all applicants. Go South now and investigate. Geo. R. Wendling's Lecture.

The lecture course season opened auspiciously Monday evening, notwithstanding the bad condition of the roads and the severe snowstorm that was raging. Sutton's opera house was filled to hear the Hon. Geo. R. Wendling, and had the night been pleasant, standing room would have been at a premium. Those who braved the wintry blasts felt amply repaid for all they endured going and coming from the opera house. Although it was Mr. Wendling's first appearance in Tecumseh, his reputation as one of the finest platform orators of the day is well established and almost world wide. Many of our people have heard him in other places. Our lecture committee made no mistake in selecting him to open the course. Mr. Wendling's knowledge of the dramatic art was demonstrated to a high degree Monday night, as every sentence, and syllable, even, was given in the most effective manner, accompanied by facial expressions that added great force to all he uttered. His subject, "Popular Delusions," was handled in a masterly manner, showing thought, research, and a great knowledge of human nature. After a few well chosen introductory remarks he opened his lecture proper by describing in a vivid manner the wave of speculation that swept over France, and in fact all Europe in 1720, when Law, a shrewd Scotchman opened a bank in Paris with absolutely no capital, and by his skillful managing established many additional ones, and the people went wild, nay frantic, over the supposed wealth in minerals, ore, etc., along the banks of the Mississippi, and stocks reached fabulous prices. All classes and conditions of people invested, and when the crash came utter desolution and suffering followed. Law became a fugitive from justice and died a poor man. He then, in a similar manner, described a like condition which existed in England over the mines of wealth supposed to exist in Australia and South America, with the same disastrous result when the bubble burst. Next he spoke of the time when the conservative Hollanders became crazed over tulips, $1000 being frequently paid for a single bulb. This suffered the same fate as all schemes where people run frantic over things which have a fictitious value, with the same dire results to the people. This completed the social aspect of the subject.

Turning to the political phase of the question he confined himself to this country alone, and made some very fine points, as well as uttering some truths, that must have gained a mental assent, if unexpressed, from the entire audience. He, in speaking of the political condition of things, showed how far the people had departed from the ways of our forefathers, until now, instead of the place seeking the man the man sought the place and was the first man at the convention. Showed that among the ten million voters there was one million office seekers; in other words, in every ten one sought to be a burden to the other nine. He showed that in the American politics of today we had retrograded to an alarming extent. He showed the folly of our young men seeking to enter the political arena as a goal of their ambition. He said that no gentleman would seek and no patriot refuse office, and showed clearly that it was the duty of all lovers of good government to attend the primaries, (the caucuses), and there express their preferences.

He next turned to the religious world and showed the popular delusions that there appeared. He started out by saying that he did not believe emotion was religion. That while a person might be lifted up by the deep tones of an organ, the voice of a singer or the eloquence of a speaker, it was not religion; but "pure and undefiled" religion before God, the Father, was to visit the widow and the fatherless in their affliction, and keep one's self unspotted from the world. As we followed the divine commands to do unto others as we would have them do unto us, and love thy neighbor as thyself, we would give evidence of possessing the spirit of the humble Nazarene. He then showed that while we were becoming more enlightened, we were also growing more religious, and that instead of skepticism and infidelity increasing as we advanced, it was rapidly decreasing. He closed by saying the only safeguard against being carried away by the popular delusions of the day was in being governed at all times by a love for our neighbor. This principle would keep us from the love of avarice and greed, and from selfish thoughts, words and actions.

"WHERE FARMING PAYS."

Is it in the north-west with wheat at less than 50 cents a bushel, with zero weather and blizzards in winter and cyclones in summer? No! Go to Virginia; land is cheap, climate perfect all the year round. Ask any one who knows and he will tell you that in the tidewater section one acre of land has produced as high as $2,000.00 in one season. It is worth looking into. Apply to C. H. Bovee, Gen'l. TEMPERANCE TOPICS.

(Edited by the Tecumseh W. C. T. U.)

PASTE THIS IN YOUR HAT.

If Voice readers know of any moss-back Republicans who still insist that their party is opposed to the saloon, just call their attention to the following from a special edition of The New York Wine and Spirit Gazette issued Nov. 2 just after The Voice of last week went to press. The Wine and Spirit Gazette of Nov. 2 said:

"We have assurance of the most positive nature that the Republican Party, if entrusted with power this year, will solve the vexed liquor problem, and remove the liquor issue from further political discussion. The question of the sale of liquor on Sunday is to be submitted to a direct vote of the people in the larger cities of the State, and the Republican Party will abide by the decision and carry out in its legislation the will of the people on that point. That is all the friends of personal liberty can justly demaud."

This utterance was printed in large black type on the first page of the Wine and Spirit Gazette, under the heading of "The Sunday Issue." It will thus be seen that the promise to break down the Sunday Prohibition in our excise law was a part of the bid of Mr. Morton's campaign managers for the saloon vote.

Christian citizens who voted for a Republican governer and Republican legislators last Tuesday on the plea of good government and restriction of the liquor traffic, paste this utterance of The Wine and Spirit Gazette in your hats. You may have cause to remember it when the next legislature meets at Albany. Remember, also, that The Voice warned you of this Republican plan to break down the Sunday Prohibition law in time for you to protest against it by casting a Prohibition ballot.

A MODERN PARIAH.

Is the rumseller becoming the modern pariah? We have hopes that they, and the outlook is promising. The poor rummy is having "hard sledding" nowadays. The great Catholic Church, with its more than 8,000,000 population, has branded him as no longer a fit person to associate with the best Catholics. Most of the Protestant Churches and other religious bodies long ago barred him from fellowship with their numbers. Nearly all of the fraternal orders are now estracising him. The Masons will have nothing to do with him. Now the Knights of Pythias at their national convention in Washington refuse to longer admit him to membership. Where can he go? No respectable body of men will tolerate his presence.

It is true the saloon-keeper can yet gain admittance to our national and State legislatures, to the boards of aldermen in our large cities, and even occasionally to the conventions which meet to revise our State constitutions. He still has influence and "pull" enough to get into these high places. But this, we are ashamed to say, can at present scarcely add to the saloon-keeper's claim to respectability.

The liquor-dealer is fast becoming a 'pariah,' a social outcast. Society is coming to regard him in the same light in which the Hindus regard the pariahs of India. His touch is leprous, and decent people avoid him as they would one upon whom that loathsome disease has fallen. There is but one way in which he can be healed, and that is to get out of the business of poisoning and debauching his fellow creatures.

THE HEAL DIFFICULTY.

Churches Do Not Discipline Members Who Vote for Licence.

Editor of The Voice.—In your issue of October 18, you ask the question, "Can a loyal member of a Christian church vote a Republican or Democratic ticket?" Then you publish the utterances of the various church bodies on this question. The Voice usually goes to the bottom of the questions it deals with; but to our way of thinking, it has been superficial in this matter. The highest portions of the church defenses against the liquor traffic are not to be found in the anathemas hurled at the traffic, nor in the declarations as to what ought not to be done to legalize it, but in the limitations of church authority found in such expressions as the following: "We do not presume to dictate the political conduct of our people. We do not presume to dictate to any man how he shall vote," etc. There is enough declaratory discipline to purge the church of her guilt in this direction but there is nothing of a mandatory character in the church discipline to hold any one responsible. To bring this thought out in all its bearings upon the case, let us at the end of every strong declaration, such as "It can never be legalized without sin," add "But we do not presume to Dictate." Do you not see how utterly impotent and foolish these resolutions become?

If these nullifying clauses had not been added, then the declaratory utterances would have mere disciplinary force; but they kill them all. J. W. WELLS.

ORDINATION SERVICES.

The "little church around the corner" was the center of a very pleasing series of meetings this week. Rev. Elmer C. Andrus, who has been supplying the pulpit of the Universalist church since last July, has been a licentiate for several months, but had never been formally ordained. Having decided to adopt the ministry as a permanent profession, it became not only appropriate but necessary, under the rule of that church, to receive the rite of ordination. Accordingly an application was made to the committee on Fellowship of the State Convention, and they directed an ordaining council to be convened at the Tecumseh church on Nov. 13th at 2 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of examining the candidate and passing upon his application.

MONDAY'S SESSION.

The series of services, of which this one was the chief, began Monday evening. The fearful snow storm that raged that night, and Mr. Wendling's lecture, combined to reduce the attendance, although there was a fair audience present, who were rewarded with an excellent discourse from Rev. Walter A. Taylor, of Jackson.

TUESDAY'S SESSIONS.

Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock the ordaining council assembled. This consisted of Revs. Merrifield, Thornton and Gibbs, of Manchester, Lapeer and Concord, and one lay delegate each from the parishes of Detroit, Concord, Manchester and Tecumseh. The clerical members of the council constituted the examining committee, and for nearly an hour they catechised the candidate upon the various points of Universalist theology, the tenets of church polity; the duties and responsibilities devolving upon a christian minister. Mr. Andrus acquited himself most satisfactorily and the council unanimously reported that he be ordained and admitted to full fellowship as a minister of the Gospel in the Universalist church. The proceedings of the council were very interesting to those who had never witnessed a service of that character.

Tuesday evening a good audience assembled, notwithstanding the rain, for general services. A fine discourse was given by Rev. H. L. Thornton, of Lapeer, on the topic, "What is the Mission of the Universalist Church." It was a practical as well as a theoretical sermon, showing that there is a place in the religious world for the Universalist and all other liberal churches, and showing how the leaven of Universalism is permeating the religious thought of the present day.

Rev. W. L. Gibbs, of Concord, followed in a brief extempore address upon the topic, "Loyalty to the Church." He believed that any clergyman, who unites with a church organization, should be loyal to that church. It behoves the minister of the Gospel to be tolerant towards all other churches, but at the same time to advocate his own belief at proper times and places and to adhere loyally to the church with which he is identified.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

Another general service was held at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when a good congregation listened to a powerful sermon from Rev. Lee S. M. McCollester, of Detroit. Mr. McCollester is one of the leading divines of that city and has the reputation of being one of the finest pulpit orators in the state. His text was, "Take My Yoke Upon You and Learn of Me," and his topic was the "Evolution of Religion." The discourse was a very scholarly production and it was delivered in a manner that riveted the attention of the congregation to the close. Many members of the churches in town were present, attracted by the orator's reputation, and all seemed highly pleased.

The ordination services proper were held yesterday evening, a report of which we are compelled to defer until next week.

The following from Tuesday's Evening Telegram will be of interest to Harry's many friends here: "Mr. Harry Stearns paid up his oyster supper bet last evening, and the bivalves were of Schoolcraft & Layard's choicest, with the usual concomitant. After the supper came coffee and cigars, and a reminiscent time. Eleven good men and true, of all political views, including members of the press, helped Harry enjoy the scene, and they vote him a royal good fellow. Every one left him trusting that better luck would attend his predictions next time. There's always hope of getting it on the other fellow next time." Harry? here's hoping the other fellow will have to set set them up next time.

For three years past The Echo, the weekly edition of The Evening News, and the Detroit Weekly Tribune have had substantially a common ownership. For a year past one editor has controlled both papers, and indeed, except for the headings, the two papers have been almost identical. In the interests of economical management and the perfecting and improving of the newspaper it has been determined from this date to drop the difference in name, which has been for some time the only real difference between the two papers, and entirely amalgamate them into a single publication. The name of the combined issue will be The Detroit Tribune, that name being preserved rather than the Echo, because the Tribune is much the older paper, having been issued regularly since November, 1839.

Prof. and Mrs. Warner mourn the death of their beautiful infant daughter, Florence, who passed from earth Friday, the 19th inst., aged 3 months and 1 week. "Only a little child that's dead," but this means desolate hearts and darkened lives, and sincere sympathy is felt for the bereaved ones.

The revival meetings at the Friend's church closed Sunday evening. During their continuance the weather has been most of the time very stormy, which affected the attendance to a large extent. In view of the disadvantages under which they were held the result was very satisfactory both as to membership and renewed zeal among the old members.

Geo. W. Smith, who has been in feeble health for some time, died last Thursday of pneumonia and heart failure, aged 75 years and 25 days. The funeral services were held at his residence on east Chicago street, last Sunday afternoon, conducted by Rev. J. P. Varner. The house was filled with sympathizing neighbors and friends, who assembled to pay their last tribute of respect to the departed. The deceased was an honored member of the Odd Fellows fraternity, and a delegation from the Tecumseh lodge acted as pall bearers.

The decorators have finished their labors in Masonic Hall, and returned to Detroit. They did their work well. It bore the inspection of the Grand Overseer's and proved such work as they were pleased to accept. It is indeed a work of art and the several rooms, although not as elaborate as some, are very tastily decorated. Having passed from the hands of the frescoers, the rooms are now in the hands of those celebrated artists, Jordon, Hause, Aten, and Morse who are causing the woodwork and floors to shine like burnished brass. The carpets are here and will soon be laid and the furniture put in place. When all is completed we will describe the rooms in detail.

THE ELECTION.

All of the Republican Candidates for Congress Elected—Democrats Elect One Member of the Legislature.

DETROIT, Nov. 10.—With complete returns from every county in the state except Manitou Gov. Rich's plurality has settled itself at 104,429. Official figures will not change it more than a few hundred either way. This is nearly twice the greatest plurality Michigan ever gave a candidate. The constitutional amendments, one allowing inmates of the soldiers' home to vote and the other tightening the qualifications of voters, have been adopted by big majorities. Corrected returns make it certain that Donovan, of Bay county, will be the only democrat in the state legislature. One of the features of the returns is the plurality the populist candidate for governor received over the democratic in six counties. Not more than three counties in the state showed democratic supremacy. Republicans elect all (twelve) congressmen by pluralities ranging from 2,500 to 8,000. The list of congressmen-elect is as follows:

First district, J. B. Corliss; Second, George Spaulding; Third, J. C. Burrows; Fourth, H. F. Thomas; Fifth, W. A. Smith; Sixth, D. D. Aitken; Seventh, H. G. Snover; Eighth, W. S. Linton; Ninth, R. P. Bishop; Tenth, R. O. Crump; Eleventh, John Avery; Twelfth, S. M. Stephenson.

The latest returns received by the Free Press (dem.) show that of the thirty-two state senators elected every one is a republican. Of the 100 members of the house all are republicans save one, John Donovan of the Bay county district. Many districts which have not returned republican legislators for a quarter of century elected republicans. The legislature will elect two republican United States senators.

For the senatorship there is little doubt of the reelection of Senator McMillan. For the other seat in the upper branch of congress the avowed candidates are Senator Patton, Congressmen Burrows and Stevenson. For the speakership of the house there are several aspirants. Among them are the following: W. D. Gordon, F. C. Chamberlain, Byron I. Waite and Job T. Campbell.

SAVED FROM A FIERY DEATH.

Prisoners in the Standish Jail Saved by the Efforts of Outsiders.

STANDISH, Nov. 12.—To the bravery of two intrepid fellows the six prisoners in the Aranac county jail owe their lives. Fire broke out in the plank wall which separated the two prisoners in an outer cell from the four more important convicts in the steel cell. These imprisoned men saw the fire and fought it with their hands and bedding. For nearly two hours did those prisoners battle with the flames, which gained on them inch by inch. At last the floor took fire, and the courthouse, which was over the jail, was soon ablaze. Two of the crowd of spectators, when they learned of the men confined took the keys from the jailer, rushed in, and dragged out the six men, who were insensible from the suffocating smoke. Three of the men were badly burned about the face and hands. Had the rescuers been six minutes later all six would have died from suffocation.

NOT GUILTY.

O. W. Ludlow Acquitted of the Charge of Killing Ira Hurd.

ALLEGAN, Nov. 11.—The case of O. W. Ludlow, who was charged by Mrs. Ira Hurd with the murder of the woman's husband, was given to the jury last Saturday afternoon. To-night after being out four hours the jury brought in a verdict of not guilty. Hurd suspected his wife of being unfaithful to him and returned home unexpectedly one night about six weeks ago. Mrs. Hurd claims that she thought he was a burglar and fired the fatal shot. It was alleged that she and Ludlow were criminally intimate and after the inquest both were arrested charged with murder. Mrs. Hurd will probably be tried this week.

Indications of a Lake Disaster.

EAST TAWAS, Mich., Nov. 12.—No distinguishing marks could be found on a lot of wreckage which was washed on the beach near Fish Point Saturday afternoon and the identity of the ill-fated vessel is a mystery. The wreckage indicates, however, that the steamer was of the largest size. The gale was the worst of the season, and if the crew of the wrecked steamer took to the lifeboats it is not possible they could have reached shore.

Big Lumber Plants on the East Shore.

BALLOTS ILLEGAL.

Supreme Court Decides What Constitutes a Distinguishing Mark.

LANSING, Nov. 10.—In deciding the case of Scott vs. Gleaser the supreme court was called upon to decide what constitutes a distinguishing mark on a ballot within the meaning of the new election law. The law says that the presence of a distinguishing mark shall render a ballot illegal, and the court unanimously held such illegal features to be any other than the single mark necessary to make known the elector's intention. The opinion says that if a voter desiring to cast a straight ballot make a cross over the top of his ticket and then put one in the square before each candidate on the ticket the ballot is illegal. Another illegal ballot, the court says, would be one where the voter desiring to split his ticket, had placed a cross before the name of the candidate for whom he wished to vote, and then erased the name of the candidate for the same office on his own ticket.

Thousands of ballots marked in each of the manners described were counted in Michigan Tuesday. In many cases where the vote was close the result already declared will be changed if contests are made, as they doubtless will be. The court bases its opinion on the proposition that the law is intentionally explicit and that as a single mark constitutes a vote a second mark is unnecessary and may be an agreed method of identifying ballots, which identification the law expressly seeks to avoid.

The decision has prompted democratic county candidates to ask for a recount, their expectation being that enough ballots will be thrown out to give them a majority. James Van Kleek, attorney for Comptroller Glaser, of West Bay City, who lost his office by the decision, will ask the supreme court for a rehearing.

REPORT OF MICHIGAN CROPS.

Average Condition of Wheat Higher Than One Year Ago.

The average condition is higher in all sections of the state than one year ago. Corn is estimated to yield in the southern counties and the state an average of forty bushels of ears to the acre. The area of clover-seed harvested is about 55 per cent. of the area in average years. The yield is estimated at 1.31 bushels to the acre. Compared with a full average crop potatoes are estimated in the state at 52 per cent. Live stock is in fairly good condition.

TERRA FIRMA TREMBLES.

Indications of an Earthquake Reported at Benton Harbor.

BENTON HARBOR, Nov. 10.—A number of people living in the vicinity of the Catholic church in this city were startled early Thursday morning by a low, rumbling noise that ended in a dull thud, as though some heavy body had struck the ground. At the same time the earth trembled and houses shook until the windows rattled. The noise was unlike thunder, and nothing resembling an aerolite has been found, but there was no mistaking the shock and oscillation of the earth, which continued for about two seconds. Some think it was an earthquake.

EDWARDSBURG, Nov. 11.—Mrs. Mary McMichael, an old lady living alone on her farm, was robbed by four masked men early Saturday morning. HOMES IN ARKANSAS.

The location of Arkansas is such as to exempt it from extremes of heat and cold. Its elevations and richness of soils adapt it to the production of a greater variety of crops, fruits and general products used for the sustenance and comfort of man than any other State in the Union. While its salubrious climate, joined with the other combinations mentioned, give to its fruit and food products a peculiarly delightful flavor that can be found nowhere else. It justly boasts of more health-giving springs and better well water than any other State. Lands are cheap and productive, markets accessible; health good; no blizzards; no drouths; never a failure of crops; good schools, churches and society, and what is also important, a hearty welcome for all. For descriptive pamphlet address John C. England, Little Rock, Ark. When you write, please mention the HERALD.

Must Have It.

Yes, you must have it. It is the only way you can learn what is going on about you; the news of the city, village or farming district in which you live. You must have your home paper, whether you can afford anything else in the way of current reading or not. And a great deal besides home news you will find in it. The editor of your home paper aims first of all to give you the home news, with intelligent and helpful comment thereon. But he does not stop there; he does the best he can to give you the general news and the best thought of the whole world. Of course he does not and cannot give you as much as you ought to have, and if you ask him about the matter he will frankly tell you so. He will also advise you what you ought to get to supplement your home paper and keep you and your growing boys and girls up with the times in the great fields of politics, sociology, finance, commerce, science, religion, art, education, and the literary and book news of the day. He will tell you that there is one weekly journal, unique in this respect, made up of carefully selected, condensed and classified extracts from the newspapers and magazines the world over, and that he has made special arrangements by which he can give you a reduced subscription rate for this unique journal, if taken in connection with the HERALD. He will tell you that the name of this journal so admirably suited to your wants is PUBLIC OPINION, that it is published at Washington, D. C., and that the regular subscription price is $2.50 per year, but that he can give you both the HERALD and PUBLIC OPINION for one year for $3.00 cash. He will also tell you that PUBLIC OPINION and the HERALD are exactly what you need during the political campaign. PUBLIC OPINION will be sent you for ten weeks on trial for fifty cents.

A GREAT NEWSPAPER COMBINATION.

For the past 52 years, over half a century, The Michigan Farmer has been published, and it is the oldest regular agricultural journal under one name on this continent.

With largely increased capital and under new management that has had 23 years successful experience in agricultural journalism, this great paper is making rapid strides toward the top in the galaxy of agricultural literature of America. It is most beautifully printed on high grade paper, and employs the most eminent writers on the science and practice of Agriculture, Horticulture, Live Stock, Dairying, Apiary and Poultry. Has a standard veterinary department for free treatment of all diseases of farm animals. A legal and medical department; contains all the agricultural news of the country and an invaluable literary and household department every week. Admits no swindling nor immoral advertisements and is in fact in every way a great, sound, practical, agricultural, live-stock and family journal, that the agriculturists of Michigan may justly feel proud of, and subscribe for with satisfaction and profit. We are pleased to be able to announce that we can furnish to our subscribers the Michigan Farmer and the TECUMSEH HERALD, both one year, making a total of 104 papers, for the low price of $1.50; certainly a bargain that should be liberally patronized. Specimen copies free.

WHAT YOUR THUMB TELLS.

Square Type.

The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied is the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such persons a whole volume of new matter, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil-picture of roses, 16½ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art was $350.00; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every one of its numerous departments which cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronicling every fact, fancy, and fad of the day. Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription; it will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher, 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion pages, and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb, which indicates in its small size, slenderness, soft nail, and smooth, rounded tip, those traits which belong essentially to the entier sex, every one of whom should subscribe to Demorest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with its merits, send for a specimen copy (free), and you will admit that seeing these THUMBS has put you in the way of saving money by finding in one magazine everything to satisfy the literary wants of the whole family.

Its Fame Will Live.

STATUE OF THE REPUBLIC COURT OF HONOR WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION.

The World's Columbian Exposition marked the climax of human achievement. It will live in memory of the crowning glory of modern times. No other development of the closing century can compare with it in practical benefit to mankind.

Who that exhibited is not proud of it? Who that failed to exhibit does not regret the omission? The former are the people of to-day. The latter are relics of the past.

No honor so high as that embodied in an award at the fair. Competition was world-wide, the fruits of ripest experience and noblest endeavors were submitted for examination.

Honest tribunals, composed of eminent scientists, examined and passed upon the claims of exhibitors. Their judgement based on inquiry and justice, proves conclusively the value of any article they commend.

Their approval was stamped on

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

It received the highest award at the fair from a jury headed by the Chief Chemist of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Dr. Price's was officially commended for highest leavening power, purity, keeping qualities and general excellence.

Mrs. G. W. Clark, who has been in poor health for the past year, a part of the time being helpless from a stroke of apoplexy, had another stroke Saturday night, and after a few hours of suffering, her spirit took its flight to her Savior, in whom she had a strong faith. She, with her husband came to our village from Raisinville, Monroe county, in the Spring of 1860. She was a devoted christian, loving mother and a kind neighbor. She leaves three sons and two daughters to mourn her departure: W. J. Clark, agent for the Wabash at Britton; Charley and A. B. Clark, who are in the merchantile business at Elkhart, Ind.; Mr. Romine Miller and wife, of Big Rapids, and Mrs. R. S. Housman, whom she was with at the time of her death, also a large circle of neighbors and friends, who sympathize with the bereaved family in their sad hour. The funeral services were held at her late home, Wednesday morning, Rev. H. Cansfield officiating. By Mrs. Clark's death the church loses a sincere and earnest Christian, and the village one of its best citizens.

S. Rederus.

Last Friday night, about 11 o'clock, as A. J. Lee was passing through the railroad yard on his way home, he noticed a light shining through a crack in the door of a box car on the side track. He at once returned to the telegraph office of the Wabash and notified night operator, George Clark, a young man posessed of considerable nerve and a good six shooter, who knew that the car contained merchandise which had just been transferred to him by the Mackinaw, at once concluded that a robbery was being perpetrated, and his dander riz. The boys immediately moved on the enemy's works. When the car was reached the theives were just making preparations to leave with several bundles of fine underclothing and other goods. George succeeded in getting a bead on them before they could get out of the car, and ordered them to line up on the ground, which they proceeded to do. Leaving their plunder in the car, they were marched to the telegraph office, here Art Lee, who is a valliant member of Co. C, mounted guard over the prisoners with a gun, while Geo. went for Deputy Sheriff Wm. Britton, to whom he delivered them. In a very few moments their wrists were adorned with steel jewelry. A freight train soon ransported them to Adrian, and befor morning they were in the county jail. They gave their names as Ernest Hill and Dell Baker. They have been in the business some time, and were badly wanted by the authorities. So the Wabash is rid, for a time, of a duet who have given them lots of trouble. The capture was a good one.

GREAT PAINTINGS OF EUROPE.

Feast for Art Lovers.

Of the many publications which come to us there is none which merits so much commendation, for its excellent typographical appearance, high-class illustrations and interesting reading, as "Campbell's Illustrated Monthly." This magazine fills a long-felt want in Chicago, as heretofore that city has not furnished us a publication devoted to a high-class form of illustrations.

The current number is a galaxy of the richest illustrations ever published. Teere is a frontispiece of Oliver Wendell Holmes, and a portrait of the late Prof. Swing, with sketches of both these men. Many of the most gorgeous paintings of Europe, worth several hundred thousand dollars are reproduced in the finest copper-plate engravings. Among them being 'Autumn,' 'Winter,' 'Waiting for His Share,' 'Perfectly at Home,' 'Evening Hours,' 'Cupid Leading the Choir,' 'A Reading from Homer,' 'The Favored Swain,' 'The Prize Jerseys,' 'Ready for the Hunt,' 'My Mother-in-Law.'" Also leading articles on the Chicago University, all the buildings and grounds being illustrated, together with a most interesting description and groupe of illustrations of the "House of Pansa at Pompeii." Many more rich illustrations are to be found in the Home Department, Art Department, etc.

This is beyond question the richest Illustrated Magazine published, and as an educator in the higher realm of Art, Science and Literature, it should be found on every family table. See publisher's special offer. Enclose 25 cents in stamps for October number. J. B. Campbell, 215 Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

A Piece of Her Mind.

A lady correspondent has this to say: "I want to give a piece of my mind to a certain class who object to advertising, when it costs them anything—this wont cost them a cent.

I suffered a living death for nearly two years with headaches, backache, in pain standing or walking, was being literally dragged out of existence, my misery increased by drugging.

At last, in despair, I committed the sin of trying an advertised medicine. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and it restored me to the blessedness of sound health. I honor the physician who when he knows he can cure, has the moral courage to advertise the fact."

The medicine mentioned cures all the delicate diseases peculiar to females, as "Female Weakness," periodical pains, irregularities, nervous prostration, spasms, chorea or St. Vitus's Dance, sleeplessness, threatened insanity.

THE LESSON OF THE ELECTION.

What the Newspapers Say About the Late Political Landslide.

Milwaukee Journal: The hard-times issue carried the elections for the Republicans. The man who maintains that the issue of the recent campaign was protection deceives himself, as will be discovered in the near future. McKinleyism was emphatically condemned two years ago. Failing to get the measure of tariff reform which they demanded, the people have punished the party which tried to furnish it and stood before the country helpless, a spectacle which disgusted thousands of Democrats, and raised in the minds of many converts doubts as to the capacity of the party to deal with the great fundamental questions. President Cleveland's administration is blamed in the popular mind for the panic: it must also be credited for the prosperity which is awakening, and which will be apparent to everybody before the next two years have gone by.

Pittsburg Post: The verdict of the people in 1892 has not been reversed by the Republican victories of Tuesday. The pledges of 1892 must be kept to the letter. That is the injunction of the people. Bravely, instinct with the courage of men performing solemn obligations, the National Representatives elected in 1892 must finish their work.

New York World: The defeat was as truly the work of Democrats as the "landslides" against Harrison were the work of Republicans. The number of independents outside of party organizations has not greatly increased of late; but the increase in the independence of partizans in the last eight years has been phenomenal and it is revolutionizing American policies.

Ex-Secretary William C. Whitney: It does not require a seer to see that the causes of yesterday's results were both general and special. It is a repetition, to my mind, of 1874, with the parties reversed. The panic of 1892 resulted in the great Democratic tidal wave of 1874, the hard times of 1893 and 1894, have resulted in this great Republican victory. I do not think it is a verdict against the party or its principles. The Democratic party has had four times as many defeats as victories since I have been a voter, and it does not demoralize easily. It will be stronger in the end.

Springfield Republican: For the causes of the overturn we must look first to the hard times, for which Republican legislation was far more responsible than anything the Democrats have done; but for which, world-wide in in extent, unprecedented in force and sweep, puzzling to the best thought of the world in its causes, neither party can primarily be held responsible. Added to the hard times has been the shameful record of delay and divices and trading on the public interests which attended the passage of the tariff bill. Not a few, also, of the best acts of the Administration came in to swell the tide of opposition. Thousands of Democratic working-men, looking only at the sentimental features of the Pullman strike and thinking to see in the swiftness and extent of Federal interference a disposition on the part of the Administration to champion the power of capital, either threw their votes to the third parties, or for the Republicans in order to more emphatically to make them speak.

Chicago Record: There is one point which is not to be forgotten. If the next two years should happen to be years of prosperity the new tariff law, which is untested, will be likely to incite question in the public mind as to the sincerity of the eminent party economists who have been urging a return to high protective tariffs. Prosperity under a Republican government would be good campaign argument. But how about prosperity under a Democratic tariff law?

Journal of the Knights of Labor: The People's Party managers and the rank and file of that young giant may well congratulate themselves upon their battle for principle throughout the land. There has been no loss, therefore there was much gain. The country does not say by its votes on Tuesday that it wants the question of tariff again brought forward. The concensus of opinion is that the Gorman bill shall remain on the statute books for a time at least, and, if we mistake not the returns from the West and the South, the large increase in the silver vote in Congress will make that question paramount in political issues. We welcome the discussion and have no fear of the results.

New York Voice (Pro): The moral of the whole affair is this: Whichever old party the country has in power, it wishes it had the other.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, Nov. 16, 1894.

The new bond issue, which was officially announced within 24 hours of Secretary Carlisle's positive statement that an immediate issue of bonds was contemplated, has succeeded the elections as a conversational topic.

In Washington, Secretary Carlisle has a reputation for truthfulness that is not excelled by any man in public life. For that reason it is inferred by many that there is truth in the talk about President Cleveland having made the arrangements for the bond issue with Wall street bankers without consulting Secretary Carlisle, although the President himself has denied that he did. The puzzling thing about that theory is that Secretary Carlisle should be willing to remain in the cabinet after such a humilliation. It is very positively asserted by some that Secretary Carlisle will resign as soon as he completes his annual report to congress, upon which he is now working.

Just why these bonds should be issued at this time is not apparent. The gold reserve is $12,000,000 more than it was several months ago, and although the receipts of the government from customs duties are less than they were expected to be, many, even among the bond advocates, regard the issue of bonds as premature. It was quite fully proven by the last bond issue that it was merely a pleasing fiction to suppose that the money received from the sale of bonds added that much to the gold reserve fund. Theoretically it does, but practically it didn't. The government required that gold should be paid for the bonds, and the gold was paid, but the purchasers of the bonds in many instances immediately presented Treasury notes and got their gold back for them, and there is no reason for supposing that purchasers of the present bonds will not do likewise. All these things and more will be heard from as soon as Congress meets, as there has been no indication of any change in the marked anti-bond feeling which was shown at the last session.

The report of the strike commission which investigated the Chicago railway strikes is being very harshly criticised by extremists on the side of both labor and capital, but it seems to strike the masses as a very fair and conservative document, recognizing the rights of labor to organize for self protection and also its right to demand and get from the corporations recognition of committees from its organizations in all negotiations affecting the welfare of the employes of said corporations. There is, of course, a wide difference of opinion as to the wisdom of accepting the commission's recommendations, for a permanent strike commission and for State boards of arbitration.

According to current talk Senator Gorman has advised Senator Ransom to persuade the democratic leaders of North Carolina to resort to trickery to defeat the will of a majority of the voters as recently expressed by the election of a legislature, and Senator Ransom has accepted the advice. The trick is that the governor shall call an extra session of the legislature which expires by limitation Dec. 31. next, and that this legislature shall elect a successor to the late Senator Vance, whose term expires March 3, 1897, and also a successor to Senator Ransom, whose term expires March 3, 1895, he resigning so as to make a vacancy. Such a proceeding would meet the condemnation of conservative men everywhere. During the recent campaign every voter in N. C. knew that he was to vote for members of a legislature which would have the election of two U. S. Senators, and those who would attempt to gain a temporary benefit by any such trickery as that mentioned would in the end be sure to find it dearly bought. It is not believed in Washington that the governor will give his aid to such a trick.

There is a large element on both the republican and democratic sides of the Senate who hate the populists, not as individuals, but as a party, so much that they would be willing to do almost anything rather than to see the populist Senators dictate the organization of the Senate by making a combination with either of the old parties, should the republicans fail, as now seems likely, to secure the necessary 45 Senators to organize the Senate. There are at present too few Senators in Washington to say what this element will do, but it is known that a proposition has been favorably considered by certain republican and democratic Senators which provides for a combination of republican and democratic Senators which shall entirely ignore the populist Senators in the organization of the Senate. Several of the populist Senators are now in Washington and they say they have no fears of any combination against them.

THE BEST BLOOD PURIFIER.

TECUMSEH, MICH., July 8, 1894.

My mother has been troubled with erysipelas and found great relief in Hood's Sarsaparilla. She had tried almost everything else but nothing gave her relief like Hood's Sarsaparilla. She feels like giving her testimony to the public, and she can truthfully say that Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best blood purifier that exists. SIMEON BOYD.

The People Have Their Way.

On Tuesday of last week the republicans carried the city of Cincinnati by over 22,000 majority in the general democratic slump. On Tuesday of this week another election was held in Cincinnati for a Judge of the Insolvency Court, and the democrats carried the city by 3,300, making a change of over 25,000 in one week.

This result in Cincinnati does not indicate that the city is democratic any more than the large republican majority given last week indicates that it is republican. It simply shows that the people have determined to have their own way in elections, and that they are ready to break party ties whenever it is necessary to condemn any party that is in power or to defeat any specially unworthy candidate.

There were special local causes which influenced the election in Cincinnati on Tuesday last, just as there were special general causes which influenced the elections generally throughout the country one week earlier. In both cases the people showed that their honest convictions are stronger than party obligations, and with each year the independent voter is becoming a more important factor in all our elections.

The people are beginning to understand that the sovereignty of citizenship should not be enslaved to mere party dictation, and this is one of the most gratifying and hopeful signs of our political future. It is safe to trust the people. They defeated the democrats overwhelmingly last week because they well merited the disapprobation of the country, and whenever the republicans shall forfeit public trust as did the democrats, they will be just as overwhelmingly defeated by the independent voters of the nation.—Philadelphia Times.

The Toledo Weekly Blade

Of the now nearly twenty thousand regular publications in the United States, there are but two or three weekly newspapers published for general circulation in every state and territory, and of these the Toledo Weekly Blade is the best and most popular of them all. It is the oldest, best known, and has the largest circulation. For more than twenty-five years it has been a regular visitor to every portion of the Union, and it is well known at every one of the sixty thousand odd postoffices of the country. It is made especially for family reading. It gives the entire news of the world each week, in such condensed form as will save reading scores of pages of daily papers to get less information. Republican in politics, temperance in principle, always on the side of justice and right, it is just the paper of the rising generation, and a great educator for the whole family. Serial stories, wit and humor, short stories, Household department, Question, Bureau, Farm department, Camp Fire, Sunday School and Young Folks are a few of the many other prominent features of this great paper. A specimen copy will be mailed free to any address on application, and the publishers invite any person to send in a long list of addresses to whom they will mail sample copies. They would be glad to mail a couple of hundred specimens to readers of this county. The Weekly Blade is a very large paper and the price is only one dollar a year. Address THE BLADE, Toledo, Ohio.

of all cases of consumption can, if taken in the earlier stages of the disease, be cured. This may seem like a bold assertion to those familiar only with the means generally in use for its treatment; as, nasty cod-liver oil and its filthy emulsions, extract of malt, whiskey, different preparations of hypophosphites and such like palliatives.

Although by many believed to be incurable, there is the evidence of hundreds of living witnesses to the fact that, in all its earlier stages, consumption is a curable disease. Not every case, but a large percentage of cases, and we believe fully 98 per cent. are cured by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, even after the disease has progressed so far as to induce repeated bleedings from the lungs, severe lingering cough with copious expectoration (including tubercular matter), great loss of flesh and extreme emaciation and weakness.

Do you doubt that hundreds of such cases reported to us as cured by "Golden Medical Discovery" were genuine cases of that dread and fatal disease? You need not take our word for it. They have, in nearly every instance, been so pronounced by the best and most experienced home physicians, who have no interest whatever in misrepresenting them, and who were often strongly prejudiced and advised against a trial of "Golden Medical Discovery," but who have been forced to confess that it surpasses, in curative power over this fatal malady, all other medicines with which they are acquainted. Nasty cod-liver oil and its filthy "emulsions" and mixtures, had been tried in nearly all these cases and had either utterly failed to benefit, or had only seemed to benefit a little for a short time. Extract of malt, whiskey, and various preparations of the hypophosphites had also been faithfully tried in vain.

The photographs of a large number of those cured of consumption, bronchitis, lingering coughs, asthma, chronic nasal catarrh and kindred maladies, have been skillfully reproduced in a book of 160 pages which will be mailed to you, on receipt of address and six cents in stamps. You can then write those cured and learn their experience.

Full oft with starch and gloss serene,
The linen collar starts the morn;
Full oft at noontime it is seen
All wilted, wrinkled and forlorn.

That's what you must expect of such a collar; it's the linen of it. The stand-up collars won't stand up, and the turn-down collars will wilt down. The easy, cheap, and pleasant way out of this is to wear "CELLULOID" COLLARS AND CUFFS. These goods are made by covering linen collars or cuffs on both sides with "CELLULOID," thus making them strong and durable, and waterproof, not affected by heat or moisture. There are no other waterproof goods made this way, consequently none that can wear so well. When soiled simply wipe them off with a wet cloth. Every piece of the genuine is stamped like this:

TRADE CELLULOID MARK.

Insist upon goods so marked if you expect full satisfaction, and if your dealer does not keep them, send direct to us enclosing amount and we will mail sample. State size, and whether a stand-up or turned-down collar is wanted. Collars 25c. each. Cuffs 50c. pair.

Like some bare life set thick with thorn,
Hedged hard by duty, desolate,
It grew apart, alone, forlorn,
Unsought by beauty, left by fate.

But something passed along that way.
A thought? A smile? A touch? A word?
A bit of sunshine through the gray?
A throbbing, lilting, lighting bird?

God knows. But on the morrow morn
That brier was a burst of bloom.
Somewhere, mayhap, a soul was born,
There was such incense of perfume!

Not one who passed with fate-cast rife
Had dreamed its wonder unconfessed,
That such a burst of beauty lies
Hold all of beauty unexpressed.

MY SHORT STORY.

At last my story was done. My friends had always told me that I had literary ability, and now that my manuscript lay completed before me I felt that they were right. I had written it over and over again, polishing a crude paragraph here and strengthening a weak one there, putting in a touch of rhetorical ornament in one place and removing it where it seemed overdrawn in another, until I thought (and my wife, too) that the style was just perfect.

Then my wife copied it off in her own hand, to make sure that it should be perfectly legible, and we both went over it together, to see that the dots and crosses, hyphens and quotation marks, capitals and punctuation were all in due order, for we were determined that the editor of The —— Magazine should not be tempted to a rejection by any carelessness in the preparation of the manuscript. A stamped envelope was inclosed for its return, if not available, and the story was consigned to the mail.

For the next two or three days I spent most of my spare time in trying to moderate my wife's hopes, by pointing out how many different questions had to be considered in deciding upon any given manuscript, entirely apart from its literary merit. My confidence was beginning to wane, and I was anxious that her pride in my ability should not be crushed if my story should be rejected. Then I received a short notice stating that the manuscript had been received and would be examined and reported upon at an early date.

By this time we had said all we could think of on the subject, and our conversation turned upon other themes, but the eagerness with which the mail was scrutinized whenever the postman came betrayed readily enough what was uppermost in our minds.

At last, after a full month of waiting, the longed for envelope came. I sat down at my desk to open it, making a wretchedly inadequate pretense of perfect composure, and my wife stood looking over my shoulder. With trembling hand I tore open the envelope and drew forth a small slip of paper:

"Your manuscript, entitled 'A Moonlight Romance,' has been accepted for publication. Remittance for the same will be made in due course."

There it stood in black and white, with the editor's signature at the bottom. My wife threw her arms around my neck with a shout of joy, and I upset the inkstand in my effort to make a fitting demonstration of my feelings. I was at last an author, and posterity would read my name and fame in the histories of English literature, along with the accounts of Dickens and Scott and Cooper and Holmes and Howells! My wife had hardly had time to recover herself sufficiently to speak before I was deciding which one of the great magazines should be permitted to publish my next story and what style of binding I should choose for my first collected volume.

As soon as our excitement subsided a little we began to speculate as to the probable amount of the promised remittance and the time when it would come. On the latter point we soon decided that payment would probably not be made until the story should be published, but on the former we found more difficulty in coming to an agreement. I calculated that the story would make 12 to 14 pages, and I did not expect more than $20 per page, or somewhere in the neighborhood of $250 for the whole. But my wife was quite sure that it would be more. She had read that as much as $500 was often paid, and sometimes, when the writer was very popular, even more than that. Of course I was not yet known as a story writer, but the story was so good, and the editor would be so anxious to secure my future work, that she felt sure he would pay at least one-half more than I suggested.

After two or three days of happiness, during which I made a rough draft of three more short stories, purchased a ream of writing paper and meditated more or less concerning a serial, we began to talk about what we should do with our money for the "Moonlight Romance." We decided at once that I must have the works of such of the standard English novelists as were not already on my shelves. These, in good, plain editions, made for use instead of show, we thought could be had for about $50. Then I felt sure that my wife would have many distinguished callers as soon as my literary position should become known, and her parlor was rather shabby. So I told her she must have it repapered and put down a new brussels carpet. That would take $50 more. We had both staid close at home all the previous year in order to save money for the last payment on our house, and so we concluded to take a trip on the lakes, which would cost about $100. We did not feel like doing this, however, without some additions to our respective wardrobes, which would take probably $75 more. As these items went a little above my estimate, we concluded not to settle definitely upon anything else for the present, but I threw out a hint about a new piano, if her opinion as to the worth of my story should prove correct.

The April and May numbers of the magazine appeared, but my story was not yet published and was not among the advanced announcements for June. By this time I was well along toward the completion of the plot for my serial, but I felt the need of a wider reading in English fiction than I had yet done. "What is the use of waiting?" said my wife. "The payment on the house isn't due until September. You can take some of that money for the books and replace it with the money for the story."

"Sure enough," I answered. "I am glad you thought of it," and before sundown the wagon came from the bookstore with $50 worth of English novels.

I went to the parlor to ask her to come and see them, and there she was on her knees trying to darn a hole in the old carpet. Just think of it! The wife of the author of "A Moonlight Romance" engaged in such menial work as that, and her husband's study full of new books! I told her at once that it would never do. The parlor must be fixed up at once. By Saturday night the new paper was on the walls, and the new brussels was down, the money, of course, being secured by the transfer of $50 more from our house fund, to be replaced from the pay for my story. Some of our friends began to wonder how we could afford so much expense just then, but we kept the secret to ourselves and told them they would see it in due time.

When the June number of the magazine came, we found the following item among the announcements for July: "A short story, entitled 'A Moonlight Romance,' by a new writer of great promise."

I had felt just a little uneasy about using the money saved up to pay the remainder on our house, when we had no certain means of knowing how soon the money for the story was to come, but it was all right now, with two months to spare.

"Why not take our trip now," said my wife, "while the weather is at its best?" Why not, to be sure? It was just the thing and would enable me to get some local color for a story which I had in mind dealing with pioneer life on the shores of Lake Michigan. So we drew $175 more from the savings bank, leaving just about $30 on deposit, got the tailor and dressmaker to do the necessary work for us in a great hurry, closed up our house and started.

It was a magnificent trip. The fresh lake breeze, the green islands that we passed, the hazy blue line of the wooded shore in the distance, the foam sparkling in the sunlight, all contributed to make it the happiest experience since the days of our honeymoon.

Two days after our return the July number of the magazine and a letter bearing its imprint arrived in the same mail. We were so eager to see the story in print that we left the letter unopened until we had cut the leaves of the magazine and feasted our eyes upon every page. Then I tore open the letter and drew out a check:

The Commercial National Bank of —— will pay to the order of Mr. —— the sum of seventeen dollars and fifty cents ($17.50).

C. Q——,
Editor of the —— Magazine.

I have given up literature for the present and have secured $300 from the Building and Loan association to make the final payment due on my house. My wife positively refuses to read any of the new books which I bought and has asked me not to say anything more about the trip on the lakes, but for some reason or other she doesn't seem to regret in the least the part of the money which went for the traveling dress, the wall papering and the brussels carpet. —J. Hanson Williams in New York Post.

Early Infantry Equipment.

Among the arms now obsolete which formed a large part of the infantry equipment in the days when the army was started was the pike, which was in the form of a spear, with a flat and pointed head, mounted on a staff from 13 to 18 feet long. The firearm in general use at the time was the matchlock.

What would a sergeant major of the present day, with his men armed with the magazine rifle, think of such a weapon as this: "Attached to the lock of this musket was a pan; also a cock, the hammer of which was somewhat in the form of a bird's, serpent's or dog's head. This head was split, and a screw compressed or eased the slits. The piece being loaded first with powder and then with ball, some powder was poured into the pan. The pan was then shut to keep this 'priming' from dropping out and to keep it dry. When the soldier wished to fire, he fastened his burning match into the slit of the cock, opened the pan, looked to his priming, presented and pulled the trigger. The match, falling into the powder in the pan, fired it.

"Between the pan and breech of the barrel communication was established by means of a small hole. When the piece was being loaded, the grains of powder were naturally rammed and shaken down close to this hole, and when priming the soldier took care to perfect the communication of the powder in the pan with that in the barrel. Thus the explosion in the pan caused the ignition of the charge."—All the Year Round.

Patience.

The adult who is not willing to wait is as much a child as the infant in the high chair. One cannot expect mature thought, patience and an appreciation of interchange of sentiment in a child. When he is a child, he sees as a child, he thinks as a child, but when he becomes a man he is popularly supposed to put away childish things, and if is on this line of reasoning that the new table rule has been instituted.

How to Avoid Farm Work in Summer.

It never gets so hot in the South as it does in the North. There are never any sunstrokes in the South. The hotter the weather the harder the Northern farmer has to work to save his crops, while down South the farmers do their farm work during the Fall, Winter and Spring, when the weather is cool, and during the Summer they take it easy. It is always cool in the shade down South and the nights are always cool. The thermometer seldom gets above 90. The hottest day during the past five years was 97 degrees.

You can grow one crop during the Winter, another during the Spring, and another during the Fall on the same land each year. You will net more money from each one of these crops than you can make from a similar crop in the North. You can get a home cheaper. It will cost you less to live. You can make more money. You will have better health, live longer, and enjoy life better in the South than in the North. A beautiful pamphlet that tells all about it sent free to all applicants. Go South now and investigate. TRIP TO "THE SHADES OF DEATH."

The most interesting spot in central Indiana is the "Shades of Death," a popular resort eighteen miles southwest of Crawfordsville. I had heard so much about it that I decided to leave my studies and wheel out there. Accordingly, on a beautiful Saturday afternoon I started, in company with one of my classmates. I had always thought that Indiana was a level state, but I was not long on the trip before I was undeceived. The first twelve miles was hard and smooth. One coasting—when the hills were our way, and good walking when they were not. We stopped to get some apples, and picked the fruit and blossoms from the same tree. The last six miles of the road we did not know, but upon inquiry were directed. We succeeded in choosing the worst road in Indiana, and followed it to its end; the edge of civilization, we thought. In front of us stretched away as far as we could see a dismal swamp, and on each side of us a lane led off over the hills. Leaving my companion I made my way to the only sign of civilization, a dilapidated house, which I found deserted. We then followed the other lane, hoping it might lead us to a road, but instead it seemed to take us into the depths of the wilderness. At its end we saw a house, and quickly going to it we enquired our way. The only inmate, a poor old barefoot woman, gave us the right directions, and hastening back we soon turned on the right road. The next three miles was over hills that we could call small mountains and through the wildest country that I had ever seen. Visions of banditi, robbers' caves and counterfeiters passed before our eyes, and we made all possible speed until we came to the open country. Coming to a very steep hill we started to coast it and soon were going at a terrible speed, when suddenly we came to a sharp turn. Applying all brakes, we jumped in time to save ourselves from injury. We carefully made our way down the rest of the hill and at the bottom found ourselves in a small ravine, through which the road led. Small streams of water flowed across our path and the roadbed was damp and soft. On either side of us were cliffs of rock, and as we proceeded the rocks were higher and the ravine darker. We stopped at a spring which flowed from the base of a large rock, to refresh ourselves and to admire the beautiful scenery. We had no conception of the "Shades," so we thought this must be the place. Determining to know what was at the other end of the ravine, we remounted and soon came to a river which we crossed over a large bridge. It began to dawn upon me that we had not yet reached the "Shades," so I asked one of the natives the way and distance. He told us it was still four miles and asked us if we were going to try to climp the hill before us. On replying in the affirmative, he told us that but two or three had ever succeeded in getting to the top without a dismount. I was tempted to laugh at his statement, but it is well that I did not, for upon reaching what I supposed to be the top I found the hill had only begun. On up we went for nearly a half mile, until completely exhausted we were obliged to dismount. After walking up the rest of the hill, which we found to be fully a mile long, we remounted, and the roads being in good condition we made all possible haste and soon turned into the road leading into the "Shades." The park before us, we dismounted and leaving our wheels we made our way out into the woods. Following a well worn path we soon came to a point called "The Lover's Leap." I pity the lover who must leap there, for it is fully two hundred and fifty feet to the rocks below. A little in the distance lay the river, which looked like a small rivulet, and on the opposite side the fields, in which the grazing cattle appeared like kittens. After drinking from a spring of ice cold water in a gully near by, we made our way over the steep bluffs and down the other side. Down we went until we found ourselves in the canyon, great rocks on either side, covered with moss, ivy and curious flowers, and piled in confusion two hundred feet high. We made our way along until we came to what appeared to be the center of the canyon, for from it diverged three or four ravines. Choosing one path we followed it, sometimes under overhanging cliffs and sometimes over boulders, rocks and little streams of water, until we came to the end, a large circular shaped basin called "The Devil's Punch Bowl." In it is a spring, and if one drinks of its water he may obtain the desire of his heart. Of course we drank. Returning to the center we chose another path and following it down a steep passageway and over huge rocks we came to the lowest point in the canyon. Far above us was "The Lover's Leap." The trees seemed to grow out of the rock on each side of the rather narrow canyon, shutting off any sunlight from the depths below. The little rill that flowed through the canyon spread over the rocks at this point and descended in a minature cascade. Strange flowers grew in profusion, spreading their yellow and white over the damp gray rocks. It seemed such a strange, new sight that, upon looking back after we had come down to the river a little farther on, I was reminded of Dore's illustration of Dante's return to earth from the lower regions. Surely the name "Shades of Death" was well fitted to this place. We went back through the canyon and into one of the ravines and, after a last look at the romantic rocks, climbed the steep banks to the paths above. The afternoon was well nigh spent and it was dark before we had gone five miles. With one of us leading and calling out the hills and dangerous places, we succeeded in making the trip home without mishap; tired, but light hearted, for we felt that a sight of the "Shades" repaid all the effort.

MR. EDITOR:—The mills of the University have ground for six weeks now. They have accomplished about as much as the "mills of the gods," for the same time. For example, they have ground the rough edges off the awkwardness of the freshman. The eyes and teeth of the foot-ball player have been ground out; his nose and ear have been ground off. The grinds have been extended elsewhere, for you hear students discussing an exam, which was a grind. The tutors are grinds, and "Pat" is the greatest grind of all. But I cannot tell all the grinds, since every individual wheel in this great institution has a little private grind which must be ground out.

Several surprises awaited the old students upon their return this fall. Our gymnasium is in full blast, finely equiped, and one of the model gymnasiums of the country. It is called the Water-man Gymnasium and the facetious students have already played upon its donor's name, and its appellation is the Temperance Gym. Beside the Gym we found a commodiously built and elegantly furnished new recitation building, called Tappan hall, which also has been profanely nicknamed Tammany Hall. Another new structure is an artistically built boiler house and a lofty smokestack which even a freshman cannot scale. I say the last for freshmen are like Palmer Cox's Brownies, they explore all places, sacred or secular, and even the main building dome is visited by the unhallowed feet of the verdant "freshie."

The late snow and cold has driven the tennis player and his antics to the comforts of his cigarette. The bicyclist and his curve, a la the new moon, has taken unto himself legs and painfully walks. But the foot-ball still survives and rages over the campus as destructive as before.

Of course you know of the laws of Lycurgus, and what would you think of the fellow who pronounced his defenceless name "Liquor-juice?" That enormity really occurred in one of our classes.

We have had Ex-Speaker Reed and McKinley here and are to have General Gordon tonight.

I will relate more college lore later.

Yours,

C. R. VANTYNE.

OBITUARY.

Maurice Allen Nay, the eldest son of Allen W. and Emily F. Nay, died at the home of his mother, in Holloway, Nov. 5th. He was a young man of promise to the community, and one who has been the stay of his mother since her husband's death. He was educated at the Rochester Free Academy, where he graduated at the age of sixteen. He came to Tecumseh immediately after his graduation and has been a hard working, earnest citizen. He owned a store in Holloway, where he was a member of the K. O. T. M. and of the Christian Endeavor Society of Raisin Presbyterian church. The family have been allied to the Universalist church of this place, in which the deceased was an active trustee. His many friends will regret the loss of one from their midst who has been everywhere actively and earnestly devoted to the good of his coworkers. It is not how long we live, but how well, that makes our life a success or a failure. We all have our failings, and doubtless he had his, but those who knew him well enough to be acquainted with the shortcomings of his nature, also knew of kindness and good qualities unseen and unknown by others.

Mr Jacob Litchard departed this life at his family home in the town of Macon, on Sunday, November 4, 1894, aged 86 years, 3 months and 26 days. He was about one of the first settlers in the town. He leaves a widow, seven daughters and four sons, also many relatives and friends, to mourn his loss. The honest, pure life he spent in the service of God and humanity; showed to the world the power of humble faith in the Son of God, to make private lives redolent. The funeral was held at the house on Tuesday morning, Rev. Sawyer officiating.

Mrs. John Allen, at her home in Ridgeway, Thursday morning, Nov. 8th, at the age of 77 years, 7 months, and 18 days. After an illness of 14 months she passed peacefully away to meet the loved ones gone before.

A light is from our household gone,
The voice we loved is still,
A place is vacant in our home
Which we can never fill.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks to all those who so kindly assisted us in the sickness, death and burial of our dear mother.

TEMPERANCE TOPICS.

(Edited by the Tecumseh W. C. T. U.)

BOYS' AND GIRLS' BRIGADES.

The thoughtful article on militarism which graced our contributors' page last week formed a part of Mrs. Monroe's annual address before the recent Ohio Woman's Christian Temperance Union convention. That it was received with approval by that state union is proven by the resolutions which were adopted with great enthusiasm by the convention.

These resolutions were offered by Miss Willard, who prefaced her remarks in part as follows:

"Whatever Europe may have to do, America need not encourage this spirit. The army of boys which is now organized in the boys' brigades cannot be viewed except with regret, especially as it has gone so far that just the other day there was the rattling of arms and the brandishing of sabers in the very house of God. Such things are an outrage to the Prince of Peace, whom the Crusaders serve. They look to a soldiership not of the bayonet, but of the ballot. Therefore,

Resolved, That the W. C. T. U. of Ohio views with profound surprise and anxiety the organization of Boys' and Girls' Brigades, and the branishing of weapons in the hands of the manhood and womanhood of to-morrow.

Resolved, That we hereby pledge ourselves to use our utmost influence to arouse public attention to the evils of this system and to contrast with it the gymnastic exercises of the Loyal Temperance Legion with its soldiership of good habits, its prohibition, purity and peace.

We are heartily glad that one state Woman's Christian Temperance Union has spoken with no uncertain sound upon this growing question, and we feel confident that others will not be slow to follow the lead of "the mother of us all," in this as in so many forward movements of the past.

This question of militarism in all its aspects is one of continually growing importance, but no phase of it can be so vital as that which touches the organization of the Christian church. Founded for the express purpose of promulgating the doctrines of the Prince of Peace, its very birth-song having been the angelic chorus of "Peace on earth, good-will to men," it is surely not strange that those who are most eagerly looking forward to the day of this full, triumphant reign should regard with distrust and oppose with vigor the instilling of the military spirit by that very church into the manhood of to-morrow.

On the part of the brigades there is much good to be said. They instill high principles of morality; pledge their members, if we are not mistaken, against profanity as well as against tobacco and alcohol, and strive to keep before their minds the glorious ideal of being soldiers of the cross. But,—and here is the grievous charge,—all this good may be nulified by the adoption of a line of policy and action in direct adtagonism to the governing motive and constantly expressed principles of the founder of the Christian church.

What shall be said of the following account taken from the New York Recorder and describing a corps of cadets in a wealthy Fifth avenue church?

After looking about very thoroughly for proper arms for the corps, and listening to the boys' strong objections to 'make believe' wooden guns, very suitable weapons were obtained. They are Burnside carbines, bought from the United States Arsenel at Governor's Island, by special permission from the Secretary of War. No small degree of charm for the boys is added by the fact that the very guns they handle were once used in real fighting. They weigh about six pounds and are, therefore, not too heavy for even the smallest soldiers—for the cadets range from four feet two inches in height to five feet seven inches. All of the other boys of the club not enrolled in the corps are drilled without uniforms; so that as soon as a vacancy occures a well-trained boy can be put in it.

In a masterely article in the August Arena, B. O. Flower, the editor, after quoting the above, and many parallel instances, says:

The position of the church on this question is at once astonishing and incomprehensible, if we admit that the spirit of the Founder still vivifies her being; for even the most superficial thinker knows that the drilling of youth in the manual of arms must necessarily fill the brain with ideals which are the exact antipodes of the teaching of the Prince of Peace.

The religious leaders, who introduced military instruction and drill in the churches and those who later favored it, whatever may have been their motives, committed an error so grave that it even now threatens to turn civilization back towards savagery and destroy the opening blossom of peace through arbitration. I do not wish to impugn the motives of those who advocated the formation of military companies in the churches. I believe that for the most part they only sought a way of drawing the young into the church by means that would naturally be attractive. The error they committed lay in departing from the fundamental teachings of their own accredited Leader, who, in life, spirit and word, emphasized in the most solemn and impressive manner the importance of driving from the brain every ideal that looked towards physical violence, every thought which comprehended the taking of life.

I most profoundly believe that if Jesus came to the republic to-day His first command would be, Ground arms; for the present arming and drilling of His professed followers is a flagrant insult to His life and teachings. He was emphatically a man of peace, and even opposed to retalliation. Love was His talisman. He taught that hate and the murderous spirit of war were from the pit. They represented the savagery of the brute. His disciples must be children of peace if they would please the infinite Father whose name was Love and who dwelt in light. 'Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God!' The sign manual of Divine sonship was peacemaking, exactly as fostering the spirit of slaughter is the unmistakable sign of the atheism of greed, the materialism of animality.

These are strong statements, but are they stronger than the facts of the case demand? Are they stronger than Christ's own words, 'Whoso taketh the sword shall perish by the sword.' 'If my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight.'

Who does not believe that the fostering of the military spirit and carrying on of wars in the name of Christ lay at the foundations of the long train of causes which led to the darkness of the Middle Ages? One gifted with logic and prophecy must see that the same results, to-day, follow the same causes.

He Has Become Tired.

Editor of the Voice—I have read the church resolutions beginning, 'No political party has a right to expect the support of Christian men unless it is opposed to the saloon,' etc., until I am tired. Why do the framers of this style of resolutions apparently seek to throw the responsibility for wicked complicity with the drink evil upon political parties without souls or moral responsibility unless it is true that they—these resolvers—are afraid to say the truth, that no professing Christian has any right to support by vote or influence parties not opposed to the liquor traffic? Of course there is no difference between a Christain and an unbeliever so far as any right to do this wrong is concerned; but the church may very properly insist upon her members conforming their political as well as their business, social and other acts to the standard of moral right.

The editor of the Charlotte Leader recently received a brand new quarter, and this is the way he describes it:

The Elocutionary and Musical Recital at the M. E. church last evening by Misses Fraine and Stoddard was fairly attended. The young ladies show careful training and are pleasing in their manner, and no doubt in a smaller room, or one adapted to their voices would have received a more generous applause. The pantomine "Nearer My God to Thee," seemed to please the audience best.

Rev. Thos. Marshall D.D., of Chicago, was the guest of his friend Rev. Chas. Brown over Sunday. Mr. Marshall is a pleasant speaker and his discourse was both interesting and instructive. He held the attention of the large audience present from first to last.

Wilson, the six year old son of Fred Aldrich, of the Central House, had a narrow escape from serious injury Saturday afternoon. About five o'clock he was going home and while passing one of the saloons on railroad street, "Cap" Marsh, who was intoxicated, reeled against him and both went into the gutter, the boy being under. For a time it was thought the boys shoulder was either broken or dislocated, but on closer examination it was found to be severely bruised. It is a wonder the boy was not crushed.

Wolf Brothers, who have been retouchiug the old and painting new scenery for Sutton's, opera house, have completed their labors and gone. These artists have worked a great transformation among the scenes and curtains. When new the drop curtain was not as fine as now, and the advertising curtain is unexceptionally fine for a curtain of that character. The center contains a beautiful and realistic view of the Bay of Naples, surrounding which are the adds 2x3 finished in gold. Their next field will be Iowa.

Rev. C. M. Brown contemplates giving a series of illustrated lectures, on the countries of the Oriental East, for the benefit and under the auspices of the young ladies missionary society. The first lecture will be given Tuesday evening next, at the Presbyterian church, beginning at 7:30, sharp. The subject will be "An Evening with Persia." It will be illustrated by 75 or 100 views, showing the national and house life of that people. These views were purchased in New York and are very fine. Admission, 10cts.

Onsted is booming right along in business this fall. M. P. Wemple has fixed up a nice office in his elevator and has good quarters. He was paying an even fifty cents for wheat last Saturday. HOMES IN ARKANSAS.

The location of Arkansas is such as to exempt it from extremes of heat and cold. Its elevations and richness of soils adapt it to a greater variety of crops, production of fruits and general products used for the sustenance and comfort of man than any other State in the Union. While its salubrious climate, joined with the other combinations mentioned, give to fruit and food products a peculiarly delightful flavor that can be found nowhere else. It justly boasts of its health-giving springs and better water than any other State. Lands cheap and productive, markets accessible; health good; no blizzards; no drouth; never a failure of crops; good schools, churches and society, and what is important, a hearty welcome for all. For descriptive pamphlet address C. England, Little Rock, Ark. When you write, please mention the Times.

Geo. Freese had partridge for dinner Monday and it was the most expensive dish we have heard of lately. It seems that the bird flew against the large plate glass in the front of his residence with such force as to go through. After flying around the room it went out the same way it came in and crossing the street struck the Fisk house and fell to the ground dead. George was soon on the spot and bore it home in triumph. He says it was the dearest morsel he has ever eaten.

Chicken thieves visited Loren Taylor's premises Monday night, and had they not been disturbed they would have made quite a haul. As it was they carried away about a baker's dozen. About 2 o'clock George was awakened by a commotion among the poultry, and arming himself with a revolver, went out to investigate the cause. He found the fowls terribly excited and running in all directions, but saw no one. He thinks he heard some one on the porch before he got up, and the supposition is that there were two or three, one remaining by the house to give the alarm if the inmates were aroused.

A GREAT NEWSPAPER COMBINATION.

For the past 52 years, over half a century, The Michigan Farmer has been published, and it is the oldest regular agricultural journal under one name on this continent.

With largely increased capital and under new management that has had 23 years successful experience in agricultural journalism, this great paper is making rapid strides toward the top in the galaxy of agricultural literature of America. It is most beautifully printed on high grade paper, and employs the most eminent writers on the science and practice of Agriculture, Horticulture, Live Stock, Dairying, Apiary and Poultry. Has a standard veterinary department for free treatment of all diseases of farm animals. A legal and medical department: contains all the agricultural news of the country and an invaluable literary and household department every week. Admits no swindling nor immoral advertisements and is in fact in every way a great, sound, practical, agricultural, live stock and family journal, that the agriculturists of Michigan may justly feel proud of, and subscribe for with satisfaction and profit. We are pleased to be able to announce that we can furnish to our subscribers the Michigan Farmer and the Tecumseh Herald, both one year, making a total of 104 papers, for the low price of $1.50; certainly a bargain that should be liberally patronized. Specimen copies free.

WHAT YOUR THUMB TELLS.

Square Type.

The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied is the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such persons a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil-picture of roses, 15½ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpre, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art was $350.00; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every one of its numerous departments which cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronicling every fact, fancy, and fad of the day. Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription; it will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. Jennings Demorest, Publisher 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion pages, and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb, which indicates in its small size, slenderness, soft nail, and smooth, rounded tip, those traits which belong essentially to the entire sex, every one of whom should subscribe to Demorest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with its merits, send for a specimen copy (free), and you will admit that seeing these THUMBS has put you in the way of saving money by finding in one magazine everything to satisfy the literary wants of the whole family.

awarded to

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

The highest award was given on every claim, comprising superiority in leavening power, keeping properties, purity and excellence. This verdict has been given by the best jury ever assembled for such a purpose, backed by the recommendation of the Chief Chemist of the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., who made an elaborate examination and test of all the baking powders. This is pre-eminently the highest authority on such matters in America.

This verdict conclusively settles the question and proves that Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder is superior in every way to any other brand.

Note.—The Chief Chemist rejected the Alum baking powders, stating to the World's Fair jury that he considered them unwholesome.

The ladies of the W. C. T. U. are making arrangements to have Mrs. Norine E. Law, national organizer and lecturer, give an address in the near future. Full particulars and dates given in due time.

The attendance at the elocutionary and musical recital given by Misses Fraine and King, of the Lawrence Barrett School of Detroit, was very good. The young ladies received the hearty applause of the audience at each selection, proving that they were appreciated. The selection "Nearer My God to Thee" was a fine selection.

The article that appeared in the "Rambles" of the 15th inst., in regard to the elocutionary and musical recital being on the evening of the 23d instead of the 23d, was sent by outside parties who evidently were misinformed as to the date. We have asked the editor to place all articles sent to the HERALD that are desired to appear in the "Rambles" beneath our letter and draw a dead line between, so we would not be responsible for errors or subject to criticism or censure that might arise, as has been the case in the present instance. But for some reason, occasionally there appears articles in our letter that are handed in which cause unpleasant feelings. It is hoped that hereafter all articles desired to appear in the "Ramble" column will be placed after our letter, with the dead line between.

John C. Palmer, one of Ridgeway's oldest pioneers, died Sunday morning, after a week's suffering from apoplexy, aged 77 years, 11 months and 5 days. He came to Michigan from New York state, with his parents, in May, 1831. He lived in St. Joe county a few years, where he lost his first wife, after which he returned to Ridgeway and settled on the farm where he died, living there 48 years. He leaves four sons and a daughter: Mrs. G. W. Jackson, of Tecumseh; E. A. Palmer, of the Palmer Furniture Works at Adrian; Prof. Martin Palmer, of Jackson; Henry and Ed., who reside on the old farm of their boyhood days. He has always been a strict Republican, being loyal to his party. The funeral services were held at the family residence Wednesday morning, the interment taking place in the family lot of the village cemetery.

A NEW MARCH.

A Special Musical Gift to all Readers of Our Paper.

The very latest musical composition to enlist popular approval is "The Broad Street Conservatory March," composed by a young Philadelphian, Roland H. Smith, a pupil of the popular institution to whom his work is dedicated. It is highly inspiring, suggestive as it is of the popular marches written by Sousa. It has been played by all the leading theatre orchestras, and concert bands in the Quaker city, and the seaside and mountain resorts. The piano part of this excellent march has just been issued, and through a special arrangement with the author we are enabled to present a copy free to every reader of this paper who will send name and address, enclosing this notice and 6 cents in stamps to cover mailing and postage, to The Broad Street Conservatory of Music, 1331 South Broad Street, Philadelphia. The retail price of the March is 40 cents, and this is an offer that should be appreciated by our musical friends.

THE S. W. FARMERS' CLUB.

The November meeting was held five miles southwest of the village, at Maple Grove Farm, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Green, on Friday, Nov. 16th. The attendance was rather below the average, owing to the non-appearance of a notice of the meeting in our local newspaper.

Some fine instrumental music upon the piano was rendered by Mrs. Eva Spafard and Mr. S. B. Renshaw. Mr. Green kindly favored the company with one of his songs, "The Horticultural Wife." The accompaniment was played by Mrs. G. M. Sutton. After the tables, from which we had partaken of such a bountiful dinner, had been removed, the meeting was called to order by President English.

A question-box afforded opportunity for each to propound questions they were not able to solve single handed. The recent complete Republican victory seemed to be occupying an unusually large share of some people's thoughts as was evidenced by the topic of many of the queries. A few of the questions and their answers we give below:

"Are Landslides Dangerous?" Answered by Geo. S. Rawson: Not if the right kind. The party in the right should get the majority of the votes. Personally, was glad of the recent landslide, only it was too immense. Regardless of politics, the American people do a good deal of thinking. He mentioned hearing a gentleman state, not long since, that the tendency is toward a monarchical form of government, but he does not agree with said statement. He thinks the policy of our government has not changed; the only approach toward a change seemed to have been in 1884.

"Who Are the More Extravagant; Men or Women?" A. D. English said: If we thought of some of the predictions relative to the result of the November elections, we should say, the men. Women were never extravagant; not in praise, nor in a superabundent use of adjectives, not in dress, nor in any way where money was concerned. But he did not like questions requiring decisive answers; in fact, would refrain from committing himself upon the question. It was quietly suggested by our president that perhaps he would prefer asking, to answering decisive questions.

"If obliged to reduce the amount of stock upon the farm, which should be disposed of?" A. Hitchcock thinks it best to keep the cheap stock, rather than sell it because it is cheap. Sheep, for instance, will prove remunerative in the near future.

J. G. English answered this query: "Which is the best kind of corn to plant, looking toward a yield of one hundred bushels per acre?" The White Dent, because it roots deeper; but good cultivation goes far toward insuring a large crop of corn.

"Do our people use too much sugar?" Mr. English said. Statistics assert that we use sixty-three pounds of sugar per capita. It is good, as well as healthy, so it is unnecessary to be niggardly in its use.

"To what do you attribute the recent Republican victory?" B. G. English: "To two causes—the financial panic of the last two years, and the inaction of congress."

Mr. Hitchcock asked what occasioned the hard times. Mr. English replied: "Extravagance brought about by the high prices following the civil war."

"How many sheep can be kept upon one hundred acres of land?" Answered by Richard Green. In England, they used to say, one sheep could be kept on every acre, but here in America we cannot keep so many. Sheep are still profitable and he would not sell for he believes in the old saying that "there is gold beneath the sheep's hoof."

W. E. Pease: "Is any system of irrigation effectual in this section?" Only in a limited way where there is a stream of water that can be utilized.

Mr. Pease referred to Mr. Rawson's reply so the first question. In his opinion, the landslide was attributable to the unreliability of the enfranchised foreigner.

"What can be done to preserve our forests?" Assigned to S. M. Merithew, who said: The time is near at hand when effectual means must be employed to save our timber from the present wholesale destruction. H. R. Palmer: Cut off the matured trees, but let the second-growth remain. Mr. Pease: Land must be planted to trees because the scrubby growth, left after the large timber is removed, does not make fine trees. Mr. Rawson does not think legislation sufficient to encourage land plantations, for the offer of ten dollars per tree had induced men in the township of Bridgewater to sell trees for ship building timber, in spite of previous resolves to preserve them. Legislation must be made in favor of plantations, not in the interest of northern pine barons.

J. G. English said the waste hillsides should be set to trees and the government should exempt the land so set from taxation.

Rev. Platt spoke of the forest fires. The devastation of the forest by fire was doubtless caused by the tinder-like character of the fallen pines. These were accidently set on fire instead of being, as has been thought, the result of incendiarism.

The club now adjourned until the first Friday in January, 1895, the place of meeting to be announced later.

People often think their liver, kidneys or stomach is out of order, when in truth it is the Nerve System controlling these organs that is diseased. Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitilizer cures all Nerve diseses. $1 at Orr & Temple's.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Reformed church will meet at the home of Mrs. Will Morgan on Wednesday, Dec. 5th. On account of the shortness of the days, dinner will be served instead of tea. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

PENTECOST POINTERS.

The U. L. A. of Pentecost, have received the first installment of their books, and they are now ready for distribution among the members.

If your community is trying to start a reading club, literary society, library association, or anything else for the general good, don't stand off and wait to see if it is going to be a success. Take hold and help make it a success; the world will then be the better for your having lived in it.

The ladies of the Library Association will give a Martha Washington tea party at Pentecost hall, Saturday evening, Dec. 8th. The supper will be served by ladies in costumes of the style of Lady Washington's day. There will be songs, instrumental music recitations, etc. Gentlemen, 10c, ladies, 5c. Come all and enjoy a pleasant evening.

When friends meet now the first salutation hereabouts is: "Did you take dinner at Wonder's hotel last week?" Because if you did you know you are quite likely to have a skirmish with small-pox in a short time. One lady left her horse and carriage in the hotel barn, and came back to find a big policeman guarding the entrance and all the hotel inmates locked in; but she finally obtained her rig and beat a hasty retreat for home.

The Development of the South.

The Toledo Weekly Blade

Of the now nearly twenty thousand regular publications in the United States, there are but two or three weekly newspapers published for general circulation in every state and territory, and of those the Toledo Weekly Blade is the best and most popular of them all. It is the oldest, best known, and has the largest circulation. For more than twenty-five years it has been a regular visitor to every portion of the Union, and it is well known at every one of the sixty thousand odd postoffices of the country. It is made especially for family reading. It gives the entire news of the world each week, in such condensed form as will save reading scores of pages of daily papers to get less information. Republican in politics, Temperance in principle, always on the side of justice and right, it is just the paper of the rising generation, and a great educator for the whole family. Serial stories, wit and humor, short stories, Household department, Question Bureau, Farm department, Camp Fire, Sunday School and Young Folks are a few of the many other prominent features of this great paper. A specimen copy will be mailed free to any address on application, and the publishers invite any person to send in a long list of addresses to whom they will mail sample copies. They would be glad to mail a couple of hundred specimens to readers of this county. The Weekly Blade is a very large paper and the price is only one dollar a year. Address THE BLADE, Toledo, Ohio.

THE BLESSINGS THAT COME UNAWARES.

E thank Thee, O Father of Mercy,
For the blessings that come unawares.

Well knowing what's won by pursuing
But adds to the sum of our cares

From morning to morning we labor,
The task we would do is not done,
And the things that seem great in the distance
Are nothing when once they are won

No one thing is worthy our worship,
And all things when clasped in the hand
Are naught but the signs of the music,
The symphony only is grand

The manna that falls in the desert,
The dry, dusty desert of strife,
Is sweeter than fruit to whose growing
We've given the years of our life

The joy is in building the temple
The substance is less than the dream,
And the song that we sing but the echo
Of the perfect one heard in the stream.

In vain through the volumes of wisdom
We seek for the blissful; and lo
The soft lisping accents of childhood
Set all of God's kingdom aglow

Youth, manhood, seek ever the jewel
Of freedom with hope-kindled eyes,
Age finds it to laugh at its luster
And resign it, a comfortless prize.

The bud that escapes us when searching
The bush for its promises sweet
Goes straight to the heart with its blooming,
And the instant is all but complete

These things that are won by pursuing
But add to the sum of our cares—
We thank Thee, O Father of Mercy,
For the blessings that come unawares.

CHARLES EUGENE BANKS.

COUPLING PINS.

A STORY OF THANKSGIVING.

THE wind had changed, and driven the little gray clouds into an ominous, leaden mass.

Miss Emerson, the teacher, now "boarding 'round" at the Starr farm, looked at the first flakes as she would have looked at any other personal enemies, had they come floating down to darken the clear skies of her promised day of delight.

It was seldom Miss Emerson gave herself pleasure; and now that she had bargained with haggling Mrs. Starr for a little turkey, nicely roasted, a mince pie, a glass of plum jam and a loaf of bread to donate to the big feast to be given the Sharpsburg benevolent institution, yclept "The Widows' Rest," on this Thanksgiving day, she wished the little gray clouds had kept to their first inclination to scatter before the shining sun.

Augusta King was going. She was a cousin-in-law who kept, and enjoyed keeping, the stalwart Starr boys in a state of feud. She was big, beautiful, vain, and something of an heiress.

Miss Emerson had, with amusement, not unmixed with indignation, silently watched this little comedy-pastoral. "The Rivals." Her quick sympathies went out to Giles Starr, the elder brother, a tall, splendid youth, with the torso of a gladiator that held the heart of a woman. For the daring, lawless, handsome younger brother she instinctively reserved her dislike, turning on the faucet of the fountain of worded disfavor at every aggressive attention offered her by Valentine Starr.

Augusta's basket had been officiously carried by both brothers to the snowy platform, where, when it was properly signaled, the "local accommodation" to Sharpsburgh, which lay thirty miles to the north, stopped to take on passengers. The railroad officials had prepared for the day's extra traffic by adding four passenger coaches to the usual complement that, once a day, plied between Madison and Sharpsburgh on the rather rusty little narrow-gauge.

It chanced that when, at Val's signal, the train stopped, the engineer, put at fault by the unusual length of his following, slowed up only as the last—and empty—car drew alongside the platform. With a gay laugh at their utter isolation, Augusta, when aboard, began talking to Val, who sat beside her, in low, confidential tones, and laughing in loud, maddening roulades, the better to incense poor Giles, who, worm of the dust that he was, turned, at last, and began a conversational attack upon Miss Emerson. He even sat down opposite her, with his back to his brother and Augusta, and made a successful pretense of having forgotten their existence.

Miss Emerson's pity for the worm, whose squirming she alone saw, drove her headlong into channels of argumentative harangue, where the waves were strong and the waters frightfully deep. To her gratification and surprise, Giles plunged after her and swam as a swimmer does who knows his strength and joys in the exhilarating sport.

WITH A BOUND SHE WAS ON HER FEET.

She had never talked to him in just this way, and to hold her own in the undertow through which his masculine mind buffeted its way with masterly ease brought the pink to her cheeks and the light to her eyes.

Again the train stopped, and Mrs. Bassett and her daughter, Matilda, lumbered into the second coach ahead. Augusta, observing her, and wishing to summarily punish Giles for his daring insubordination, loudly declared her intention of going to Matilda. Bidding Val follow with her basket, Miss King, with a sharp glance of snapping black eyes that was lost upon Giles, flounced up the aisle and out of the coach.

From the Bassett farm to the next probable stopping place was a stretch of nearly ten miles; beyond this farms and villages began to thicken, and slowing up would be the order of the day.

As if ignorant of Augusta's desertion, Giles took up the thread of conversation where it had dropped, and began so brave a winding of it upon so manifestly pitiable a reel of good intention, that Miss Emerson figuratively reached forth and took it from him.

In her kindly hands, and in the light of her sparkling, generous mood, the gossamer thread shone and glistened and changed color. He listened with ears deafening themselves to the sarcasm of a strident voice, and looked at her with eyes from whose lenses faded the image of a saucy, buxom beauty.

Miss Emerson wound on and on. Once over Giles' square shoulder she saw Val's face peering in at them from the outside platform. A demoniacal grin warped his handsome features, which disappeared an instant later, and then—

It was not noticeable at first. Giles' sweet responsivity, his gentle willingness to be consoled and entertained by her, shut out all lesser sensations. It was only when, feeling the train slacken in speed, she lifted her eyes and peered over Giles' shoulder, that she discovered it. With a bound she was upon her feet, her hand grasping the arm of the man before her.

"What is it, Miss Emerson?" asked Giles, unable to read between the frowning lines at the meeting of her delicate brows.

"What is it?" she echoed—"Valentine Starr!" and she looked toward the place where his dark, bright, malevolent face last shadowed the frosty pane. Giles followed her glance with his own and cried out in astonishment. The coach, in which they were being slowly brought to a standstill, had been uncoupled, the rope detached and themselves left to do what they might under the exasperating circumstances.

"Well, I'll be —"

"No, you'll not! You shan't be anything I can't be—and I won't be that!" laughed Miss Emerson, a bit hysterically. "Oh, Giles, I'm so sorry—for—you!"

"Sorry for me? Say, don't you be that now. I haven't heard a word you've been saying for the last half hour"—Miss Emerson may be excused for wincing slightly at this stunningly honest confession—"but I've been doing better 'n listening. I've been making up my mind. All the while your soft, bright voice was seeming to blow little rainbow bubbles through the air I was building scales out of my heart and soul to weigh two women in."

Giles stopped and looked dreamily out at the flo[illegible]ng flakes that swirled, and danced, and shot up again in the wind, as though settling with their fellows on the soft, pure levels below were the last of their intentions.

The snowstorm shut the two occupants of the coach into a little world of their own. No landmarks were discernible—their whereabouts a mystery neither of them was in a hurry to solve.

"And you weighed them—with mental, moral, physical or spiritual weights, Giles—which?"

"You're laughing at me!" cried the young man, turning to face a countenance wreathed in smiles; but what he dreaded he did not find. He met, instead, a pair of the sweetest humid blue eyes in the world, their long lashes moist, their dark pupils dilating.

"Laughing at you? Can't you see I'm—I'm crying at you? O Giles!"

"You've guessed it, then? You—"

"Giles, don't accredit me with that much wisdom. I teach school—but only the primary grades; and as for higher mathematics, I couldn't solve the problem of any man's heart—not even if he gave me x for the unknown quantity. Oh, dear—"

"What?"

"The widows—"

"Confound the widows!"

"I'll do nothing of the sort. And I consider it heartless of you to ask it of me."

"Oh, bother the widows, then! Miss Emerson?"

"Well?"

OPENING THE DONATION BASKET.

"I used all the weights you mentioned, I reckon."

"Well?"

"Physically, some one I've been a dumb fool about got it; but other ways—"

"Yes?"

"It balanced in favor of a mite of a woman with blue eyes, who blows rainbow bubbles—"

"Giles!"

"You did that sum pretty quick, Miss Emerson. I should think higher mathematics wouldn't be any trouble to you whatever."

"Now, you're laughing at me, Giles Starr! Well, laugh, then! But remember you have yet your own problem to solve."

"I've solved—and proved it," and Giles' voice grew tender and serious. "Proved it by such kindness as I never received before; proved it by your sweet sympathy and your tears—O, Miss Emerson—"

"I think, Giles," breaks in a soft, happy voice, "if you are so sure of the correctness of your solution, that 'Mary' would be much more appropriate than—"

"Mary—my darling!"

For three cold, halcyon hours they watched for a sign of rescue, hoping for its delay. Mary told Giles the simple story of her life, of its ambitions, of its loneliness. At noon they opened the donation basket, and ate their Thanksgiving dinner as mortals might eat who are permitted to dine with the gods.

And when, at last, an engine snorted importantly toward them through the shimmering obscurity of snow, they asked to be taken back to the farm, and not on to Sharpsburgh, where a baffled beauty had passed the day in giving anything but thanks.

WHEN the fields, where once waved the ripened grain, lie yellow and bare under the waning light of the year, it is fitting that we would muse upon the past, and, remembering the promise of spring, the beauty of summer and the fulfillment of autumn, should draw therefrom hope and inspiration for the future. Verily, the life of man is as that of the "grass which perisheth," and the life of nations is the aggregate of the existence of its individuals, and all have within their death the germ of the after-existing. Not a root of endeavor and longing sinks down into eternity, drops its flower and seed and is forgotten of earth, but has its resurrection, and there is not a storm that bows the head nor a lightning flash that rends the soul with pain but carry on their wings radiance for the flower and vigor for the seed.

The year over which now the ashes of remembrance are scattered has been to our nation a time of travail. From the hearthstone of the artisan have gone up the wail of hungry childhood and the prayer of destitute mothers. The hammer and the anvil have been covered with rust. The heart-beats of commerce have been so faint and feeble that timid souls, gazing from afar upon our afflicted nation, have cried that she was upon the verge of dissolution, that her proud edifices of Fraternal Love and Domestic Content were crumbling to the dust. The seasons have frowned upon the husbandman, and there has been distress east and west, north and south; fire and famine, flood and insurrection have touched the land, and yet the patriot people of our country, though still thrilling with the memory of recent grief, can look up to Heaven and thank God for what this year has brought. It is not in the sunlight of prosperity that the soul realizes to the full its blessings, but only when it has just emerged from the shadow of calamity is it able to comprehend the chastening love that "wounds to heal."

Again has that lesson of the immutability of the law of progressive creation—the "survival of the fittest"—been read by those who see in the events of each passing day the details of the scheme by which the world is to be lifted to grander planes of thought and action. The triumph were barren were its teachings unheeded. The winds, sighing above the graves of those who perished in their madness, or fell victims to the inexplicable frenzy of wanton force, bear to us not only the sound of weeping, they are fraught with whispers of promise. Liberty, our mother, our goddess, our best beloved, smiles while the tear-drops are yet wet upon her cheeks. Law, obscured for a moment by the gathering clouds, still stands in untarnished glory and dignity, her scepter touching the eastern and western seas, her garments brightening the whole land, as the light from the sacred veil, behind which was God, glorified the temple in days of old.

Bowing our faces to the dust we offer up our thanks, and as we listen to the sweet-toned bells ringing out the familiar strains: "Praise the Lord, all ye people, worship Him in the beauty of holiness," our souls echo the sounds. Our harvest may be scanty, the gleaners may not have returned with singing, but the breast of earth and of futurity will yield to us treasure all the richer for the present hoarding; gladder because we have learned our lesson aright; sweeter, for the fruit will have been ripened by the storm as well as the sun. We take our little ones by the hand and leading them forth, point to the barren fields and say: "Remember, oh, my son, the chastening of the Lord; be wise, oh, my daughter, with the wisdom of sorrow, and forget not the thanks-offering that is more grateful to deity than the wealth laid on golden altars. High resolves for the future; repentance for the mistakes of the past; loyalty to the teachings of our fathers who sealed their faith in our country's destiny with their blood; the cherishing of the ideals that have raised men from primordial chaos, and will elevate them to ideal excellence; these, oh, my children, be thy offerings." Gratitude which has within it no renunciation of self, no striving after reciprocal virtue as far as it lies within human power, no soul dedication, is as barren as the fallow fields, as unfruitful as the thorns and thistles

Thanksgiving.

The scythe of the mower—its music is o'er—
The fruits of the harvest are gathered in store
Abundant reward for a season of toil
The earth has returned from her generous soil
And now, with the autumn leaves o'er her breast
She turns to the sleep of renewal and rest
While we, with her bounties heaped high on the board,
Pass round the good fare and the jubilant word
With thankfulest laughter, with merriest cheer
And share with each other the gifts of the year

ORIGIN OF THANKSGIVING.

The date of the first observance of this distinctively American institution has been a matter of some dispute. A writer in an exchange has been to some trouble to ascertain the facts and states them as follows:

The first observance of a day of thanksgiving, formally recommended by the civil authorities, occurred in Leyden, Holland, October 3, 1575, it being the first anniversary of the deliverance of that city from siege.

In July, 1623, a day of fasting and prayer was appointed on account of drought. Rain came abundantly while they were praying, and the governor appointed a day of thanksgiving which was observed with religious exercises. The Charlestown records show a similar change of fast day into Thanksgiving in 1631, on account of the arrival of supplies from Ireland.

Dr. Franklin tells us that in a time of great despondency among the settlers of New England it was proposed in one of their public meetings to proclaim a fast. An aged farmer rose and spoke of their provoking heaven with their complaints, and of the cause they had for thanksgiving. He then made a motion that instead of appointing a day of fasting, they should appoint a day of thanksgiving. The assembly readily agreed.

Massachusettes Bay was the first of the colonies to appoint an annual thanksgiving by the proclamation of the English governor. During the revolution Thanksgiving day was a national institution, being annually recommended by congress, but after the general Thanksgiving for peace in 1784 there was no national appointment until 1789, when Washington, by request of congress, recommended a day of Thanksgiving for the adoption of the constitution. Washington issued a second proclamation of Thanksgiving in 1795 on account of the suppression of insurrection. President Madison, by the request of congress, recommended a Thanksgiving for peace in 1815. But the official recommendation of a day for the giving of thanks was mainly confined to New England until the year 1817, after which date it was regularly appointed by the governor of New York. In 1855 Gov Johnson, of Virginia, recommended a day of thanksgiving; but in 1857 Gov Wise, when requested to do so, publicly declined, on the ground that he was not authorized to interfere in religious matters. During the civil war, in 1863 and 1864, President Lincoln issued proclamations recommending annual Thanksgivings. Since then a proclamation has been issued annually by the president as well as by the governors of the states and the mayors of the principal cities. Custom fixes the time as the last Thursday in November.

It is well for us all to pause a little in the mad whirl of business or work or pleasure, and think of the blessings which have crowned the year, and lift up our hearts in special thanksgiving

TWO TURKEYS.

I

Said a jolly turkey gobbler to another:
"Our dinners are most plentiful and good,
And it grieves me to the heart, my dearest brother,
To see you don't enjoy them as you should.
You pine away, I fear you'll die!
Oh, tell to me the reason why!"

II

"You're a stupid-headed fellow," cried the other,
"That you don't perceive the farmer's little plan
He is feeding us against Thanksgiving, brother
Oh, hear the trial bravely, if you can.
The dreadful time is drawing nigh,
The day on which we're doomed to die!"

III

And on Thanksgiving morn, the farmer's mother
Had both the turkeys butchered, so I heard.
The skinny one went to the farmer's brother,
With "Best Compliments"—to make up for the bird.
The fat one, flanked with sauce and tart,
Warmed the cockles of the farmer's heart.

How to Avoid Farm Work in Summer.

It never gets so hot in the South as it does in the North. There are never any sunstrokes in the South. The hotter the weather the harder the Northern farmer has to work to save his crops, while down South the farmers do their farm work during the Fall, Winter and Spring, when the weather is cool, and during the Summer they take it easy. It is always cool in the shade down South and the nights are always cool. The thermometer seldom gets above 90. The hottest day during the past five years was 97 degrees.

You can grow one crop during the Winter, another during the Spring, and another during the Fall on the same land each year. You will net more money from each one of these crops than you can make from a similar crop in the North. You can get a home cheaper. It will cost you less to live. You can make more money. You will have better health, live longer, and enjoy life better in the South than in the North. A beautiful pamphlet that tells all about it sent free to all applicants. Go South now and investigate. ADDISON ON THE BEAN.

Our bustling neighbor on the western confines of the county, called Addison, has improved wonderfully during the past few years. Since the South extension of the Mackinaw road Addison has been the junction point of the east and south lines and has become a railroad center of considerable importance. The traffic on both branches is steadily growing. Once in the forenoon and once in the afternoon, the meeting of trains here from three directions, reminds one of the Adrian depot.

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of last week we gave our World's Fair entertainment for the Epworth League, and the days were agreeably spent in renewing old acquaintance. Among the merchants, some of the old stand-bys are still on deck although most of the business firms are comparatively new.

John T. Lewis still conducts the old store on the West side and J. L. Smith the similar establishment on the east side and these two stores control the dry goods trade of this vicinity. Geo. Tansley, the father of our undertaker, Harry Tansley, has a well stocked furniture store and he also fills the position of village undertaker. Kline & Dean, adjoining in the same block, have a fine hardware store and evidently enjoy a good trade. O. B. Bowen still holds the reins in the harness store on the east corner, where he has been so many years, and he has lately added carriages to his other branches. I. N. Hathaway still runs his big farm east of the village. He is the same healthy and happy man as of yore, and especially so since the election. The drug and grocery store on the west side, which has been headquarters for many years of Power & Son, is still conducted by them. J. O. Power also holds the American express agency, which he has held for many years. Howd & Brooks have a fine clothing store on the east side occupying half of the brick block with Mr. Tansley. They carry a large and finely assorted stock of clothing, hats and caps, boots & shoes and gents furnishings. They are evidently enjoying a good trade. The old firm of Wm. Curtis & Sons, breeders of high bred cattle, is still in existence, although the genial and gentlemanly Fred, who had charge of the business a few years ago, has joined the silent majority. Geo. A. Smith is now proprietor of the Exchange Bank, which furnishes the town good banking facilities.

The schools of the village are in a flourishing condition under the charge of Prof. Wade Millis.

The two churches in town meet the wants of the community in a religious direction—the Congregational, of which Rev. W. H. Brooks is pastor, and the M. E. church presided over by Rev. C. W. Baldwin. We had the pleasure of forming Mr. Baldwin's acquaintance during our stay there.

The postoffice is now run by Chester Binns who seems to fill the bill to the satisfaction of all.

The Every House is a large three story hotel on the west side which stands on the site of the old rookery that was destroyed by fire a few years ago. J. K. Kelsey is the present landlord, and is keeping an excellent house for a town of the size. Mrs. Kelsey, too, manages her part of the duties to perfection. The House enjoys a good patronage, both transient and regular boarders.

The Addison Courier is booming right along, under the management of our friend, A. J. Kempton. Joe has a fine two story building of his own, the ground floor being used as a jewelry store and printing office, the second story being used for Odd Fellows hall. The Courier is a finely equipped newspaper. In proportion to the size of the town, it is one of the best in Southern Michigan. The business men of Addison appreciate that fact by giving it a liberal patronage, for they know that the Courier's labor during the past ten years has been one of the chief causes of their own prosperity. During our three days' stay we made the Courier sanctum our headquarters, and enjoyed Editor Kempton's hospitality very much. It reminded us of the "good old times" when the Courier was our own property and Joe held down the local editor's chair.

The Evelyn House, Commercial House, three blacksmith shops, a large planing mill, a wood working factory and sundry other institutions add to the business facilities of this little town which for sixty years has stood bestride the Bean, and failed to become a large city principally because of being thus unfortunately divided. Prospects of connection by rail with Jackson are strengthening however, and in case our sister town is fortunate enough to secure the much coveted car shops she will become an important trading point.

A letter from J. B. Gould, of East Jordan, indicates that he is doing "very well I thank you," notwithstanding the hard times. Crops were generally good in that section. He got 40 cents a bushel for potatoes and sells his butter on a yearly contract at twenty cents a pound. He thinks there were 500 men tramping through the woods there last week hunting. One of his neighbors shot three in one day.

TEMPERANCE TOPICS.

(Edited by the Tecumseh W. C. T. U.)

THE DISTURBING FACTOR.

To the adherents of King Alcohol, Chicago's temperance day was, as a sign of the times, ominous. Liquor leaders, even more than Prohibitionists, are quick to see and to measure any vantage ground gained by the latter, and Mida's Criterion (a liquor organ from which we often take occasion to quote for the edification of the Union Signal readers) notes with evident alarm that the "trend of the speeches at the Auditorium was directed almost solely against the saloon, which it was declared 'must go.'"

To the Criterion it is "a matter of deep regret" that the saloon should be such a disturbing factor in the liquor business. To the manner in which this "institution" is often conducted it attributes the increasing popular hostility toward the traffic as a whole.

Now as upon the retailer depends the prosperity of the trade generally, and therefore of the liquor organs themselves, it seems hardly fair for the Criterion as representing the leaders and the capital in this great "Industry" to attempt to make a scapegoat of the saloon-keeper. Why denounce the "lawless" saloon-keeper when the whiskey trust and the brewers' combines, and even the great Republican party itself, are all making such desperate efforts to evade the law, or to interpret it according to their own unrighteous inclinations? Is not the entire drink business, from the manufactory down to the lowest dive in the city slums, characterized by an active spirit of lawlessness?

A man who can bring himself to engage in this body and soul-destroying business shows by that very act that he has within him the stuff from which lawbreakers are made. Every man who deals in intoxicating liquor "makes his living" by the misfortunes and miseries of his neighbor, and whether he be in congress, in the city council, or behind the bar of the dramshop, is not likely to manifest much respect for law, divine or human.

The whiskey trust may force Congress to do its bidding in the matter of tax or the bonded period, but it is not so easy for the "disreputable" saloon-keepers of New York or Chicago—while they may have money enough and votes enough to secure "police protection" in their law-breaking operations—to assist so openly and directly in the law-making process. And so, not being able to abolish what the Criterion designates as "those reasonable and just restrictions which the law has thrown around the business," they do what the same authority condemns—"overrides" them.

"The lawless saloon-keeper is the cause, the bitter Prohibitionist the effect," says this astute editor. Not at all. The Prohibitionist (bitter to the liquorite because judged by his own code) is the effect, not of lawlessness but of law. It is not the methods of the traffic he primarily objects to, but it is the traffic itself—to the law under which it is fostered and protected. We know there are "good temperance people" who aim at nothing more radical than an improved system of "regulation" which shall provide for the elimination of its most dangerous factor, the licensed saloon: but they are not the Prohibitionists. When Prohibitionists declare that "saloons must go," they mean that the entire liquor traffic, root and branch, must be annihilated.

It is said further that the saloon-keeper who sells to minors and drunkards is a far worse enemy of the trade than the Prohibitionist. Now is it to be expected that the retailer will refrain from selling to minors when he knows that it is largely from this class that his customers must be recruited? Is it not to the interest of the trade generally that as much liquor be sold as possible, and is it not consistent that the drink seller, like every other merchant, should endeavor to create increased demand for his wares? We think the Criterion hardly rings true to the great liquor concerns which support it, and whose views it is supposed to voice when it opposes the training of boys to become profitable patrons, and advocates the moderate use of "natures bounty" (?) From the standpoint of good business policy it seems inconsistant, to say the least, to declare it would be "one of the first to rejoice" at the advent of "true temperance" (the moderate kind). We should think the moneyed liquor interest would regard such statements as rank heresy!

As to selling to habitual drunkards, what wife of a drunken husband would not infinitely prefer to have the poison sold to him rather than to the son of twenty-one or twenty-two, her only hope and stay. If the law sees fit to restrict the sale at all, let it be not to the confirmed drunkard, who will obtain it under any circumstances, but to the young man not yet a slave to appetite. Let us save the curables.

The Criterion fears unless everything obnoxious in the retail traffic is eliminated therefrom, the innocent will continue to suffer with the guilty. What is there which the trade generally would consider obnoxious which rendered business brisk all along the line and poured money into its coffers? And where draw the line between innocence and guilt in the liquor business? Are "those who make their places the rendezvous of the vicious and criminal," and whom the Criterion would "repudiate and denounce," more guilty than those who keep "respectable" saloons where the young man receives his first impulse downward, where he gets his first training toward vice and crime?

A good audience assembled at the Presbyterian church last Tuesday evening to listen to Rev. Chas. M. Brown's lecture on Persia. About eighty views were presented, accompanied by descriptive readings by Mr. Brown. The lecture was not only entertaining but exceedingly instructive as well. We understand that Mr. Brown proposes giving lectures of a similar character from time to time as convenient.

The following gentlemen, comprising the refreshment committee of the Eastern Star for December, are requested to meet at the lodge room this week Saturday, Dec. 1st, at 2 p. m., sharp: John F. Schreder, Frank Bryan, M. E. Conklin, John Hicks, James Aten, Frank Avery, Ben. Garlinghouse, Sam. McClure, Wm. Jordan, Dolph Heesen, Frank Davidson, M. Smeltzer, Ed. Chilson, Hannibal Osborn, Scove Walker.

A very pleasant reception was tendered Miss Ora Bowen Tuesday evening, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. N. Bowen, the event being in honor of her 18th birthday. About forty young people clambered into lumber wagons and rode out with good nature if not comfort. It was intended as a surprise, and as such things always are, was highly enjoyed. Several neat mementos were bestowed by the beseigers and both sides agree that the affair was a decided success.

The Phonograph Concert given Thursday evening, at the Royal Arcanum Hall under the direction of Eugene Smalley, was a rare treat. The selections given were numerous and very fine. The attendance was large and all were delighted with the entertainment. Mr. Smalley's outfit is one of the latest, largest, loudest and most improved, and his selections are among the very best. Any Society or church organization wishing an evening's enjoyment could not do better than engage the services of Mr. Smalley and his Phonograph.

A play somewhat different from the usual order of dramatic offering will be seen on Dec. 5th. Probably no other drama of the kind has the potency in drawing from all classes and conditions of people that is experienced by "The Burglar." Young and old, rich, and those less favored with the world's goods, are equally absorbed with the story. In a home of wealth and refinement are all the scenes enacted, even where the burglary is attempted, though frustrated by the artless endeavors of a bright child of six years.

Tuesday's Evening Telegram says: Mrs. Wilson, the Franklin woman charged with beating and horse whipping her 90 years old mother-in-law, now an inmate of the county house, had her trial in Justice Vandegrift's court yesterday afternoon, continuing over into this morning. At 1 o'clock this afternoon the justice imposed a fine of $10 and costs, amounting to about $24, and in default of payment she is to spend 60 days in the Detroit house of correction. An appeal will be taken by defendant's attorneys, Watts, Bean & Smith. The woman's husband is already serving a 60 day sentence in Detroit for the same crime. Considerable interest was taken in the trial and the court room has been crowded.

THAT JOYFUL FEELING

With the exhilarating sense of renewed health and strength and internal cleanliness, which follows the use of Syrup of Figs, is unknown to the few who have not progressed beyond the old time medicines and the cheap substitutes sometimes offered but never accepted by the well informed.

N Society women often feel the effect of too much gayety—balls, theatres, and teas in rapid succession find them worn out, or "run-down" by the end of the season. They suffer from nervousness, sleeplessness and irregularities. The smile and good spirits take flight. It is time to accept the help offered in Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It's a medicine which was discovered and used by a prominent physician for many years in all cases of "female complaint" and the nervous disorders which arise from it. The "Prescription" is a powerful uterine tonic and nervine, especially adapted to woman's delicate wants for it regulates and promotes all the natural functions, builds up, invigorates and cures.

Many women suffer from nervous prostration, or exhaustion, owing to congestion or to disorder of the special functions. The waste products should be quickly got rid of, the local source of irritation relieved and the system invigorated with the "Prescription." Do not take the so-called celery compounds, and nervines which only put the nerves to sleep, but get a lasting cure with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

"FEMALE WEAKNESS."

MRS. HOOVER.

MRS. WILLIAM HOOVER, of Bellville, Richland Co., Ohio, writes: "I had been a great sufferer from 'female weakness;' I tried three doctors; they did me no good; I thought was an invalid forever. But I heard of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and then I wrote to him and he told me just how to take it. I took eight bottles. I now feel entirely well. I could stand on my feet only a short time, and now I do all my work for my family of five."

The play of the "Burglar" which is illed for Wednesday evening, Dec. 5th, not a blood and thunder play as some ight think from the title, but a refined society play which has been and is ery popular all over the States.

The Democratic Jackson Patriot facetously remarks: The election having opened the door of the state house Lansing to an unexpected cavalcade, bbery will be rife. It therefore becomes the Democratic party in the legislature to stand up as "one man" against ll vicious enactments.

The law class at Ann Arbor, which raduates in '96, is to present to the niversity a life-size bust of Thomas Cooley, to be placed and kept in the w hall. The bust is to be made by ulptor Morse, of world's fair fame, and o cost $750. The Clinton Woolen Mill Company will erect a building 40x100, two stories igh to be used for sorting and scouring wool. If the weather permits it will be put up at once. Last month's work was the largest in the history of the mill. This prosperous institution right at home scarcely carries out the theory of the calamity howler that free wool is going to destroy our woolen manufactories.

The Ladies Library Association are about to move into the room lately vacated by Dr. Frost. It will be a much larger and pleasanter room than the present one. The new room is now being renovated for their occupancy.

W. J. Ingersoll has lately completed a "pancake stove" which is a dandy. It will be run with gasoline, small pipes in a coil being arranged under a large flat griddle. It will be used in the kitchen of the Valley House. People will know where to go hereafter for good pancakes.

On Monday evening, Dec. 3, will occur the inspection and election of officers of Beers Relief Corps, No. 177, at Tecumseh. Every member is requested to be present and remember that the meeting will open at 7 o'clock sharp. Don't forget. Comrades, please bring patience with you.

Three years ago "The Burglar" when produced at the Madison Square Theatre, was the most potent drawing attraction at any of the theatres in New York, and it is produced in tone with all the attention to detail that characterizes the production at the home theatre. As pretty and interesting a play as ever graced the boards of any theatre is "The Burglar."

The quaint little women of Kate Greenaway are to be seen in a magazine for the first time since their creation. Miss Greenaway has heretofore always drawn them in color and for book publication. Now, however, she is at work upon a special series of her curious tots for The Ladies' Home Journal, and in that periodical they will alternate with a new series of Palmer Cox's funny "Brownies."

The Christmas Number of Scribner's Magazine presents a remarkable list of popular writers, including Rudyard Kipling, Robert Grant, H. C. Bunner, Brander Mathews and George W. Cable. In illustration it shows a number of novel features. Oliver Herford produces a series of fantastic drawings which are curiously interwoven with the text of Brander Mathews' story in a manner new to magazine illustration.

The Evening Telegram is responsible for this bit of philosophy: Don't be eternally looking out for No. 1. Sometimes people kill the goose that lays the golden egg by being too selfish and exacting. Bear in mind that others live in the world as well as you. The success of other enterprises makes a prosperous town, and that means business for you. Whenever and wherever a legitimate local enterprise lifts up its head be among the first to help push it along.

Miss Maud Hodges, teaching the Excelsior school in Franklin, shows forth her loyalty at the commencement of her term. The first thing she taught was to raise a flag, although some thought the weather was too cold and wind too strong, yet she said: "We will have our Flag," and let the wind and weather take care of itself, we will care for the flag. This is the second flag raised by her. May every teacher persevere and let us see a flag on every school house around Tecumseh.

Official figures in Ohio give a Republican plurality of 187,000, but there is a falling off from the previous election of 19,334 in the Republican vote and 75,365 in the Democratic vote.

The venerable John C. Palmer, of Ridgeway, was stricken with apoplexy a few days ago and died last Sunday morning. He was 78 years old, and had lived on the farm where he died from boyhood.

The Addison Courier says: Newspapers and people have been grinding out any amount of speculative matter relative to the northern extention of the C. J. & M. rail road. What the people most wish to learn about the matter is: when will the dirt commence to move.

John D. Kinney has an arrangement out in front of his store that seems to bother the boys to tell what it is. It is taken for a hen coop by many of our farmer friends and the front door of a saloon by the boys in the city, but John says its a Democratic voting booth to be used when enough of the unterrified can be got together to hold an election.—Evening Telegram.

Hon. A. O. Abbott, of Hudson, has visited the patent office in Washington and ascertained that his voting machine was entitled to complete protection, as far as patents are concerned. He will have exclusive right to the slides for making up split tickets, and allowing the voter to make a ballot which in every way conforms to the printed ballot heretofore used.—Adrian Times.

Mistakes happen even in the best regulated printing offices. An ad in a Hudson paper last week announced that the Derbyshire Clothing Company would sell dress suits for $1.25, $1.50, $2 and $3. This created a run that nearly set the genial Will Derbyshire wild, until he had explained that it was "duck" suits instead of "dress" suits. At last reports he was hunting for the compositor with a shotgun.

We dropped into L. D. Dewey's establishment on South Railroad street the other day and found in the storeroom an almost endless variety of dressed poultry. In the back room a large number were engaged in scalding and plucking the fowls. While the market is not as stable as he could desire, Mr. Dewey is buying all the time. He has from 20 to 25 engaged in picking the fowls and is dressing from 1000 to 1500 per day. He has some prime specimens, both chickens and turkeys, for sale.

THE TEMPLE QUARTETTE.

Never has a Tecumseh audience listened to a better concert than the one given by the Temple Quartette last Saturday evening. We have heard better individual singers, perhaps, but in this regard it was a very superior quartette, their voices blended together in the most perfect harmony. It excelled also in another direction. Their singing, although appreciated by musical experts, was not beyond the comprehension of ordinary people. It captivated everyone alike, musicians and others. Almost every number on the programe was honored with an encore, and Miss Pugh was called back twice, after reciting "Mr. Traver's First Hunt." Miss Pugh supplemented the selections of vocal music in an admirable manner. Although suffering from a severe cold, her recitations were finely given and she captured her audience from the outset. She is not only an elocutionist, but a dramatic artist as well, and yet her readings are simple and natural; they are not over acted. The entertainment as a whole was one of the finest ever given in Tecumseh.

DIRECTORS ON THE STAND.

Relate Their Side of Cashier Marvin's Alleged Embezzlement.

DETROIT, Nov. 22.—The sensational testimony in the trial of Fred Marvin, charged with embezzling from the Third national bank of this city while acting as its cashier, was continued in the trial Thursday. Frank E. Snow, a director in the bank and a prominent real estate dealer, testified that Sunday, November 11, Mr. Marvin and his attorney called upon him at his house and asked him to get Mr. Cristy, the president of the bank, to leave the city, as his testimony on one transaction would be most damaging to Mr. Marvin. Snow's testimony is corroborative of that given by Director Jackson. The attorneys for the defence are making a bitter fight, endeavoring to show that the directors of the bank violated the law in borrowing more money from the bank at one time than the bank laws permit. For that reason the secrets of the bank books are to be shown during the trial.

DETROIT, Nov. 24.—The prosecution in the trial of Marvin, alleged defaulting cashier of the Third national bank, closed Friday, and the defense at once moved that all the counts from the fifth to the thirty-third in the indictment be quashed. This would leave the case of the prosecution resting only on the alleged misappropriation of $20,000. The attorneys argued the request of the defense all day and Judge Swan then took it under advisement.

LABOR IN MICHIGAN.

Forecast of the Bureau's Forthcoming Report.

LANSING, Nov. 20.—The Michigan labor bureau is this year making a specialty in gathering statistics of farms and farm labor. To this end its canvassers have obtained nearly $10,000 personal schedules from farm employes, both male and female. The questions are relative to residence, nativity, social condition, work, wages, cost of living, homes, immigration and insurance. These schedules are being tabulated and will form an interesting part of the forthcoming annual report from this bureau. In addition to this over 1,000 representative farmers have been interviewed, and schedules relative to their diversified industries have been filled. The bureau will also publish complete statistics on the dairy industry, the fruit interests and other important matters connected with the farm and farm labor. Labor Commissioner Morse has decided to add a new feature to the report this year which will give it additional interest, especially to the farmer. Under the law 1,000 copies of the report will be distributed, and two-thirds of this number will this year go to the farmers. It will be ready for distribution about February 1.

SOLD FOR JUNK.

Documents That Belonged to Michigan's First Senator Come to Light.

GRAND RAPIDS, Nov. 25.—A collection of valuable old papers, documents and pamphlets, which belonged to Lucius Lyon, the first senator from Michigan, has just come to light. Lyons' sister died a few weeks ago and the executor of her estate sold 900 pounds of old paper for junk. The transaction was heard about and before the old paper was shipped to the paper mill it was found and carefully examined. Many rare documents relating to the early history of Michigan, and especially regarding the admission of the state to the union and the boundary line dispute between Michigan and Ohio, were rescued. A map of Detroit of 1836, one of Milwaukee of 1835, and Philadelphia in 1812 were also found.

LANSING, Nov. 26.—Francis B. Four candidates are now in the field. They are Schuyler S. Olds, John J. Patton, Jr., who now fills the place by appointment by Gov. Rich until the legislature should convene; Congressman Julius C. Burrows and Congressman Samuel Stephenson. Senator McMillan's term has also expired and the legislature will be called upon to select his successor. It is considered by many that Senator McMillan will be again chosen.

WHO BUILT THIS WALL?

Strange Discovery in a Michigan Swamp After Forest Fires.

DETROIT, Nov. 23.—The recent forest fires in Greenleaf township, Sanilac county, have laid bare an immense stone wall running through a swamp. The wall is 8 feet wide at the top and still wider at the base. At one place the wall rises 2 feet above the surface of the ground, but usually it is simply on the level with the ground, now and then disappearing. In all probability several of the professors from the University of Michigan will make a thorough examination of the wall. Those who have visited the wonder and who are likely to know declare that it is not natural, but was the work of man, from the fact of its being so uniform in shape and also that the stones are so carefully fitted together and thoroughly imbedded in mortar or cement of some kind. It may have been a dike or sea wall in years long past.

Search was made for him and he was located at Richmond, where he was taken ill while on the way to his old home. Mr. Parker was a prominent citizen and a pioneer in the packing-house business in Detroit, having organized the Willard Parker Packing company forty years ago. This company was merged into the present one some years ago.

SHOT BY A MASKED MAN.

Farmer Wickwire and His Sister Victims of an Assault.

BATTLE CREEK, Nov. 23.—An unknown masked man early Wednesday evening shot and fatally wounded William Wickwire, a farmer living near Climax, and also shot and slightly wounded Miss Wickwire, a sister of the farmer. At 7 o'clock a man knocked at the door of Wickwire's farmhouse, 3 miles south of Climax. An adopted son answered the knock, and a man whose clothes were concealed by a long rubber coat and his features by a pillowcase, entered and asked for the man of the house. He passed by the lad into the sitting-room, where Wickwire's sister was sitting. She noticed that he was masked and carried a revolver, and she jumped up and grabbed for the weapon. At this he pulled the trigger, the ball striking her in the side of the neck, making a slight flesh wound. He fired again, but this time the shot missed its mark. Wickwire, who was in the parlor adjoining, rushed out and grappled the man. The murderer turned on him and fired one shot, the ball striking him in the mouth and passing directly through his head. The second ball glanced around his eye; a third struck him in the stomach, and a fourth missed him. Mrs. Wickwire ran out of the parlor and endeavored to tear the mask off the murderer's face. He fought her desperately, however, and tried to back out of the room. Just as he was leaving Wickwire, who had partly recovered consciousness, raised a chair and struck him over the head. The blow stunned him and he half dropped to the floor, but rallied and ran from the place. Wickwire is fatally injured. His sister's wound is not fatal. It is alleged that a relative and neighbor is suspected of the crime, and that it was committed for revenge.

ASPIRE TO THE BENCH.

Many Want to Succeed Judge McGrath in the Supreme Court.

LANSING, Nov. 24.—It will be remembered that the last legislature passed a law increasing the salaries of members of the supreme court to $7,000 a year. This makes a position on the bench much more desirable than ever before and candidates are springing up all over the state. Judge McGrath's term expires next year, and the voters next spring will be called upon to select his successor. Judge Morse, of Lapeer, is already in the field with Judge Cahill, of Lansing, a close second. Hon. H. H. Hatch and ex-District Attorney T. F. Sheperd, of Bay City, have yearnings for this honor, while Philip T. Van Zile, of Detroit; Judge Victor H. Lane, of Adrian; Judge E. D. Kinne, of Ann Arbor; Judge Aaron V. The force of the blow hurled him to the floor below and a second fracture was made at the base of the brain. Mr. Hill left a wife and two children.

Some of them had never traveled on or seen a railroad car until their departure from here and had to be almost forced to board the cars.

HOMES IN ARKANSAS.
The location of Arkansas is such as to exempt it from extremes of heat and cold. Its elevations and richness of soils adapt it to the production of a greater variety of cross, fruits and general products used for the sustenance and comfort of man than any other State in the Union. While its salubrious climate, joined with the other combinations mentioned, give to its fruit and food products a peculiarly delightful flavor that can be found nowhere else. It justly boasts of many health-giving springs and better mineral water than any other State. Lands are cheap and productive, markets accessible; health good; no blizzards; no failure of crops; good schools, churches and society, and what is more important, a hearty welcome for all. For descriptive pamphlet address C. England, Little Rock, Ark. When you write, please mention the HERALD.

THE HIGHEST AWARD.

Royal Baking Powder in Strength and Value 20 Per Cent. above its Nearest Competitor.

The Royal Baking Powder has the enviable record of having received the highest award for articles of its class—greatest strength, purest ingredients, most perfectly combined—wherever exhibited in competition with others. In the exhibitions of former years, at the Centennial, at Paris, Vienna, and at the various State and Industrial fairs where it has been exhibited, judges have invariably awarded the Royal Baking Powder the highest honors.

At the recent World's Fair the examination for the baking powder awards were made by the experts of the chemical division of the Agricultural Department of Washington. The official report of the tests of the baking powders which were made by this department for the specific purpose of ascertaining which was the best, and which has been made public, shows the leavening strength of the Royal to be 160 cubic inches of carbonic gas per ounce of powder. Of the cream of tartar baking powders exhibited at the Fair, the next highest in strength thus tested contained but 134 cubic inches of leavening gas. The other powders gave an average of 111. The Royal, therefore, was found of 20 per cent. greater leavening strength than its nearest competitor, and 44 per cent. above the average of all the other tests. Its superiority in other respects, however, in the quality of the food it makes as to fineness, delicacy and wholesomeness, could not be measured by figures.

It is these high qualities, known and appreciated by the women of the country for so many years, that have caused the sales of the Royal Baking Powder, as shown by statistics, to exceed the sales of all other baking powders combined.

"Suppose, Bobbie, that another boy should strike your right cheek," asked the Sunday school teacher, "what would you do?"

"Give him the other cheek to strike," said Bobbie."

"That's right," said the teacher.

"Yessum," said Bobbie, "and if he struck that I'd paralyze him."

THE EDITOR'S THANKSGIVING

BY TOM P. MORGAN.

"What have I to be thankful for?" mused the able editor of the Hawville Clarion, one Thanksgiving day.

The bore—for every country editor's sanctum has its bore, just as much as every dog has a tail, and, in reality, more so. If a dog is deprived of his tail he will never, never get another, but if a newspaper office loses its bore his place is soon filled by a successor.

The particular bore that infested the Clarion office was like the bore that infests every other country newspaper office. He came day after day, and sat and gabbed and blabbed and spat and blew where he listed. Upon this occasion he was engaged in the arduous task of overhauling the editor's barrel of exchanges. Whatever it was that he wanted to find, it was always at the bottom of the barrel. When he dug down in the barrel and turned the bottom part of its contents up to the top, the particular periodical that he yearned for was still at the bottom.

Meanwhile, the editor, grown callous to the presence of the bore, mused sadly:

"Man wants but little here below—and generally gets it. What have I to be thankful for?"

Times had gone hardly with him during the past summer and autumn. The pawpaw crop had been a total failure, and he had not seen a complimentary ticket to a circus in many moons. He had not received a dollar on subscription all the week, nor a peck of country produce since early in the month. "Vox Populi," his trusted correspondent, had risen against him two or three times recently and unblushingly advocated theories diametrically antigaddling, so to speak, to the political policy of the editorial side of the paper. This had lost him subscribers.

Things had gone from bad to worse till now he was down to zero in finances and feelings. Recently the wife of his bosom had eloped with a man who owed him eighteen dollars, leaving the editor with three small red-headed children on his hands.

And now, as if fate, having gotten him down, was desirous of dancing on his neck, only last night a delegation of the reform committee had broken into the office and embezzled the residue of his ink and used it in tar and feathering a superfluous citizen who was not a subscriber.

The red-headed children were crying for bread, and so the editor took them out and seated them on the fence posts, in the hope that the red-headed woodpeckers would be struck by the family resemblance and feed them.

During the absence of the editor a large man, dressed in a beetling frown and a huge aquatic-elm club, strode into the office. The bore's head was still immersed in the barrel of exchanges, and, as all men look much alike in that attitude, the visitor naturally mistook the bore for the editor and fell upon him with the club just mentioned.

It is sufficient to say that the large man pounded the bore down into the barrel well nigh to the bottom, tamped him in firmly and departed whistling a merry lay. When the editor returned and had broken open the barrel and gazed upon the quivering carcass of the bore the lifted his hands on high and cried:

"I am thankful from the bottom of my soul for what I didn't get!"

"Born" Humorists.

One character peculiar to all humorists is that they will tell you "Humorists are born, not made;" the exceptions being so rare as to be phenomenal. By the way, can any student of human nature tell why it is that so few women are professional humorists? Among a score of splendid half-tone portraits of our most noted American humorists, accompanying 'Off-Hand Chats with Professional Humorists,' published in Demorest's Magazine for December, not one is a woman. These 'chats' are decidedly entertaining, and everyone will enjoy reading them. Likewise, everyone will be interested in the 'Empress Dowager of China,' which is most superbly illustrated with portraits, and scenes in and about Pekin. This is indeed, a rare Christmas number. The first picture is a charming water-color by Maud Humphreys, 'Under the Mistletoe,' which is unique in conception; the full-page gravure, 'Madonna and Child' by a modern artist, is a gem: and there are over two hundred illustrations besides these. 'Christmas Chimes,' an illustrated poem, 'Always With Us,' an account of Christmas charities in New York, 'Boy Choirs,' 'The Common Sense of Christmas Gifts,' 'Lullaby, the Frost Queen,' a Christmas story for children, 'His Christmas Gift,' 'Holiday Work for Busy Fingers,' and 'Some Christmas Menus' furnish Christmas cheer and suggestions galore for everybody. Then there are other charming stories, and every one of the numerous departments is full to overflowing with good things. Either letterpress or illustrations, independent of the other, is more than worth the price of the magazine, which is only 20 cents. The subscription price is $2 a year. Published by W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York.

PENTECOST POINTERS.

Mrs. Phoebe Allison and son, Herbert, of Sand Creek, and Miss Tiny Ellis, of Cone, are guests of Elijah Buck.

Well, the small-pox scare is subsiding, and except the poor fellow who lost his life by it, there has been no very great harm done perhaps.

A fine three year old colt, belonging to Harrison Daniels, jumped on to a gate one day last week, injuring itself so terribly that the poor creature only lived a few minutes after reaching the barn.

Oscar Chambers fell from a load of lumber a few days ago, and sustained very severe injuries. The wagon ran over and crushed one of his legs in a terrible manner, so that it was feared it would be necessary to amputate the limb. But it is now thought he will not lose it.

Remember the tea party at the Hall, at Pentecost, Dec. 8th. Some excellent music is expected on that evening, besides the regular programme. The U. L. A. are also preparing to bring out a play, and those who have been admitted to the rehearsals say it is fine. This event will come off about the holidays.

Rev. W. T. Williams, of Tipton, whose health has broken down from overwork, has been given a vacation by his people and will take a trip East, visiting Boston and other points during his absence. We hope he may derive great benefit from his journey and return to his work with renewed health and strength.

The Toledo Weekly Blade

Of the now nearly twenty thousand regular publications in the United States, there are but two or three weekly newspapers published for general circulation in every state and territory, and of these the Toledo Weekly Blade is the best and most popular of them all. It is the oldest, best known, and has the largest circulation. For more than twenty-five years it has been a regular visitor to every portion of the Union, and it is well known at every one of the sixty thousand odd postoffices of the country. It is made especially for family reading. It gives the entire news of the world each week, in such condensed form as will save reading scores of pages of daily papers to get less information. Republican in politics, Temperance in principle, always on the side of justice and right, it is just the paper of the rising generation, and a great educator for the whole family. Serial stories, wit and humor, short stories, Household department, Question Bureau, Farm department, Camp Fire, Sunday School and Young Folks are a few of the many other prominent features of this great paper. A specimen copy will be mailed free to any address on application, and the publishers invite any person to send in a long list of addresses to whom they will mail sample copies. They would be glad to mail a couple of hundred specimens to readers of this county. The Weekly Blade is a very large paper and the price is only one dollar a year. Address THE BLADE, Toledo, Ohio.

Reduced Rates for Holidays.

On December 24th, 25th and 31st, 1894, and January 1st, 1895, the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway will sell reduced rate excursion tickets between all points on its line, good to return until January 2d, 1895.

FOUR TO NOTHING.

The Second Annual Foot Ball Game With Clinton, Won by Tecumseh.

The black and gold colors of the Light Guard foot-ball team were flying triumphantly Thanksgiving afternoon. In striking contrast to last year's game, the one of Thursday was marred by wrangling and dissatisfaction, and eventually by the Clinton captain ordering his team from the field.

The Clinton men were a sturdy set of fellows, capable of playing a good game if properly handled, but their nerve was taken from them by the poor example of Capt. Jones, who made a business of kicking on the umpire instead of the ball. They played slow ball, while the home team were fast and played a rapid game.

The game was called with the ball in Tecumseh's possession. Heesen kicked off, Clinton made a fluke, Bowen recovered the ball and advanced it fifteen yards, was forced over the touch line, and the first down was called. Clinton got ten yards on a foul tackle. An end play lost the ball, Clinton failed to advance five yards and right end Spalding left the field with a strained hip. Substitute Hughes took his place in line. Tecumseh's criss-cross with Davidson's hard run and a good interference placed the pig-skin behind the line for a touch down. Time; 16 minutes. Corey failed to kick goal.

Wade kicked off for Clinton and a fair catch went to Tecumseh; the militia kicked diagonally, recovered the ball and went to the 25-yard line.

From this time on the game was a continual quarrel, no gains being made either way, Keusch making Clinton's only effort for a long run, but was downed on the 25 yards, and in the next move Corey took the ball as far back the other way. It was here that the big racket occurred. Wade tackled Corey, and raising him high above his head he let El. drop like a hot potato.

The umpire allowed 10 yards for rough playing. Seventeen seconds later time was called for the first half and Clinton refused to finish, their center rush, Steve Huntington, being the only man willing to play, and he agreed to stay and play the whole eleven alone. Score, 4 to 0. Time, 45 minutes.

A Famous Show of Beauty.

The show of distinguished beauty, transfixed by famous artists, which is now taking place at the Academy of Fine Arts in New York, has been anticipated by The Cosmopolitan Magazine in its November issue, in an article by Wm. A. Coffin, with illustrations of some of the more beautiful faces. "The "Great Passions of History" series has for this month's subject the romantic career of Agnes Sorel, who influenced the destinies of France under Charles VII. "The Art Schools of America," "The Great British Northwest Territory," "The Chiefs of the American Press," and the "Public Library Movement," are amongst The Cosmopolitan's table of contents. Survivors of the war and their children will find intense interest in "The Story of a Thousand," a personal narrative begun in this number by Albion W. Tourgee, who tells in a graphic way, of a regiment which saw fierce service—of its organization, its marches, its sports, and its death-roll.

THAT JOYFUL FEELING

With the exilarating sense of renewed health and strength and internal cleanliness, which follows the use of Syrup of Figs, is unknown to the few who have not progressed beyond the old time medicines and the cheap substitutes sometimes offered but never accepted by the well informed.

The Philadelphia Record gives this diagnosis of the political upheaval: "A schoolboy, who was asked to define 'responsibility,' said if he had only two buttons on his trousers and one came off all the responsibility would rest on the other button. This was not a bad definition, and it affords a very accurate idea of the popular apprehension of party responsibility. The party in power is held to account for everything that results through the default of the party out of power, and it nearly always happens for this reason that political successes are followed by reverses. The democrats came into power in 1892 just on the eve of an industrial and financial revulsion, for which previous bad industrial and financial legislation was almost wholly responsible. The people have put the whole responsibility, not on the failure of the button that came off, but on the other button."

To this suggestion of the New York World the people will say, Amen. "The Sugar Trust has ordered its refineries in New York, Philadelphia and Boston to be closed. It professes to be losing money, and for this reason it is throwing 50,000 men out of employment at the beginning of winter. Henry O. Havemeyer, the trust's president, who testified to bribing both political parties, pretends to be sorry for the working men whom he turns out on the streets. These facts controvert Mr. Havemeyer's assertions. The trust is not losing money. If it could find no market it would not pay them starvation wages for their trying toil nor turn them on the streets simply to aid it in its depredations. By shutting down to prevent more profits it is earning on $75,000,000 of water and $50,000,000 of investment. Congress ought to abase these organized bullies by passing the free sugar bill within a week."

The Toledo Bee says: "Some victim of the deadly blacklist has found a way of getting back at the railroad companies without waiting for the courts. His name is William Hallett, and he was once a conductor on the Chicago & Eastern Illinois railroad. He has now sued the corporation for $50,000 damages for blacklisting him and thus preventing him from securing employment. If he can prove his case, there isn't a jury anywhere that would not return a substantial verdict in his favor. If railroad companies will persist in preventing men from securing work they must as well be made to pay him damages to boot. It is strange indeed that the infamous blacklist business should keep aired in the courts long ago. The reason seems to be that it crowds the victim out of its victims: a short experience hunting for work and being turned out in the cold at every railroad office makes them afraid of themselves and fearful that no one will have any rights. Hallett's experiment, if successful, may open the way to a safe punishment of all railways employing blacklisting."

A recent number of the Free Press contains the following interview with Tom Barkworth: "Thos. E. Barkworth, of Jackson, was at the Cadillac yesterday. Mr. Barkworth is feeling in good spirits. His principal care at present seems to be a desire to see Cleveland throughout the state a free silver sentiment. He takes his defeat only philosophically and when speaking in jest alludes to the 'limitless realm of possibilities.' T. A. E. Weadock was also at the Cadillac. The latter is a glutton to attend strictly to his own business, but the former feels called upon to look after Egypt. When Mr. Barkworth went into the campaign, he received telegrams which read: 'Barkworth, you are a self-convicted ass.' These came from a small number of friends throughout the state. Mr. Barkworth paid for all those telegrams for every one was sent collect. The reason for this delugelay in the fact that each was at Mason in the interest of the E. His case, the doughty ex-representative said to innumerable friends, 'I am out of politics.' I have been in the minority in the legislature, and I have had enough of it. Hereafter I am going to stop saving the country, and attend strictly to saving my own soul. If anyone hears of my going into politics again, let him send me a telegram saying that I am a self-convicted ass.' Speaking of this little episode Mr. Barkworth said, laughingly, yesterday, 'Would you believe it, it cost me $40 and more to pay for telegrams when my willingness to run for congress was made public?'"

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, Nov. 30, 1894.

The attempted war scare this week was a decided 'fluke' and if it be chargable, as many believe, to the Nicaragua canal lobby, it was a "bad break" on the part of the lobby. The finger of suspicion certainly points that way. It was not until the committee representing the bankrupt Nicaragua canal company went to London, ostensibly in search of British capital, but really to to 'bluff' Congress, that England stirred up things by announcing a sudden change of policy, which was followed by a visit from the Nicaraguan minister to Sec. Gresham and a frantic appeal for help to keep John Bull from swallowing Nicaragua canal and all. Of course Nicaragua wants the canal built, and the lobby has impressed its officials with the idea that the best way to get it done by this government is to put out the impression that England is after it. There is no more danger of a war with England except of words, than there is of a prize fight between President Cleveland and Senator Hill.

It is rumored that President Cleveland will propose an extened use of silver as money in his message. The idea that it is only western and southern men who favor silver is erroneous. Representative Curtis of New York, says: "when we have a financial system established, it will have to include the free and general use of silver. There are no makeshifts or half way measures for nothing short of the general use of silver will satisfy the people or fulfil the requirements of trade."

Half Congressmen, or even a majority of them, thought as representative Phillips, of Pa. does, several very troublesome questions might be permanently settled. For instance, he said: "I have long been an advocate of a plan to take the tariff out of politics. A nonpartisan commission of experts should be appointed to deal with this subject. It is too bad that we should be periodically torn to pieces over the tariff, and that our business interests should suffer from constant agitation. No European country is so unwise. But after all, the tariff and the silver question are but minor issues. There must be something else done to meet the changed condition of the times and to conserve our agricultural and industrial interests, which have been neglected for a long period. The power of the unlimited and grasping trusts and combinations of capital, and the aggressiveness of foreign corporations carrying trade on the whole country, something ought to be done and quickly, in the way of wise, liberal up-to-date legislation that will get us on the right track as a government, and keep us there. The truth is, our legislation does not meet existing conditions. Laws that answered well enough one hundred and eighteen years ago when the nation was newly born are antiquated now. In recognition of the fact that our laboring men and agriculturists should have fair play, I would suggest that a committee of ten, composed of an equal number of these two classes, with a like representation of business men, be authorized by Congress to formulate some plan of legislation and recommend the enactment of such statutes as would be apt to bring relief and do exact justice among all. This seems a practical step in the right direction, and I expect to advocate some such measure, for it is something that cannot longer be delayed with safety."

A number of members of the present House who failed to get re-elected have demonstrated the wisdom of their constituents in retiring them from public life by applying, by letter, to the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House for their mileage money to be forwarded to them, stating that they did not intend to come to Washington during the short session of congress. Mileage as most people know, is allowed Senators and Representatives to pay for their transportation to and from Washington at every session of congress, and, although the Sergeant-at-Arms knows that most Congressmen travel on passes, the mileage is always put in a charged for in person. Before leaving the line at paying members who remain at home, and have a friend who would be shirking. And that ends all. These men only find that it was unwise to draw their salaries for the remaining three months of the term, if they do not come to Washington and attend to their duties.

A bill is being urged up by the opponents of the income tax to kill that measure by making it unnecessary to put it into effect. Secretary Carlisle estimates that $800,000 will be needed and he will ask Congress to make the appropriation of that amount at the next session. It is claimed by those who are in the deal that it will be comparatively easy to defeat the appropriation, but it can be done without a record vote. The law has strong and able friends in both Senate and House who are as good parliamentarians as there are in Congress and they will see that the appropriation gets a fair chance to become a law, and that if it is defeated it will be by an open vote.

Current Topics in the Schools.

The suggestion that every teacher, whether in city, village or district school, should strive to interest his pupils in the study of current topics, is an excellent one. The primary object of school instruction is not merely to carry the pupils through so many text-books on so many different subjects, but so to guide their growing minds as to develop the best manhood and womanhood. To accomplish these results, the teacher must go outside the text-books, must put life into his teaching, and must connect the school work with the life and thought of the day, especially the broader thought of the great outside world as yet but little known to the pupils in the schools. The first requisite for the successful study of current topics in the schools is a teacher who is himself in sympathy and in contact with the best thought of the day. The next requisite is a journal that can be used as a text-book; one that will furnish the necessary record of events and comment thereon, with a good range and variety of reading. With such a journal, the teacher can make the study of current topics of great benefit, not only to the scholars but to himself. A weekly journal that fairly presents all sides of every important public question, and that admirably meets the requirements for the study of current topics in the schools, is Public Opinion, published at Washington, D. C., at $2.50 per year. A contribution of ten cents apiece from 25 pupils will pay for Public Opinion for one year, or five cents apiece will pay for six months. The weekly issue can be used as text-books in the reading classes, and if preserved and bound they make a valuable addition to or nucleus for a school library. Send for specimen copy.

"THERE IS DANGER IN DELAY."

Ely's Cream Balm has completely cured me of catarrh when everything else failed. Many acquaintances have used it with excellent results.—Alfred W. Stevens, Caldwell, Ohio.

Dykeman, Druggist, Catskill, N. Y., says that Dr. King's New Discovery is undoubtedly the best cough remedy that he has used it in his family for eight years, and it has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. Why not try a remedy so long tried and tested. Trial bottles free at Orr & Temple's Drug store. Regular size 50c. and $1.00.

The credit of this country is all right, but its foreign policy is sadly in need of revision.

PROGRESS.

People who get the greatest degree of comfort and real enjoyment out of life are those who make the most out of their opportunities. Good digestion and good judgment lead such promptly to prompt and make use of those refined and improved products of modern inventive genius which best serve the needs of their physical being. Accordingly, the most intelligent and progressive people are found to employ the most refined and perfect laxative to regulate and tone up the stomach, liver and bowels, which is an ideal of such an agent—hence the great popularity of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. The ingredients, made from the purest, most refined and concentrated vegetable extracts and from forty-two to forty-four are contained in each vial, which is sold at the same price as the cheaper made and more ordinary pills found in the market. In curative virtues, there is no comparison to be made between them and the ordinary pills, as any one may easily learn by sending for a free sample, four to seven doses of the Pellets, which will be sent on receipt of name and address on a postal card.

ONCE USED THEY ARE ALWAYS IN FAVOR.

The Pellets cure biliousness, sick and bilious headache, sinfulness, costiveness or constipation, sour stomach, loss of appetite, coated tongue, indigestion, or dyspepsia, windy belchings, "heart-burn," pain and distress after eating, and kindred derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels. Put up in glass vials, therefore always fresh and reliable. One Pill. Dose. It is a laxative, two are mildly cathartic. As a dinner pill, to promote digestion, take one each day after dinner. For liver distress from over-eating, they are unrivalled. They are tiny, sugar-coated granules, any child will readily take them.

Except to substitute that may be recommended to be just as good, because it pays better for the dealer, because of paying him a better profit, but he is not the one who needs help. Address for free sample.

A Banker on Monometalism.

A paper that will be read with great interest by all who have made any study of the Silver Question is the Hon. George Wilson's criticism of David A. Well's arguments for monometalism in the December Arena. Mr. Wilson is the president of the oldest bank in Missouri, but he writes from the standpoint of the bimetalists and claims to have all the weight of authority and history and centuries of experience, in all the countries, in both hemispheres, in all ages, and under all forms of government, on his side. It is a paper that will be widely read and discussed by all students of American economic literature, to which Mr. Wells is a frequent contributor and so is familiar to the general reading public. Those who enjoy a lively controversy between two able and acute minds can turn to this paper certain of getting an intellectual exhilaration.

Bandit Bill Cook is said to be looking around for a chance to run for the United States Senate.

ELDER TWIGG'S PHILOSOPHY.

How they comin? Oh, jest fair—
Fair to middlin.
Chuck to eat and duds to wear—
Um-m-m, fair to middlin.
I'm one them men who never got Particularly overhet
When good or bad luck comes—and yet
I'm fair to middlin.

I figger things run jest about
From fair to middlin,
First and last, day in, day out,
Jest fair to middlin.
You'll find a smile for every tear,
And very rarely ever feel
The world looks wish—pretty near—
As fair to middlin.

It's better when you take that way—
Jest fair to middlin,
And can keep happy, as I say,
As fair to middlin.
I reckon a man don't have to choose
Twixt starvation and the blues
You're jest as fat and lots more cool
As fair to middlin.

A BELATED SOUL.

It was twilight. The wind howled, the snow fell fast, and little Martine lay dying.

"Alas!" wept the mother, "will the cure never come? Thou hast been a good child, and must thy unblessed soul wander without the gates of paradise? Ah, I can bear it no longer!" And she ran out into the night to find the laggard priest.

Martine shivered. She feared to die alone. But suddenly a tender voice breathed her name.

"Martine, knowest thou the good God confesses, through his angels, the souls of children?

"Tell me thy sins."

The girl raised her eyes and beheld a dim white form with folded wings and a bowed head rippled over with golden curls. And strength came to her to speak. She confessed her poor little faults bravely and bowed her head for absolution.

"Wait!" said the angel. "So thou hast stolen a rose colored kerchief from thy friend Babette?"

"Forgive!" murmured Martine.

"What hast thou done with this kerchief?"

"I have it here, beneath my pillow, monsignor."

"But why hast thou not returned it?"

"'Twill become me well on my deathbed," sighed the little Martine.

"Fie! Vain one!" cried the angel severely. "I see well thou dost not repent truly of this fault and must do penance ere I grant thee absolution.

"Rise!

"Take this kerchief and restore it to Babette!"

"But," exclaimed Martine, stupefied, "if my mother return with the cure, to seek me on my deathbed!"

"Teach not thy betters. I will assume thy shape. But mark the hour! St. Peter has orders to admit thee at dawn. Beware of being late, for I cannot assume thy soul's shape and seek entrance for thee to paradise. Neither can I claim my own place there until I give account of thee. I might be doomed to wander here on earth, or, in fact," he added impatiently, "no one can say what complications might arise."

"I will hasten!" cried Martine, springing from the bed. Dressing with haste, she wrapped herself in her warm cloak and ran joyously from the house. The snow ceased falling; the wind died among the trees; the stars came out and twinkled merrily. Then the moon rose, dimming the light of the stars, turning the icicles to diamonds and the frozen ground to glass. And Martine ran, danced, skipped and sang!

How beautiful was life and youth and health! Her limbs were as strong, her blood as warm, as before the fever laid its wasting hand upon her.

Alas! It is hard to die—at 16!

"It cannot be more than 7 o'clock," she thought, "and I have until daybreak." But she could not stay her dancing feet, and soon the lights of the village glimmered softly through the trees. There to the right lay the home of Babette! An instant more, and she stood upon the threshold.

"Martine!" Dear Martine!" a chorus of gay voices greeted her. "Martine, we heard that you were ill and dying!"

Martine shuddered. "And so indeed I am," she thought sadly.

"Come with us, Martine," cried Babette. "Good M. Champagnel has offered us his barn for a dance, for it is the fete of our little Lucienne.

"Come!

"Surely thou 'art well enough to dance!"

"Nay!" exclaimed Martine, thrusting the kerchief into Babette's hand. "I have come to restore this, for indeed I have not long to live, only the short night!"

A burst of laughter interrupted her.

"Thou art mad, little one!" cried tall Pierre, the handsomest lad in the village. "Thy cheeks are as bright as the kerchief! But since thou hast but this night to live dance it through with me."

"Surely there is no harm in that," thought Martine. "I can still be home before the dawn."

Once the dance had begun she forgot her doubts and everything else, for she had a light foot, this little Martine! And the sky was already gray in the east when there came a sound of horses' hoofs and laughing voices, and the barn doors were flung wide open, and a band of gentlemen, richly dressed, appeared before the astonished peasants.

"Your prince, good people!" cried one of the gentlemen, "desires to look on your merrymaking!" And Martine saw in their midst a tall figure, in a cloak of white velvet, and with shining, golden curls.

"The angel!" she murmured, trembling.

But as the abashed peasants remained silent the prince threw off his velvet cloak, and stepping forth in his white doublet and hose he gave a sign to the musicians, and seizing the hand of little Martine led the dance himself. Soon all the peasant lads were frowning blackly against the wall, but their sweethearts trod a measure with the gallants of the court. And before the dance was done Martine would have died for love of the prince!

"Thou art beautiful, little one!" he whispered. "Wilt ride away with me?" And as she only blushed for answer he drew her past the doors, and placing her before him on the saddle rode like the wind to his chateau on the hills.

And with his kisses raining on her brow and lips Martine forgot her promise to return, forgot the angel who must die in her stead, forgot that Peter had orders to open the gates of paradise at earliest dawn!

And when the morning broke clear and red over the verdant hills the gates of another paradise had opened for little Martine.

A happy year ran away. Sometimes Martine thought of the poor mother, weeping at home. "But she must have wept as bitterly had I returned to die," thought Martine, and she smiled on her prince.

But one winter's morning, just a year from the day when Martine should have yielded up her soul, the prince rode forth never to return. His retainers sought him through forest and field, over hill and dale, along the course of every frozen stream—in vain!

Martine sobbed and sighed in the chateau on the hills, and on the night before another year was out she crept unseen from the castle gates, down the mountain side, and journeyed through the forest until she came to her childhood's home. She pushed open the door, but there was none within. Then she went wearily on to the churchyard, and there she found her mother's grave and beside it a little slab which bore the name "Martine."

"Alas! I am justly punished," she sobbed, throwing herself down on the little grave. "The good angel who gave his life for mine wanders, forever perhaps, without the gates of paradise. Forgive! Forgive! I have returned at last. Take thou my life and let my soul do penance for thy suffering and my sin!"

"Nay!" said a tender voice beside her, and raising her streaming eyes Martine saw again the dim form with folded wings and bowed head rippling over with golden curls. "I have been shut out from paradise, 'tis true, but by thy side, in mortal shape, my love, I found a paradise on earth!"

The white hands parted before the bowed face, and Martine beheld the adored countenance of her prince. With a glad cry she threw herself upon his breast, her eyes closed as if in peaceful slumber, and with a faint, sweet sigh her spirit took flight with his to the glorious gates of paradise.

"You have been a long time finding this one," said St. Peter.

"True, good Peter," replied the angel quietly, folding Martine tenderly under his wings, "but this soul had to be prepared for paradise!"

And together they floated hand in hand through the celestial gates.—From the French of Mendes.

He Won.

There is continued strife between the Bloomleighs. It is only a question now as to which has the greater wit, whether they get a separation from each other or not.

They fell to dispating the other morning as to which was more at fault for the lack of amenities so noticeable in their home, and after a series of small squabbles Bloomleigh proposed that they settle the question by each keeping count of the unpleasant remarks made by the other for a week. If he was victorious, he was to take his holiday at once, while if she won the contest she was to visit her mother without delay, thus leaving the victor in either case to the glorious and undisputed possession of the field. Mrs. Bloomleigh accepted the terms.

The effect was wonderful. Peace floated with outspread wings over the Bloomleigh domicile for six days. On the morning of the seventh Mr. Bloomleigh looked across the table at his wife and asked, "Have you checked any ill natured remarks against my account, my dear?"

"No," she replied. "You have controlled your tongue remarkably well. Have you any against me?"

"Three hundred and twelve," he remarked calmly.

"What!" she exclaimed. "That cannot be. I have not said a single thing I've felt like saying to you for a week."

"I know it," said Bloomleigh. "You said them to the cook. They had to come out, of course. I'll start tomorrow."—London Tit-Bits.

In Our Dreams.

The professor of psychology was conversing with Mr. Higgins, the grocer, as that worthy man was wrapping up five pounds of coffee for the professor.

"Did you ever notice, Mr. Higgins," remarked the professor, "that what occurs to you in dreams never seems to be at all strange or out of the ordinary?"

"Come to think of it, professor," replied Mr. Higgins, "I have, but I never give it much study. No—that you mention it I recollect several dreams I have had that seemed to be right enough until I waked up and got to thinking about 'em."

"Ah," beamed the professor, "that is interesting. Tell me about them."

"Well," and Mr. Higgins shoved the wrapped up coffee across the counter to the professor, "they didn't amount to no great deal, I guess. I only dreamed that my wife couldn't talk."—Detroit Free Press.

The Truth of It.

Teacher—Johnny, can you define for us the difference between "caution" and "cowardice?"

Johnny—Yessum. When you're scart to go out on a boat and stay home for fear it'll sink and the boat comes in all right, it's "cowardice."

Teacher—Well?

Johnny—And if you're scart and stay home and the boat does sink, then it's "caution."—Chicago Record.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Mary A. Hazlett, wife of John C. Hazlett, died Tuesday, Nov. 13th. It was a remarkably sad death. A young wife called from her husband. A young mother called from her children. It seemed that she could ill be spared, but He that ruleth and doeth all for the best beckoned to her and she followed Him. Her maiden name was McKinney. She was born in the village of Tecumseh, Sept. 23, 1855. Was married to John C. Hazlett at Albion, Mich., Aug. 18, 1885. Two children survive their mother, Clyde six, and Clare three years of age. One, a babe, preceeded her to the kingdom but a few hours. Her funeral occurred Nov. 16th, and was attended by a large concourse of friends who by their presence signified the affection and esteem in which she was held by all who knew her. The services were conducted by Rev. C. M. Brown of the Presbyterian church. Her remains were laid to rest in the beautiful village cemetery to await the call of the Master at that Great Day.

TEMPERANCE TOPICS.

(Edited by the Tecumseh W. C. T. U.)

MISS ANTHONY IN SARATOGA.

Our editor-in-chief was recently "a looker-on in Venice," or, to put it more plainly, a spectator of the white ribbon convention of the state of New York. Beside her sat several remarkable women, among them the leader of our English host and Susan B. Anthony, president of the National Woman's Suffrage Association of the United States, and for well-nigh fifty years leader of the movement for the enfranchisement of women. In another place we have referred to the heroic effort made by Miss Anthony to secure recognition from the "party of moral ideas" in New York, and its total failure to respond to her plea. We are glad to give the party credit for what it has done elsewhere in favor of woman's ballot, and its record in that respect is improving, while we are sorry to say that the record of the Democratic party is such as to bring it in at the rear of the procession, a place that should not be occupied by the political organization, whose very name professes to represent "the people."

By invitation of the managers of the famous sanitarium of Dr. Strong, where we were all entertained, Miss Anthony spoke in the parlors, and we took notes for the benefit of "all concerned." Miss Anthony, at seventy-five years of age, is a more commanding figure than ever before; tall, erect, perfectly well-poised, with a masterly face and commanding action she enforces every word of her cogent argument by a personality that will long be retained in the memory of the American people, for it has been reproduced on canvas and in marble.

The argument she gave is common property, and we suggest that it ought to be repeated by friends of woman's suffrage the world over, as they have opportunity. These were her points:

In the first place I want women to have all the rights that it is possible to give them, for the sake of men. Every man drops down to the level of the woman at his side; every boy drops down to his mother's level. We want to make woman companions of men in the most complete sense of the work.

But I can tell you, women of this enlightened age, that in those days no man wanted to marry a women who had 'views.' For any woman to allow it to be known that she cherished 'views' was to condem her to a single estate for the rest of her days; and this I knew, but still I dared the situation and I have taken the consequences.

Another thing that I complained of (and do still) was that men do not hesitate to enter woman's sphere and take to themselves any advantages possible. They feel perfectly free to be cooks, but when they do so must have a big salary, not one dollar a week, but ten. Men took it into their heads that they would make womens dresses, but when they did so it became a great enterprise, and Worth, of Paris, is a millionaire. They do not think that women have any rights they are bound to respect, although we women have had so few occupations that one might think that the 'boasted chivalry' of men would have led them to say, 'we will not intrude on woman's sphere.' But no, that was far from their idea, —they wanted to keep all they had and get what they could, and they have done so. Do not misunderstand me, I am not blaming men. If they had not acted in precisely this way we women should not have come to a place (as we have now) where instead of seven occupations being open to us, as we had some years ago, there are hardly seven that are not open to us. So man's desire to do well for himself has really led him to do well for us although he did not mean it. Nor do I blame him on the merits of the case; he wanted to succeed and make for himself a wider world. He had a right to do so, but the point I want to make is that we have just as good a right, and intend to exercise it.

Finally, in respect to the temperance question—you cannot make bricks without straw. Rochester women crusaded in the saloons, but there were several hundred more when they finished than when they began. Prayer is good, but to be sincere, work must go along with prayer. You know what Fred Douglass said: He prayed for many a year that God would set him free, but at last it was revealed to him that he must pray with his feet, and he set out to make tracks by the light of the North Star for Canada, and from that day he has been a free man. So, I say to the W. C. T. U., you must pray not only with your hearts and your lips but with your ballots. When you do that, the legalized infamy that curses your homes will be put down, and not before. The rebellion was not conquered until the slaves were released; reconstruction was not affected until the slaves were enfranchised; the republic will not be redeemed until the 'home-guards' are fitted out with the ballot,—that strikes home more swiftly, and with a deadlier aim than any bayonet or bullet.

She said much more, this prophetess of the nineteenth century, but all to the same general purport. Long live Susan B. Anthony.

OBITUARY.

Harriet Barnaby Clark died Nov. 17, 1894, at her home in the village of Ridgeway, Lenawee county, Mich., being over 71 years of age. The deceased was born in Ithica Tompkins county, New York, July 16, 1823. Her childhood and early youth were spent in her native county. At the age of sixteen she came, with her parents, to Michigan and located in Raisinville, Monroe county, where she embraced every opportunity that the schools afforded, both for mind and heart culture. She was married to Geo. N. Clark in the year 1844. The early part of her married life was spent with her husband on a farm in Raisinville, where she bravely faced the trials and diseases incident to pioneer life. In 1861 she, with her family, removed to Ridgeway, Lenawee county, Mich., her husband engaging in mercantile business, where she has since resided almost continuously. While she never was a strong woman physically, by good management and untiring industry she made her home a most delightful haven of rest to all who entered there. Her health during the last few years of her life was extremely delicate, and the strain upon her nervous system, incident to the protracted illness and death of her husband, proved too much, so that from that date her decline was quite marked until last February, when she sustained a partial paralytic stroke, since which time she has been comparatively helpless. The subject of this sketch was a remarkably beautiful character, most loved by those who knew her best,—a kind pure heart, a sweet, loving disposition, all that go to make up unblemished character, were hers. Her home was the abode of genuine hospitality where the needy always found sympathy and substantial relief. As a christian she was as in every thing else, unpretentious. She was known for her loyal and faithful service to her adopted church, and still better known for her practical christianity, demonstrating in her daily life her belief in the Fatherhood of God and brotherhood of man. Could those who knew her best speak in terms that are fitting, it might seem the language of extravagant eulogy. After a fitting discourse by her pastor, Rev. Hartley Cansfield, her remains were tenderly, affectionately carried by her sons and grandson to the Ridgeway Cemetery and placed beside those of her late husband. The community drop the tear of sorrow over one who was a friend to the friendless, and her children and children's children rise up and call her blessed. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

The credit of this country is all right, but its foreign policy is sadly in need of revision.

The Great Question!

Every face at home, and every glance into our inviting windows, suggests the question—"What shall I get or give for Christmas?" The answer to the first depends upon the love and liberality of your friends; the second upon your own means and generosity. Let fate and friends look after the get, you look after the give—That's the part most blessed. Remember that a little given with love is more than much given because you can.

The Tecumseh Herald.

BY SCOVEL C. STACY.

Issued Every Thursday Morning.

TWO-MINUTE TALKS.

To all our patrons, greeting.

The holiday season is again here. Spring, summer, autumn and winter return regularly with each returning year. Day and night come and go with each revolution of the earth. Seed time and harvest follow each other as the seasons roll round. Jolly December, which begins practically with roast turkey and Thanksgiving and closes with the first day of the new year, is again on deck. The happy yule tide, with old St. Nicholas and the train of joys he brings along, will soon be with us, gladdening youthful hearts, brightening the dark corners of life, making the rich feel better, the poor feel richer, and old hearts feel young again. The "Old Reliable" proposes doing its share to make this month a banner one in Tecumseh, not only in the family but also in social and business circles.

In accordance with the custom which has prevailed in this establishment for the past ten years without an exception, we issue this week our usual holiday supplement, making a twelve-page paper. It will be continued during the four issues of December. It fitly represents the business capabilities and resources of our beautiful village. Almost every firm in Tecumseh is represented in these columns, either in the advertising cards or locals, and the few that are not with us now, have graced these columns at some time during the past year. The present issue is peculiarly adapted to meet the wants of people who are looking for bargains during the holiday season. Herein they will find set forth, in the best style of the printer's art, everything that man, woman or child wants to eat, drink or wear: silk dresses and cloaks for mother; ulsters for father; crockery for the table; cook stoves for the kitchen; nobby suits for boys and girls; organs and pianos for the young lady; books and jewelry for the young man; Christmas novelties in endless variety for all the little ones.

Kind reader, do you peruse the advertising columns of your home paper? If not, you are sadly behind the times. You search for the personal gossip that is retailed about your neighbor in this and surrounding towns; you scan the wedding notices and read with sympathetic tear, the obituaries; you examine the proceedings of the farmer's clubs; you become interested in the temperance items; you eagerly read the letters which occasionally appear from college student or traveler, who is, or has been, a resident of Tecumseh. But if you skip the advertising columns you slight the most important portions of the paper. In these close times it behooves every householder, especially, to make the best use of his income. A penny saved is a penny earned. Many a man is now compelled by circumstances to economize in expenditures, who would be inclined to liberality, and even prodigality, in flush times. Bargains can be found right here at home, equal to any that you can find abroad. If you doubt the truth of this assertion, try the experiment and be convinced.

A better class of business houses cannot be found in any town, large or small, in Southern Michigan. Our business firms are prudent and conservative, well posted in their respective lines of trade, enjoying first-class credit in the Eastern markets, possessed of stirling integrity and honesty. All these things count in trade. They are thus enabled to make their purchases on the most favorable terms, and buyers get the benefit of the merchant's skill in this direction. It is no small cause for congratulation that Tecumseh has not experienced a single business failure during the present year. She has passed through the panic and business stagnation of 1894 unscathed and is fully prepared to take advantage of the revival of trade during 1895 and convert it into a veritable business boom. Several new enterprises have been started within the past few months and more are contemplated. Keep the ball rolling, gentlemen. The HERALD will do its share.

If Brigadier Bill Cook and his gang are to be suppressed the result will apparently be accomplished by our faithful allies, the Cherokees, and not by Uncle Sam.

The American Ministers at Pekin and Tokio will use their diplomatic and kindly offices to bring Japan and China together with a view to getting them apart.

Ripans Tabules: one gives relief.

A Christmas Woman's Magazine.

The sparkle of bright music, in a new ballad by Sir Arthur Sullivan, entitled "Bid Me at Least Good-Bye," adds much to the pages of the Christmas Ladies' Home Journal, in which the full piano score and words are given. Frank Stockton opens one of his cleverest tales with an equally clever title "As One Woman to Another"; Eugene Field is particularly happy in a striking bit of character verse, to which a whole page with illustrations is well given; Frances Hodgson Burnett is delightfully reminiscent in telling of "The Man Who Most Influenced Me," who, she says, was an enemy of hers; John Kendrick Bangs begins his "Paradise Club" in a really funny "take off" on the equal sufferage question; the Rev. S. D. McConnell makes a very real being of the mother of Christ, in his article "A Girl of Galilee". The wives of Alphonse Daudet, and Mascagni, of "Cavalleria Rusticana" fame, are well sketched with portraits; Mr. Howells is particularly interesting in his literary autobiography; Robert J. Burdette is funny and wise in a Christmas article; Maria Parloa tells of "The Fete Days of the French"; Madame Nordica, the operatic prima-donna, writes to girls who think of operatic careers; the new serial, "A Minister of the World," takes us to the border of fashionable religious life in New York City; and in addition to all this there are not less than twenty articles on the practical side of a woman's life at Christmas time. This is indeed a creditable number of The Ladies' Home Journal—the best in fact, which it has ever issued. It is not surprising when one looks over such a magazine as this why it is that over 600,000 women buy it each month, particularly when they can get it for ten cents a copy. The subscription price of The Ladies' Home Journal is one dollar per year. Published by The Curtis Publishing Co., of Philadelphia.

Farm Home Reading Circle.

The Michigan Agricultural College has taken another step forward by inaugurating a college extension course of reading. This plan aims to furnish a systematic course of reading on subjects relating directly to agriculture and kindred subjects. While the course as planned recommends a progressive line of work, discussing first the underlying principles of agriculture, and later taking up special departments, yet it is largely elective and so flexible that a person interested in any branch of farming may select books pertaining only to his chosen line. For example, the class devoted to live stock aims to give a general knowledge of feeding, breeding and handling of horses, cattle, sheep and swine, and includes also a book on dairying. If, for any reason, the reader does not desire to take all the work in the class devoted to live stock and is especially interested in dairying, he may select only that portion relating to dairy work, and receive proper credit.

The course comprises five classes, Soils and Crops, Live Stock, Garden and Orchard, Home Making and Political Science. Certificates are given on the completion of the work outlined in each book and class, and on the completion of three classes the reader is presented with an appropriate diploma. The examinations are all optional, and any person may read in the course without sending in reports or taking examinations of any kind.

This course was but recently established, yet it has readers all over the United States and Canada, and the great interest manifested by those who are now enjoying its opportunities is a good indication of its value. Its popularity arises from the fact that it is prepared by busy men; it is short, practical and instructive; it offers a scheme of advisory correspondence with the college authorities which makes it possible to become intimately acquainted with the work of the experiment stations.

Send a postal card to the secretary for full information regarding this course.

Must Have It.

Yes, you must have it. It is the only way you can learn what is going on about you; the news of the city, village or farming district in which you live. You must have your home paper, whether you can afford anything else in the way of current reading or not. And a great deal besides home news you will find in it. The editor of your home paper aims first of all to give you the home news, with intelligent and helpful comment thereon. But he does not stop there; he does the best he can to give you the general news and the best thought of the whole world. Of course he does not and cannot give you as much as you ought to have, and if you ask him about the matter he will frankly tell you so. He will also advise you what you ought to get to supplement your home paper and keep you and your growing boys and girls up with the times in the great fields of politics, sociology, finance, commerce, science, religion, art, education, and the literary and book news of the day. He will tell you that there is one weekly journal, unique in this respect, made up of carefully selected, condensed and classified extracts from the newspapers and magazines the world over, and that he has made special arrangements by which he can give you a reduced subscription rate for this unique journal, if taken in connection with the HERALD. He will tell you that the name of this journal so admirably suited to your wants is PUBLIC OPINION, that it is published at Washington, D. C., and that the regular subscription price is $2.50 per year, but that he can give you both the HERALD and PUBLIC OPINION for one year for $3.00 cash. He will also tell you that PUBLIC OPINION and the HERALD are exactly what you need during the political campaign. PUBLIC OPINION will be sent you for ten weeks on trial for fifty cents.

LARGEST LINE OF MOULDING

. . . IN TOWN.

A cabin squatting on the side of a hill; trees leaning back as though afraid of falling into the ravine below; grass green under the brow of a rock as if hiding from a cow that stood in the hollow, ringing her bell; a hawk sailing round and round, darting his covetous, hungry glance at a pool wherein a hen had taken refuge; the gurgle of water pouring over a shelf-like ledge of slate stone; a boy and a girl standing under a tree, dreamily gazing into a blue pool. The month was June, the scene, the backwoods of Kentucky.

"If I was that bass down there," said the boy, "and you was that perch, I wouldn't let them common fish come a nigh you."

She laughed. "Oh, you'd want to eat me all by yourself."

He gave her a look of troubled reproach. She laughed merrily. "You can't take a joke yet, can you?" she asked.

"Why yet?" he replied.

"Because you've got to be so well acquainted with me," she rejoined.

"Is that a reason why I ought to take a joke?"

"Yes; for I ain't nothin' more than a joke."

"Well then," he said, "I can take a joke—I could take you."

"Oh, could you? But that wouldn't be a joke. It would be awful serious to me."

"Nell, don't talk to me that way. You know why I am stayin' here—you know that if it wan't for you I'd go away somewhere and be a poet. You know the school-teacher said he couldn't learn me any more, and I take it that when Bill Jimison can't learn anybody anything he's goin' to be a poet. Jimison told me that I ought to go away somewhere—said there never would be any chance for me here. And do you reckon I'd plow over yonder in that blazin' field if it wan't for you?

"OH, QUIT!" SHE CRIED

There ain't nothin' in the ground for me to dig out—my fortune and my fame are in the air and the woods."

"Oh, shucks, Sam, why don't you grabble all that foolishness out of your head and go to work. I reckon I've gone to school as much as you have, and I never have thought about bein' a poet."

"Maybe it is because you never have been in love," he replied, half pitifully.

"Maybe so," she rejoined, and then in excitement cried: "Look there! the bass has caught the perch!" And she had not more than said this when he seized her in his arms and passionately, violently kissed her.

"Oh, quit!" she cried. "Don't I tell you! Mother is in the door and will see you. Go away, you—you fool!"

He released her and stood gazing at her. "I despise you," she said.

"Ah, I have squeezed the truth out of you, have I?"

"If you have you put yourself to unnecessary trouble—you might have known it before."

"Yes, I might, for the poet always has been despised."

"Oh, has he? But if that's the case you ought to be loved."

"Nell, you'll force me to hate you."

"I will? But why should you want to make me so happy?" She took up her sunbonnet, which had fallen to the ground, and, holding it by the strings, stood swinging it like a pendulum.

"Do you mean that?" he asked.

"Of course. Why shouldn't I, Sam; you have made me miserable all my life. Yes, you have, now. All the time at school, whenever nobody was lookin' you'd all the time try to kiss me, and I hate to be kissed all the time. Why, you don't know how tiresome it is. There, mother's callin' me, and I just know she's goin' to give me an awful goin' over for standin' round here foolin' with you. Good-by, and I hope I'll never see you again—all the time tryin' to kiss me. Yes-um!" she cried, "I'm comin'."

She ran up the hill, striking at the trees with her bonnet. A woman, flushed and angry-looking, met her near the door, and pointing to a churn standing in the shade near the corner of the house, said:

"Thar's that thing standin' thar all the mornin' and you a foolin' round down thar on the branch. You air gest a gittin' so yo' ain't no manner account on the face of the earth. Who was that down thar a scrappin' with you? But you neenter tell me—I know. It was that good-for-nothin' Sam Foster. A triflin'er wretch never lived on the face of the earth."

"He's goin' to be a poet," the girl replied, taking an apron off a lilac bush and tying the strings about her waist.

"And what's that, for goodness' sake?" the woman exclaimed. "He'd better be thinkin' about cuttin' them sprouts outen that pore old hill-side field that he's afflicted with. Conscience alive, I pity the woman he marries."

"I don't reckon he's old enough yet to think about marryin' anybody," the girl replied. Having tucked up her skirts she had begun to ply the churn dasher.

"Not old enough," the woman snapped. "My sakes alive, I'd like to see a fool too young to think about gittin' married these here days. And I warrant you that thar air gals fool enough to marry him. Oh you neenter jerk that dasher around, for you know it's a fact. I do believe you'd be fool enough yourself."

The girl was silent. She had ceased to ply the churn dasher, she stood motionless, gazing down the slope toward the pool where she and the young fellow had watched the bass and the perch.

"Yes," the woman repeated, "I do believe that you'd be fool enough to marry him yourself."

"Well, if I was to, I might not have to churn all the time," the girl replied, resuming her work.

"That's a fact," the woman quickly agreed. "Yes, that's a fact, for you wouldn't have nothin' to churn."

"Well, I'd rather not have nothin' to churn. I wish there wasn't a cow nowhere. I hate 'em. All the time goin' about causin' folks to churn. If I was to marry a man I'd see that he didn't have a cow."

"You can safely marry Sam, then. He'll never have one—he'll never have anything."

"He'll have a wife if he marries, I reckon."

"Don't you sass me, Nell. I won't have it."

"I wouldn't sass you, mammy. You know I wouldn't; but he would have a wife if he married, wouldn't he? If he didn't there wouldn't be any use in marryin', would there?"

"Hush sich foolishness. It would depend altogether on the woman he got."

"Suppose he got me?"

"Look here, Nell. You ain't thinkin' about marryin' him, air you?"

"I owed I might, as he ain't got a cow, and that's about all I'd ask of him. But, mammy, suppose I was to tell you that I love him?"

"I would think you had lost your senses."

"Well, then, I reckon I have, for I do love him. Yes, I love him so much that I despise him and I could knock him down."

"Gracious alive!" the woman cried. "You've upset the churn and all the milk's gone. Come back here to me. You'll break your neck a runnin' off down thar. You are the fetchtakedest creeter I ever seed."

The girl came back, laughing an apology for the mischief which she had wrought, and the woman was scolding her, though with lessening harshness, when the mirthful apology and the reprimand were put to an end by the sudden appearance of a man, who, lazily turning a bend in the path that ran round a corner of the house, came slouching toward the woman. He held up a piece of paper, fluttered it, and drawlingly said:

"Got this here fer Miss Nell."

"For me?" the girl cried, running toward him. She snatched the piece of paper, ran away a short distance, halted, and read the following:

"Now that I have found out you hate me and don't want to be kissed all the time, I am goin' away to be a poet, and when I am one I know you will love me some and will let me kiss you a part of the time at least. If I don't become a poet I never will come back again, for bein' a poet is the only way I can win your love, for that is the only way I can learn to tell you how much I love you, and when I have done that you can't help lovin' me, for then you will see my soul all blazin' for you. I don't reckon I can get to be a poet before Christmas, but I am sure I will by then, so you may look for me Christmas; and if by any strange possibility I don't get to be a poet in time to reach home by Christmas, you just keep on a despisin' me as much as you please, but you must keep on a waitin', and don't let anybody else grab you up like the bass done the pearch, for as I tell you I'll be back.

"Yours, SAM."

A change came with the reading of the note. The noon in her eyes sobered into a twilight. For the first time in her life she was serious. She turned to her mother and said:

"I am awful sorry I turned over that churn."

The woman was surprised. "What's the matter, dear? Never mind about the churn. What's in the note, Nellie?"

"Nothin'; only Sam has gone away and won't come back tell he's a poet and I'm afraid he won't be one before Christmas and I want him now."

"But maybe he can git the job before then. It's a good while till Christmas, and a good many things mout turn up 'twixt now and then. Don't fret none."

But she did fret. She fretted for weeks at a time; at morning when she saw the dew on the trumpet vine, at noon when she stood, gazing into the blue pool, at evening when the whippoorwill sang his sad song. The season ripened, the grain was reaped, the leaves had fallen—Christmas was approaching, coming slowly down, it seemed, from the browning hills.

Christmas Eve, Christmas night. The girl stood in the door, listening. No sounds except the faint hack, hack, hack of an evening's woodchopper, far away, and the lowing of a cold and desolate cow in the ravine. He did not come.

The grass was green again, the leaves came out, the blackberry briars were in bloom, the water pouring over the shelf of slate struck a sweeter, sadder note. The season drew a long breath and another change came.

It was Christmas night, and the girl stood in the door. The belated woodchopper's hack, hack, hack was heard, and the same cold cow was lowing in the ravine.

"Good evening."

"Gracious alive, is this you, Sam?"

"Yes," he said, still standing back from her. The firelight falling upon him showed that he was well dressed.

"Won't you come in, Sam?"

"No, for you'll still have to despise me."

"Why?"

Because I'm not a poet."

"What are you, Sam?"

"I am an agent for a patent churn dasher."

She sprang forward and threw her arms about him. "Oh, I am so glad," she cried. "And you may kiss me all the time."

The Child of Light.

BY CHARLES EUGENE BANKS.

BORN in a manger at Bethlehem,
Thorn the path He trod,
Mournfully heavy the cross He bore,
Heir to the wisdom of God.

Mournfully heavy the cross He bore,
Broken and steep the way,
Dearer His message because of pain,
Light of the world to-day.

Dearer His message because of pain,
Like by its like caressed,
Gracious as rain to the sun-dried plain,
Millions those tears have blest.

Gracious as rain to the sun-dried plain
Turning the dull earth bright,
Truth is in blossom because of Him,
Ring in the Child of Light.

Truth is in blossom because of Him,
Sin is grown old and gray,
Welcome the gladness of doing good;
Welcome the gentler way.

Welcome the gladness of doing good,
Welcome the joy of love,
Banish the serpent, the hawk and owl,
Welcome the child and dove.

Banish the serpent, the hawk and owl,
Banish the man-made creed,
Welcome the brotherhood broad, divine,
Welcome the MAN indeed.

Welcome the brotherhood broad, divine,
Banish the narrow and mean,
So shall His kingdom be over the earth—
Ring in the Nazarene.

HIS CHRISTMAS GREETING.

BY ELISA ARMSTRONG.

The cemetery gates closed with a clang behind one man as he stepped out into the snow-covered road; it was almost dark and he nearly ran into the other man who stumbled along as if very weary.

"Yonder's th' shortest way into town, isn t it?" the latter asked.

"Yep. Most folks want to know th' shortest way out," he grinned.

"I'm glad enough to get out o' where I was," muttered the other. As he lighted his pipe the flame showed his pale face.

The other man edged away. "Ye ain't been in jail?"

"Worse. Penitentiary. Ye needn't be askeered, though—I've had enough. Didn't do it, either, but, ye see, I was kind o' good for nothin', an' the judge was running for reelection, so I went up. Got out for Christmas, though, on account o' good behavior."

"Um, well, so 'tis Christmas time—folks oughtn't to be hard on nobody now."

"No. I most took ye fer a Christmas ghost a bit ago."

"Been working late. I'm a stone mason, and I'd promised a rich old party to have a stone put over a child's grave by to-morrow, sure. He said he'd like her to have something fer a Christmas gift."

"MARY LYONS WAS THE NAME."

"Poor soul! I'm better off ef he is rich. I'll see my kid to-night. My brother's been taking keer of her since I was took. I'll take her now, an' I'm bound to keep straight, for her sake, from now on. That man got any more kids?"

"None. This was only adopted; belonged to some poor relation, but he loved her like his own. Died sudden about ten days ago—he took it hard, too; said he was forty-nine and she only about ten, so he'd expected she'd choose his headstone."

"Poor soul! My girl's most ten now."

"Lemme see," he lit a match and consulted a paper as they walked along, "she was nine years, eleven months and three days old. It was a pretty stone; the boss says: 'Nothing's too good for Mary,' says he."

"Mary! Why, that's my girl's name—here, lemme see that." The match went out and his fingers trembled so that he could not light another.

"Mary Lyons was the name," said the stone mason, gently.

"Merciful God, my own child!" cried the ex-convict.

Then, through the still night air, the glad church bells rang out.

C. F. PATTERSON, PROPRIETOR

THE dear word, Christmas, marshals legions of precious memories out from the past and crowns the future with a halo of golden, cheery promises. Out from the shadows come the festive times when Santa Claus was a verity, with his fat paunch and great, rosy cheeks; when, on awaking, stockings filled to bursting greeted the eye, and at eventide the flashing Christmas tree fairly laughed its satisfaction at the joyous gladness it was diffusing all around.

Day of the children! An infantine laugh is the divinest of songs in the ear of the Christ, who was once a helpless babe, His only shelter a mother's loving breast. The Man-Christ took little ones in His arms and blessed them, declaring that all must be as they in trust and innocence, if they would be heirs to His everlasting kingdom.

Day of home-bringing and home-gathering, when the loved ones meet and unselfishly live in the pleasure each of the other. Tender affection banishes self and man lives in touch with his fellow, glorified of the divine benediction of love. He is nearest to divinity who gets farthest from self, and the gifts of Christmas-tide are so many pledges of disinterested esteem for the recipients. A time is this when care rolls away like a scroll in the fire, and mirth and good will become the all-pervading genii of the household. Love and joy cross the threshold and kiss one another, as they pronounce a blessing upon all beneath the roof. Peace covers the dear ones as a mantle, and gladness so abounds that it is the day of all days throughout the metes and bounds of Christendom.

Christmas of sleigh-bells and crystal snow, Christmas of warmth and flowers, for the Christ-day girdles the earth and embraces all climates and all nations, and everywhere, thank God! it is a day of festive joy and happiness—a fitting commemoration of the fulfillment of the promise made by the herald of God in the glowing words: "I bring you glad tidings of great joy, which shall be unto all people."

It is peculiarly the Christ day, a time when the beauty of His self-abnegating life is reflected in sublime majesty. Never a selfish shadow obscured His path; His the grandest of all epitaphs; He lived and He died that others might live forever. A man without a home. He has gladdened and brightened millions of homes. He was a man of sorrows, acquainted with grief, yet from His presence an ocean of consolation has spread out and covered the earth with its waters of healing. His last prayer was an intercession for His enemies, and His last sigh a breath of confidence in God.

The glory song of the herald angels, sung at the first Christmas, that paean of praise to God and pledge of peace to man, shall never die. The grandest of all carols, dearest of all angel hymns, time has destroyed none of its sweetness and has preserved all of its promise. Peace and amity dwell where the spirit of Jesus prevails, and each Christ day is a benison indeed to those who see His face through the cloffls and the mists of mortality.

Christmas, the home day, the Christ day! May its lessons and its blessings gladden all hearts and make a truth of the common salutation: "A Merry Christmas be upon you."

FADLEY'S CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

BY FRANK B. WELCH.

Young Mr. Fadley was in a worry. He had some Christmas presents to buy, and what to get was what worried him. First and foremost, there was Miss Damon, upon whom he was anxious to create an impression—she must have something appropriate and elegant, whether anybody else got anything or not. Then there was his bosom friend and constant companion Harvey, a good fellow who had placed him under obligation times without number—him he could not forget. This being the case, Fadley started out to rummage the stores.

He overhauled all the leading shops in town, and by Christmas Eve had collected what he thought was a pretty sensible lot of presents for an amateur Santa Claus to get together. For the lady of his choice he had a handsome toilet outfit of combs, brushes, powder puffs and boxes, manicure implements, hand mirrors, and no end of other elegant articles for feminine use. These were all inclosed in an elaborately beplushed and inlaid case which was neatly wrapped and all ready to be sent to the intended recipient. For his friend Harvey he had an elegant shaving set, consisting of razors, brushes, cups, hones, etc., done up in a substantial case which was also ready to be dispatched to the home of his friend.

Not daring to trust a messenger with the presents for fear of some mistake Fadley started out himself to deliver them. First he called at Harvey's house, timing his call so as not to catch his friend at home. With his friend's mother he intrusted the package, she promising that it should not be tampered with until Harvey should open it himself the next morning. Then he called at the abode of Miss Damon. The ring was answered by a servant, who said the young lady was out doing her Christmas shopping. Here was a piece of good luck. Leaving the package with explicit instructions as to its delivery Fadley said he would call, Christmas night, as per previous arrangement with the young lady.

"JUST AS IF I WERE IN NEED OF A SHAVE."

There was a big job off his hands, and Fadley mentally patted himself on the back at having done it up so neatly. He pictured to himself the glad surprise of Miss Damon when she should receive the substantial evidence of his regard, and chuckled over the little surprise in store for his dear friend and chum, Harvey. Early Christmas morning Miss Damon received her package, upon opening which she exclaimed:

"Well, I never! Just as if I were in need of a shave. Who ever has been so kind as to furnish me with this tonsorial outfit?" Then her eye caught the corner of a card sticking out of one of the compartments of the case. This she drew forth and read:

"From yours faithfully, IL IRA FADLEY."

"Oh!" said the mischievous young lady: "Mr. Fadley, eh? Well, just wait till he comes this evening. I'll bawl 'Next' at him; see if I don't."

Of all the mortified swains that ever got into a pickle Fadley felt the worst when the idol of his heart flashed the shaving tools on him. He was utterly speechless, until it occurred to him that his friend Harvey had his dear one's toilet set and one of the sweetest of little notes that ever a lovesick fellow put together.

"Great snakes!" thought Fadley; "if he reads that note I'll never hear the last of it." Then he explained the mistake and begged off long enough to hasten over to his friend's house to exchange the packages. He found Harvey at home, and as that amiable young man jerked him into the hall he simperingly inquired:

"Is my hat on straight, Ira dear, and how do my bangs look?"

"Say!" fiercely ejaculated Fadley, "if you don't shut your head I'll break it for you!"

But there was no time to be lost, so Fadley, after duly acknowledging that the cigars were on him, gathered up the toilet set and sped back with it to the one for whom it was intended.

That was not the last of the joke on him, by any means. The thing leaked out, as such things invariably do, and poor Fadley was so annoyed by facetious allusions to his Santa Claus experience that he was compelled to threaten with consequences dire anyone who mentioned the subject.

An Absorbing Girl.

"There is no such person as Santa Claus, is there?" asked a small girl of her mother.

"Some folks say there is not," was the reply.

"Well, I don't care. I don't like folks who say there isn't any Santa Claus. They never give any nice presents."—N. Y. Journal.

A Union Thanksgiving service was held at the Friend's church on Thanksgiving day. Rev. J. P. Varner preached a fine discourse, appropriate to the occasion, and he was assisted in the services by Rev's Brown, Smith and Bergman.

Landlord Patterson eclipsed all his former efforts on Thanksgiving dinner last week. The menu opened with blue points and closed with ice cream and coffee, and the intermediate courses embraced all the substantials and delicacies of Thanksgiving time. The meal itself and the manner in which it was served, would have done honor to many a city hotel.

Tuesday evening was Election of Officers in the Royal Arcanum Order and this is the result:

Vice Regent—Robt. Quackenbush.
Orator—Horace Wescott.
Guide—Chas. H. Reed.
Chaplain—Joseph White.
Warden—Geo. Zimmerman.
Sentry—John Wyrill.

Sandford C. Cutting and Lavern Heeman are about starting an Electro Plating plant in the same building with the Stimpson Scale Co. They will do the Scale Company's plating and are prepared to do all other kind of work, such as knives, spoons, etc. They are enterprising young men of sterling character, and we bespeak for them any work you may have in their line, feeling assured you will be satisfied in every particular. Give them a trial.

The Armory presented a very attractive picture yesterday afternoon and Friday evening, it being in the hands of the ladies of St. Peter's Guild. The tables were nicely arranged and prettily dressed. The supper was all that one could wish and a fine display of articles for sale. The young ladies who attended to the wants of the guests were unstinting in their labor and added largely to the beauty of the scene. It was indeed a very happy occasion and all seemed loathe to depart, as they were socially inclined.

Yesterday was D. H. C. Bowen's birthday and in honor of the occasion he invited about twenty of his masculine friends out to his home to help him remember it. Dinner was served at one o'clock, after which the boys all adjourned to a log summer house and indulged in some very interesting exercises of a nature whose import is so sheer and hazy that details could not be procured. But from the expressions which four of the victims are carrying to-day, it is surmised that all were satisfied, and that as a stag party, it was a success.

Chas. Egan and family visited their Adrian friends over Sunday.

Mrs. Alma Tate, of Clinton, was the guest of Mesdames Shull and Fisher Monday and Tuesday.

The O. E. S. will serve a Chicken Pie supper at the New Masonic Temple, Dec. 14th, at the Grand Opening.

Mrs. B. T. VanDeMark and friend, W. C. Johnson, of Chicago, spent Sunday evening with Tecumseh ladies.

Public Reception and Grand Opening of the new Masonic Temple, Dec. 14th. Everybody come and see the New Temple.

There will be no regular services at the Universalist church Sunday. The Sunday school will convene at the usual hour.

Claude Teachout and bride, nee Hattie Sheridan, of Brooklyn, were the guests of his brother Fred and family for several days the past week.

Eugene T. VanDeMark, of Chicago, who spent Thanksgiving with his people at Clinton, was in town Friday last. He returned to Chicago Monday.

Thanksgiving day was universally observed by our citizens this year. The business places were all closed and our streets were as quiet as they are on Sunday.

P. S. McKinnon returned from his eastern trip Thursday night. Judging from appearances we should say Boston baked beans and New England pumpkin pie agreed with him.

Grant Fellows is to deliver a lecture in Hudson on "Politics as a fine art." He might tell why he was not given the nomination for congress, when Lenawee had it in its grasp, and cite some of the 'fine arts' that defeated him. He might also tell the Benedict Arnold story.

A large number of Clinton young people attended the masked roller skate at the Armory Tuesday evening, both as spectators and partisipants. Among the latter we noticed Ged. Tag, Geo. Alexander, Louie Fabrique, Ed. Lancaster, John Middlebrook and George McDermott in costume.

Charles P. Reed, of Grand Ledge, arrived Wednesday for a visit with his grandson, Chas. H. Reed and family. Mr. Reed is about 80 years of age, but hale and hearty, is one of the early settlers of Eaton county, and has not only seen the forests turn into fruitfull fields but has been instrumental to a large degree in bringing the change about.

Rev. E. C. Andrus left Monday for a visit with Grand Rapids friends, and especially with his old friend and tutor, Rev. Chas. Fluhrer, who leaves next week for his new field of labor at Albion New York, and preaches his farewell sermon to his Grand Rapids flock Sunday. Mr. Andrus will return next week.

Death has again visited us and taken from our midst one not aged and infirm but young in years, who but a short time ago had the promise of a long life of usefulness before her, namely, Cora D., wife of Ed. McKinney, who died Monday, Dec. 3d. of Peritonitus, aged 26 years. The funeral was held at the house Tuesday at 2 p. m. Rev. J. P. Varner officiating.

Jackson Patriot: "Eddy" Dixon went to Tecumseh yesterday. During his ball playing with Providence last season he fattened his batting average with two bats made at Tecumseh. These clubs were the objects of envy from many of the eastern players, but 'Eddy' preferred to flesh up his batting record rather than sell them for handsome prices. He will take a bag full of Tecumseh bats with him next season.

The other day we dropped into the Tecumseh Coal and Lumber Company's new grocery store and found one of the neatest and most conveniently arranged places in town. Owing to their increased trade they were obliged to make large additions to their room. They have as fine a line of groceries of the best quality as can be found. It is surprising to see the quantity of goods a dollar will buy here. Call and see for yourself. Leon will take great pleasure in showing you around.

The Masked Roller Skate at the Armory, Thanksgiving night, attracted a large crowd of spectators, and one hundred skaters about thirty of whom were in costume. It was a very pleasant party and all seemed to enjoy themselves. Gray's orchestra discoursed fine music which added largely to the pleasure of the occasion. Under the admirable management of Company C boys the skating parties are becoming very popular beside being a source of revenue to the company. Miss Lillie Van Watson received the prize for the finest costume for a lady and Lewis Bangs for the worst costume for a gentleman. They skated until ten and then danced till midnight.

The game of foot ball between Clinton and the home team Thursday was of short duration, and, though not exactly breaking up in a row, still all was not in harmony and ended in Clinton's leaving the ground. As usual in such cases, the poor Umpire had to shoulder all the blame, in other words, was the one at fault. We think it high time if the teams from the two places are to meet in battle array they have for umpire and referee some one from away, not connected with either town. This seems the only way out of the dilemma, for if one is chosen from either place there is a great deal of wrangling if the game is played at all, and the people are tired of it.

Chicken Pie Supper at the New Masonic Temple, Dec. 14th.

Misses Franc and Blanche Middlebrook, of Clinton, were Tecumseh callers Saturday.

Save your 25cts. for all the chicken pie you can eat, at the Grand Opening of the New Masonic Temple.

Miss Augusta Kirchgessner attended the Catholic Bazaar at Manchester, Tuesday and had a delightful time.

Rev. W. Tyrer Williams, of Tipton, left yesterday for a month's visit in the New England states. He will return via Canada. This trip is taken in hopes of restoring his health which for some time has not been good, and his people hope he will return to them in perfect strength.

Henry Smith, our enterprising Paper Mill man, has supplied a long felt want by erecting a large store room just south of the mills proper. The building is 18x60 feet, in the south end of which 20 feet has been partitioned off for the purpose of storing a hose cart for use in that part of town.

The election of Relief Corps Officers Monday evening, resulted as follows:

President—Mrs. Spalding.
Sen. Vice—Mrs. Austin.
Jun. Vice—Mrs. Smith.
Chaplain—Mrs. VanValkenburg.
Conductor—Mrs. Geo. VanTyne.
Guard—Mrs. Deuel.
Treasurer—Mrs. Welling.

Eugene, the youngest son of Fred Rosacrans, has been very seriously ill the past week. For a time his life hung as it were in the balance, and Dr. Eugene Tremaine, of Chicago, was summoned, reaching here in the middle of the night Sunday. By close attention and careful nursing the symptoms are more favorable at the present time and hopes are entertained for his recovery.

Married, Nov. 28th, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Gilman, their daughter, Miss Minnie Pomeroy to Mr. Clarence Gilmore, of Lake Ridge. Rev. W. R. Blachford officiating. The bride is one of Tecumseh's favorites, a graduate of our high school, and an active worker in St. Peter's church. She goes away with the best wishes of her many friends. They will be home in Lake Ridge, after Dec. 5th.

A long felt want has at last been met. The Reading Room, so long talked of, opened on Saturday in rooms just vacated by Dr. Frost. Thanks to the generosity of Mr. Andrus who contributed largely, and the care of the committees the tables were well stacked with the the newest periodicals. This will be a pleasant place to put in the leisure moments. We hope it will be well patronized.

The special color for the altar hangings in St. Peter's church during Advent season, is purple. The superfrontal has lately been richly embroidered by Mrs. Burt Anderson, in the design of the passion vine with buds and open flowers, being used last Sunday for the first time since the new work was finished. Miss Louise Phelps and Mrs. L. P. Tribou have also been working for the enrichment of altar materials, having embroidered Greek crosses on the white and the purple chalice veils.

At the meeting of Beers' Post, Monday evening, the following officers were elected:

Commander—Henry W. Stevens.
Senior Vice—Augustus Middlebrook.
Junior " —Jehiel Davidson.

We are called upon to chronicle the death of another of our old citizens, Mrs. Emily Haight, which occurred last Thursday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. E. C. Coryell, on Pottawatamie street, being confined to her bed only two days. Mrs. Haight was born in the state of New York, June 13th, 1809, and died Nov. 29th, 1894. She has been a resident of this vicinity for many years and is well known to our older residents. Her funeral was held at the residence Sunday afternoon at 2:30, Rev. J. P. Varner officiating.

The Dramatic season opened at Sutton's Opera House last evening with "The Burglar." Seldom is there seen so large an audience at a theatrical entertainment as was present on this occasion, and Mr. Sutton is to be congratulated in securing so fine a company, every member of which sustained their character admirably; in fact, little or no criticism could be made. Not posing as a dramatic critic, we will not enter into a detailed account of the play further than to say, it is a very choice society play, chaste, refined, and the stage settings were appropriate and pretty. All seemed to appreciate the improvements recently made in the curtains and scenery, and could Manager Sutton have heard the compliments given by different ones, his statue might have assumed increased proportions. There was one or two things that marred the enjoyment of the occasion, viz: the way the drop curtains worked and the lack of a suitable orchestra. These we are satisfied will be looked after in future, and everything be in proper working order. We cannot forbear mentioning the acting of little Gertie Carlisle as Editha. Never has this people ever seen such superb work done by so young an artist, and she carried the audience by storm.

MICHIGAN MURDER RECORD.

Agitation for Capital Punishment Prompted by Brutal Crimes.

DETROIT, Dec. 3.—No subject for legislation which the coming state legislature will be called upon to discuss will command greater interest or have more supporters than the measure to secure capital punishment for the crime of murder. The epidemic of crime that has swept over the state in the last two months has been appalling to all lovers of law, and sentiment in favor of a radical change in the present manner of punishing murder and attempts at it are crystallizing rapidly about a capital punishment law. A list of the crimes of this kind committed in Michigan in the last two months serves only to emphasize the necessity for more stringent punishment than the laws of the state at present afford. The list since September 22 follows:

Sept. 22.—Ira Hurd was shot dead in his own home at Allegan. His wife is at present out on $3,000 bail, charged with the shooting. O. W. Ludlow was arrested and tried on the charge of murder, but was acquitted.

Sept. 23.—Sarah Isale was shot dead in this city by Frank White, a friend.

Oct. 8.—Willard Johnson was found dead on the banks of the St. Joseph river, near Colon, with bullet holes through his body. Dell Swarts and Millourn Rockwell are under arrest charged with the crime.

Oct. 30.—An unknown man entered the house of Fred Skinner, near Columbiaville, and crushed in the skulls of Skinner's wife and mother. The mother is dead and the wife may die.

Nov. 4.—At Otsekama, Sam Smith crushed in the skull of Minard Mix. His plea is self-defense.

Nov. 21.—Mrs. Margaret Maddock, an aged Salvation Army worker, was set upon while going home at night and her head crushed in by footpads. No one has been arrested for the murder.

Besides the foregoing array there has been a score of cases in which life has been endangered by assaults and attempts to kill.

TO MANUFACTURE ANTI-TOXINE

Detroit Chemists to Experiment with the New Diphtheria Remedy.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 1.—The officials of the Marine hospital service have been notified that a large firm of manufacturing chemists at Detroit, Mich., is making preparations for the manufacture of anti-toxine, the new remedy for diphtheria, which has created such widespread interest in Europe. This is believed to be the first house of its character in the United States to begin experiments, and already they have taken active steps to scientifically demonstrate its value. It is understood this firm has established a bacteriological department, where the experiments will be carried on under the direction of competent scientists. A number of young horses already have been inoculated with the toxin, but it is said it will be three or four months before the results of the experiments can be announced, as the processes are said to be not only delicate but tedious.

DETROIT'S MAYOR ON BREAD.

Pingree Says Bakers Charge Too Much and Threatens to Turn Baker.

DETROIT, Nov. 30.—Mayor Hazen S. Pingree at his address before the American Institute of Christian Sociology announced a war on high bread prices. In the course of his address he said when flour was $3 a barrel ten years ago the baker charged 6 cents a loaf. Flour is only $3 a barrel, but the baker continues to charge the same 6 cents. The mayor declared that this overcharge must stop at once. If it does not he declared he would build a huge bakery in this city and supply the people with their bread at the rate of three loaves for 6 cents.

INDIAN DEFIES A LAW.

Antoine Rivard Thinks a Treaty Superior to a State Game Statute.

GRAND RAPIDS, Nov. 30.—Antoine Rivard, a full-blooded Chippewa Indian from Fort Wayne, has raised an interesting legal point. He was arrested for trying to ship venison out of the state. He claimed that the treaty made by his tribe with the government gives him the right to kill deer over the entire northwest territory, and that under the treaty he can ship the deer to his wigwam despite any state or local laws to the contrary. He will fight the case. Rivard is sufficiently advanced in civilization to own a 600-acre farm.

Flouring Mills Burned.

FLINT, Dec. 2.—The Thread flouring mills were destroyed by fire Saturday evening. The flames gained headway so quickly that five streams were ineffectual in checking them. Upward of 5,000 bushels of wheat and 500 barrels of flour were also burned. The plant was comparatively new and was owned by a local stock company. The total loss is estimated at $45,000. Two firemen who were overcome by heat fell from a ladder and suffered temporary injuries.

Acquitted.

BIG RAPIDS, Nov. 30.—The jury in the case of Mrs. Marion Davis, charged with poisoning her baby with carbolic acid, rendered a verdict of not guilty after being out only five minutes. The defense was that Mrs. Davis was not responsible at the time, owing to the fact that she was suffering from puerperal mania. The verdict has popular approval.

Caught in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 3.—Thomas Young was arrested here and taken to Pontiac to be tried for stealing forty bushels of beans nine years ago. His father, who was implicated in the alleged theft, was found guilty at the time and sent to prison. The boy made his escape before being brought to trial.

PINGREE'S POTATO SCHEME.

Commission in Charge Makes a Report Giving Facts and Figures.

DETROIT, Dec. 3.—According to the report of the commission which had Mayor Pingree's potato farm scheme in charge it was a complete success. There were 5,000 applications from the poor for land to cultivate; 410 acres of land were cultivated, and 945 families provided with pieces of ground averaging from a quarter to half an acre each. The land was planted two-thirds to potatoes and the rest in garden truck. Nine-tenths of the land was well cultivated. The average yield of potatoes was fifteen bushels to the family. At a low estimate 14,175 bushels of potatoes were raised, valued at from $12,000 to $14,000 net to the cultivators. Besides this a large quantity of white beans and other vegetables was raised. The total cost of seed furnished was $3,000. The committee has received a large number of applications from the poor for pieces of land for next year, the applicants asking only for the ground, spading and cultivating to be done by themselves. The report says it is found that about one-third of an acre of land to the family is enough to raise sufficient potatoes to last an average sized family through the winter and vegetables enough to last it through the summer. The report advocates the establishment of a permanent city poor farm.

WEATHER REPORT IN COURT.

The City of Detroit Wins in a Suit for $10,000 Damages.

DETROIT, Dec. 2.—Weather service reports served the city a good purpose in court Saturday where Mahala Sawtelle was suing the city for $10,000 damages for injuries alleged to have been received on a defective sidewalk. The woman claimed to have fallen owing to a 6-inch difference in a sidewalk grade. It was shown there was only a difference of 4 or 5 inches, but the principal evidence that affected the jury was because it was alleged it was a rainy night, whereas the signal service showed the temperature that day ranged from zero to 7 degrees below. The jury brought in a verdict for the city.

HOMES IN ARKANSAS.

The location of Arkansas is such as to exempt it from extremes of heat and cold. Its situations and richness of soils adapt it to the production of a greater variety of crops, fruits and general products used for the sustenance and comfort of man than any other State in the Union. While its salubrious climate, joined with the other combinations mentioned, give to its fruit and food products a peculiarly delightful flavor that can be found nowhere else. It justly boasts of its health-giving springs and better water than any other State. Lands cheap and productive, markets accessible; health good; no blizzards; no drouths never a failure of crops; good schools churches and society, and what is more important, a hearty welcome to all. For descriptive pamphlet address C. England, Little Rock, Ark. When you write, please mention the Times.

Chas. Heaton, 73 Laurel Street, Pittsburg, Pa., says: "I have had for years a humor in my blood which made me dread to shave, as small sores or pimples would be cut, thus causing shaving to be a great annoyance. After taking three bottles of S. S. S. my face is all cleared and smooth. It should be a specific splendid sleep well and feel like running a foot race all for the use of S. S. S.

J. V. Amspoker and wife, Wm. C. Rogers and wife and Bert Tate and wife spent Thanksgiving day with Mrs. C. Pawson, in Franklin.

The house occupied by Thos. Wadsworth, near the railroad, was found to be on fire Saturday morning, but the flames were speedily extinguished.

The Hotel Elrose is, and has been for some time, filled to overflowing; and so is the Lancaster House. We hope it may continue to be so all the time.

The work of putting in the furnace at St. John's Episcopal church is progressing rapidly. When finished, it will be a very comfortable improvement.

Wm. C. Rogers, wife and Floyd, E. S. Tate and wife, and E. A. Clark and wife attended the funeral, Sunday, of Mr. Roger's sister, Mrs. Thos. Alderdyce, at Cambridge.

Ralph Starr, son of Charles Starr of Three Rivers, and grandson of Geo. Starr, who lived and died here, who is traveling for a cutlery house, spent Sunday here. He met many acquaintances of his father's, besides forming many pleasant ones himself among the young people here.

The Episcopal ladies are making great preperations for their business representative sale, which occurs at the town hall on the afternoon of Dec. 18—one week from today. The hall will be very handsomely decorated. Many useful and beautiful articles will be offered for sale, and the supper will be fine. There will be twelve tables, furnished by twelve of our business houses, and this will be quite a novelty. Supper will be served from 5 to 8 o'clock, at 15 cents. Do not fail to be present.

We understand that B. F. Greenleaf and family contemplate returning to Leonidas very soon, he having disposed of his interest in the Plow company. We shall regret very much to lose them, for in their short sojourn here they have made many friends. Mr. G is one of the sterling business men of the age, courteous, active and honorable, and during his connection with the Plow company the business of that institution has rapidly increased and been extended.

The town was left in utter darkness Monday evening for about three hours, owing to the machinery at the electric light plant being out of whack,—the wrist, as it is termed. There was a terrible scurrying around after lamps among the good housewives and business men. This occurrance demonstrated to all what an improvement electricity is over oil, and our system of lighting will be appreciated as never before. The total eclipse occasioned no little merriment as well as hustling.

A. P. Halladay, one of our old and well known citizens, who for the past two years has been in poor health, passed away Monday morning, aged 67 years. He has been one of the deacons in the Congregational church for many years. His funeral was held at his late residence, yesterday at 2 p. m., his pastor, Rev. T. H. Warner, attending. Mr. Halladay leaves a wife; four sons, Elmer, of Palmyra, N. Y.; Cebert, Oscar and Herman, living here, and one step-son, Chas. D. Chamberlin, of Cleveland, Ohio, all of whom are married and pleasantly situated. His was a very peaceful and happy life.

The club rooms are now practically finished and furnished and the members are to be congratulated for the taste displayed. The rooms are very pleasant, and no doubt the boys will enjoy many pleasant evenings there during the winter. We look for an early invitation to enjoy their hospitality.

Will McAdam and Chas. House had a very narrow escape from serious injury, if not death, Tuesday night. Coming from Tecumseh with one of the livery teams, and when near Will Matthews' the horses ran away. In turning west by John Hause's the carriage struck the cross-walk and the boys were thrown out. Charley was not hurt much, but Will had many cuts and bruises on the face and head, and when Doc White had patched him up he resembled cuts often seen of foot-ball players after the game.

They had a very exciting time at Mrs. Carrie Draper's Sunday morning. Little Roy fell into the cistern; Carrie screamed to her mother and jumped in after him; Mrs. Smith, in turn, called to the hired man and then rushed to their assistance. She reached down and got hold of Carrie, who had hold of Roy, and held them up until the man got there. They were soon extracted from their perilous situation. They dispatched for the doctor and began working over Roy. When the doctor arrived he found Roy almost as good as new. It was a close call. Presume they will have a pump put in at once.

A GREAT NEWSPAPER COMBINATION.

For the past 32 years, over half a century, The Michigan Farmer has been published, and it is the oldest regular agricultural journal under one name on this continent.

With largely increased capital and under new management that has had 23 years successful experience in agricultural journalism, this great paper is making rapid strides toward the top in the galaxy of agricultural literature of America. It is most beautifully printed on high grade paper, and employs the most eminent writers on the science and practice of Agriculture, Horticulture, Live Stock, Dairying, Apiary and Poultry. Has a standard veterinary department for free treatment of all diseases of farm animals. A legal and medical department; contains all the agricultural news of the country and an invaluable literary and household department every week. Admits no swindling nor immoral advertisements and is in fact in every way a great, sound, practical, agricultural, live stock and family journal, that the agriculturists of Michigan may justly feel proud of, and subscribe for with satisfaction and profit. We are pleased to be able to announce that we can furnish to our subscribers the Michigan Farmer and the TECUMSEH HERALD, both one year, making a total of 104 papers, for the low price of $1.50; certainly a bargain that should be liberally patronized. Specimen copies free.

Healthy Children

come from healthy mothers. And mothers will certainly be healthy if they'll take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Nothing can equal it in building up a woman's strength, in regulating and assisting all her natural functions. It lessens the pains and burdens of child-bearing, supports and strengthens weak, nursing mothers, and promotes an abundant secretion of nourishment.

It's an invigorating, restorative tonic, a soothing and bracing nervine, and a remedy for woman's ills and ailments. In every chronic "female complaint" or weakness, it acts so beneficially that, once used, it is always in favor.

There is talk of a protest from the prize ring against the brutalities of the foot-ball gridiron.

Table Talk.

"Table Talk" for November is typical and characteristic of this bright little magazine which is so useful in the home, giving, as it does, the very latest hints in the culinary line; in fashions; in etiquette, in the art of entertaining at this, the late Autumnal and Thanksgiving season—in fact, in everything that interests the bright, progressive women of to-day. The housekeeper's inquiry department is especially attractive to those interested in broadening their knowledge and continually having something new and attractive upon their tables. Menus are given too, for every meal in the month—good, practical tested menus. A sample copy is offered to our readers free, upon application to the office in Philadelphia.

The World's Tribute to
Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder
Highest Honors Awarded by the World's Columbian Exposition, Chicago, 1893.

World's Fair Medal and Diploma
awarded to
Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

The highest award was given on every claim, comprising superiority in leavening power, keeping properties, purity and excellence. This verdict has been given by the best jury ever assembled for such a purpose, backed by the recommendation of the Chief Chemist of the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., who made an elaborate examination and test of all the baking powders. This is pre-eminently the highest authority on such matters in America.

This verdict conclusively settles the question and proves that Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder is superior in every way to any other brand.

NOTE.—The Chief Chemist rejected the Alum baking powders, stating to the World's Fair jury that he considered them unwholesome.

At the Library board meeting, Monday night, Emma Miller was engaged as librian for the ensuing year.

Hattie Vreeland, of St. John, and Mrs. May Keyser, of Tecumseh, were the guests of Clara Temple last week.

The person who lost a lap robe, the night before Thanksgiving, may have the same by calling at Frank Sisson's.

Wm. Fowler and bride, of Saline, are enjoying a portion of their honeymoon with their uncle, Wm. Riggs and family.

Quarterly meeting services will be held Sunday morning at the usual hour, Presiding Elder Davis will be present.

Darius and Lena Smith, David Gibson and Jennie Underwood visited friends in Ypsilanti, Sunday and Monday.

Prof. Bailey, of Cleary's Business College, Ypsilanti, was in the village a portion of last week, in the interest of the college.

Bert Gould is making preperations to begin housekeeping, and will occupy rooms over the store of Sutton & Gould, in the Waring block.

Wm. Riggs, wife and daughter, Daisy attended the Fowler-Bailey wedding at Saline Thursday of last week. Miss Bailey is a neice of Mrs. Riggs.

Now is your time to get your Christmas presents, by calling at S. Smith's. He having just received an invoice of elegant bedroom suits, rockers, dining room chairs, etc.

C. M. Gove returned Tuesday from Newburgh, N. Y., where he was called a few days ago to attend the funeral of his aunt, Mrs. Mary W. Lockwood, who was one hundred years and two days old at the time of her death. He visited relatives at Schenectady, N. Y. during his stay.

F. H. Montgomery and wife entertained Israel Schreeder and wife, of Clinton, C. F. Coller and wife, A. K. Waldron and wife, Robert Cairns and wife, of Tecumseh, Mr. Cole and wife, James and Caroline Colvin, of Raisin, and Mrs. John Arner, of Ridgeway, at their home last week Thursday.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Our deputy sheriff visited Milan, on business, Saturday last.

Miss Cora Vanheysen, of Tecumseh, visited at Frank Brown's over Sunday.

W. C. Babcock has moved his stock of drugs into the Biggs store, east of the railroad.

D. C. Loose arrived here Tuesday with two more cars of cattle. There are 60 head in the lot, are fine looking and are selling very rapidly.

Last Friday our village was a point of excitement all day. We had three runaway teams, the most disastrous being that of John Beasley's old horse. The buggy was picked up in thirteen different places. Charles escaped unharmed, although he was badly frightened.

Last Saturday one of our citizens was somewhat surprised by a tramp who asked for something to eat. Being refused it, he drew a revolver which he flourished around for awhile. Deputy Sheriff Britton was notified and the tramp was put under arrest. He proved to be a desperate character.

We called at the Plating Works the other day and found Mr. Bremk very busy. He has received a new dynamo from Toledo which fills the bill to the letter. As things look now, this will be one of our business industries. They make gold plating a specialty, and their silver work cannot be beaten, and hardly equaled. Their prices are normal and any person having work to be done would do well to give them a call.

—Why stand on the corner, idly,
From early morn till late at night?
Come into the store of Lee Bros.,
And get warm by the fire so bright.

Then take a look at our stock of Groceries,
Our Boots and Shoes, before you get lost;
Compare our prices with those of others,
But remember we can't sell at cost.

We can't do business for pleasure,
Though its a pleasure to wait on our friends
And give them a bargain that can't be beaten
On a straight line of goods, not "odds and ends."

—A CHANCE FOR HUSTLERS.—

We want several live, wide-awake canvassers to represent the HERALD in this and adjoining counties, in connection with the National Newspaper Union. The work is new, popular, and very profitable, requiring neither capital nor previous experience. PENTECOST POINTERS.

Our beautiful roads are becoming a dreary succession of muddy pools.

Lyman Randall and daughter, Ida, are both on the sick list. Dr. Rice is in attendance.

Rev. David Lewis is holding meetings at Ousted, and is drawing large audiences, both day and night.

Oscar Chambers, the man who had a leg crushed recently, died last Friday, after great suffering. His funeral took place on Sunday at Springville.

The tea party at the hall last Saturday was well patronized, and the ladies were hardly able to feed the large audience, not having a bakery at hand, as city people do, to help them out in case of emergency. However the short literary exercises were excellent. Miss Claudia Case gave a beautifully rendered recitation, and Lottie Bixby quite "brought down the house" with her "Prophecy". The choir gave some excellent selections, and Messrs Clarence Cole, Bert Eggleston and Miss Edith Eggleston favored the audience with music that was well worth the price of admission.

WEDDING BELLS.

On Wednesday, Dec. 5th, at 3 o'clock p. m. at her father's home at Sand Lake Crossing, occured the marriage of Miss Ida, eldest daughter of Elijah Buck, and Mr. John E. Monk, of Cone, Monroe county. At that hour a large party of friends had assembled to enjoy the festivities, including guests from Sand Lake, Adrian, Monroe, etc. Rev. W. T. Williams, pastor of the church of which the bride was a member, performed the marriage ceremony, after which the new made husband and wife received the hearty congratulations of friends and relatives. A bountiful feast came next, amid jokes and laughter, which all enjoyed, especialy those jokes at the expense of a certain bachelor justice of the peace, who was given a piece of the bride's cake and exhorted to go home, put it under his pillow and give heed to the dreams it brought him. Pretty souvenirs in the form of a dainty heart and hand, tied together by bows of satin ribbon, were distributed among the guests. But the happiest events have an end and soon the carriages were brought, and the newly wedded pair, amid a perfect storm of rice, set out to visit friends in Monroe county, accompanied by the best man, Mr. Tom Stuart, of Cone, and Miss Tiny Ellis, a cousin of the bride. The presents were numerous and useful, as well as beautiful. The day was all that could be desired, and we hope the old saying may prove true, in this case: "that happy is the bride that the sun shines on."

HOLLOWAY HASH.

Nora Loper is visiting in Ohio at present.

Chas. Rathfus was at Adrian on business Tuesday.

Lorain Brown visited his mother at Blissfield last week.

Mrs. Charles Benedict and sister, Mrs. Chas. Rexom, and Miss Eva Doty visited relatives in Detroit last week.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

Frank Marshall is able to be about again.

The melancholy days have come, for the tax gatherer is here.

Fred Davenport has an attack of chills, fever and sore throat.

Dora Davenport and Enzell Whelan have been visiting friends in Jackson.

Theives gained access to the upper part of Milton Burn's house, last week, through the elevator, and carried away some jewelry and money.

Mrs. Addie Taggett, of Caro, has taken up her residence for the season in Bay City, where her son, George will attend college. Mrs. Taggett and family have promised to eat Christmas dinner in Franklin.

Mr. Charles Billington, who has been an invalid for years, has been failing rapidly of late, and Monday his mother, Mrs. Julia Knight, accompanied by Lorenzo Billington, left here for his residence near Athens. No hope is entertained for his recovery.

A curious phenomena occured in Tipton recently. An artesian well on Jazeb Fried's farm was deepened to get a larger flow of water, and immediately the other wells at the corners ceased to flow; nor could they be induced to resume untill the volume of water at the Fried well had been reduced.

Michigan Registration Report.

A copy of the last Vital Statistics Report of Michigan issued by the Department of State has been received at this office from Secretary Gardner, and appears to be of unusual interest. In addition to the usual statistical study of the births, marriages and deaths returned for the state and counties during the year 1892, the report presents valuable data concerning the methods and results of registration under the state system and under local ordinances in the cities of Michigan, and recommends that such results of local registration, when more efficient than the state system, as they are in many cases, be utilized in the state registration reports.

The total number of births returned in Michigan for 1893 was 46,221; of marriages, 20,107; and of deaths, 21,729. These returns, except for marriages, are much below the true numbers owing to imperfections in the present method of enumeration by supervisors after the close of the registration year, and would require to be increased by at least sixty per cent, the Secretary estimates, to give the true figures. Even then the death-rate of the state, 15.9 per 1000 population, would be much less than the death-rates of any states in this country where accurate registration prevails.

The article on causes of death in Michigan in 1893 will be of great interest to physicians and sanitarians, and is well illustrated by diagrams and by two colored maps showing the distribution of the recorded mortality from consumption and from diphtheria and croup in the different counties in the state during the five-year period, 1888-92. The rates are based upon the population of each county, and hence show the relative distribution correctly in counties of small size as well as those with dense populations. Such maps comply in the plainest and most readily understood manner with the primary object of the registration law, viz., to show the comparative healthfulness of different parts of the state.

Attention is called to the great tardiness of the present system of registration, which has not been improved since 1869, and under which the returns do not reach the compiling office until nearly a year after the close of the year of registration. This delay causes other deficiencies, which are fully discussed in the report, and which, it is strongly urged, should be removed by the passage of a registration act more in accordance with modern requirements. The report as a whole will be found very interesting and valuable for reference, and may be obtained by supervisors and others entitled to it from the county clerk, and also directly from the office of the Secretary of State at Lansing.

PRIZES ON PATENTS.

How to Get $100 and Perhaps Make a Fortune.

We secure patents and to induce people to keep track of their bright ideas we offer a prize of one hundred dollars to be paid on the first of every month to the person who submits to us the most meritorious invention during the preceding month. We will also advertise the invention free of charge in the National Recorder, a weekly newspaper, published in Washington, D. C., which has an extensive circulation throughout the United States and is devoted to the interests of inventors.

NOT SO HARD AS IT SEEMS.

The idea of being able to invent something strikes most people as being very difficult; this delusion the company wishes to dispel. It is the simplest things and small inventions that make the greatest amount of money, and the complex ones are seldom profitable. Almost everybody, at some time or another, conceives an idea, which, if patented, would probably be worth to him a fortune. Unfortunately, such ideas are usually dismissed without thought. The simple inventions like the car window which could be easily slid up and down without breaking the passenger's back, the sauce pan, the collar button, the nut lock, the bottle stopper, the snow shovel, are things that almost everyone sees some way of improving upon, and it is these kind of inventions that brings the greatest returns to the author.

The prize we offer will be paid at the end of each month, whether the application has been acted upon by the Patent Office or not. Every competitor must apply for a patent on his invention through us, and whether he secures the prize or not, the inventor will have a valuable patent.

"Grin Like a Cheshire Cat."

"Well, well! Didn't ever hear of a 'grin like a Cheshire cat?' Why, you see, a man down in Cheshire had a cat which grinned and grinned until there was nothing left of the cat but the grin, just as some scrofulous people, who don't know of Dr. Price's Golden Medical Discovery, get a cough, and then cough and cough until there is nothing left of them to erect a monument to but the cough." The Golden Medical Discovery is the most effective, anti-bilious, anti-dyspeptic, strength-giving remedy extant. For weak lungs, lingering coughs, spitting of blood, scrofula, sores, pimples and ulcers, it is a wonderful and efficacious remedy. Send 6 cents in stamps for a book (160 pages) on these diseases and their cure. Address World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

There is talk of a protest from the prize ring against the brutalities of the foot-ball gridiron.

World's Fair Officials Expose a Pretender to an Award.

CHICAGO, ILL.—One of the odd results of the World's Fair is the claim now made to awards by some who were not even exhibitors. Officials of the Exposition have not as yet taken final action in the matter, believing the quick wit of the people will detect the spurious claims. But to the case of a New York baking powder, that has been widely advertising an award, the attention of the Chief of Awards for Agriculture, has been directed. He brands the claim of this pretender as false, declaring "Neither the records of this department, nor the official catalogue of the World's Columbian Exposition, show that this New York Company was an exhibitor; consequently it could not receive an award at the World's Fair.

Those who fairly won their honors at the Fair seem disposed to treat this fraud as any other fraud should be treated. The Price Baking Powder Company, of Chicago, having received the highest award, say they are convinced their claims, and those of all other holders of rightful honors, will be fully vindicated by the public.

FREE HOME TREATMENT.

Catarrh Cures by Thousands by Dr. Hartman.

The symptoms of chronic catarrh vary according to the stage and exact location of the disease. The first stage of catarrh of the nose and head produces discharge from the nose, sneezing, pain in the eyes and forehead, weak, and sometimes watery eyes, occasionally loss of memory. In the last stage the discharge ceases, and dry, offensive scabs form in nose; polypus growths sometimes form in one or both nostrils, and the pain in the head and eyes is much less. Unless something is done to prevent, the catarrh will follow the mucous membrane into the lungs, where it will be followed by cough, night sweats, rapid loss of flesh, and the other dread symptoms of consumption. To all such people Dr. Hartman's treatment comes as a great boon. It is only necessary to send name and address to Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio, and complete directions for first month's treatment will be sent free. Not only is it more successful in curing catarrh than the treatment of the catarrh specialists, but it is in the reach of every person in this land. A medicine which is the principal part of Dr. Hartman's treatment, known as Peru-na, can be bought at any drug store, and it is a remedy without equal for catarrh in all forms, coughs, colds, bronchitis, consumption, and all climatic diseases of winter. Each bottle is accompanied with complete directions for use.

Address the Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company, Columbus, Ohio, for a copy of their latest catarrh book. Sent free to any address.

The Sugar Senators show a disposition to continue to stand by the Trust. The Democratic caucus on Tuesday indicated that Mr. Smith's belated indignation against Havemeyer was temporary. In this respect it resembles the flurry on the Street on Sugar securities and the brief shut down of the refineries. It is to be hoped that Smith, Brice and Gorman are not to thwart the Democratic party this winter. Some misgivings on this subject must be confessed, however, for Mr. Voorhees seems to have stumbled into their discrediting embraces. If his amiable surrender is indicative of the feeling of his fellow Democratic Senators the situation is not promising. If the Democratic Senators are really intending to save the Sugar Trust from harm they are blind to the meaning of the popular verdict of the last election.—The World.

The Indianapolis News sizes up the situation in this way: "The United States senate, and particularly Messrs. Gormon, Brice, Smith and Hill, must bear a large share of the responsibility for the disaster which has overtaken the democratic party. More than any other men in the country they are to blame for yesterday's astounding result. Every one will admit that if the original Wilson bill—which was an honest measure—had been passed with reasonable promptness, the democratic party would at least have made a decent fight for its life. Over and over again this consideration was urged upon the corrupt senatorial clique, but the men in the combination turned a deaf ear to all such appeals—and now the result is before them. Brice's free silver state is republican by a hundred thousand: New Jersey, which is Smith's state, is also republican; Hill is beaten by at least 150,000 majority, and it may be that even Maryland will go republican—certainly it ought to."

The New York Evening Post, in commenting upon the improvment of business, says: Now the elections are past, there is no reason why even good protectionist newspapers should not allow that the times are improving. The American Manufacturer of Nov. 2 notes the fact notwithstanding the depression of the past year the Bessemer ore production of the Lake Superior region will be the largest ever known, as the total is expected to reach 7,250,000 gross tons. The railroads, it says, are now running extra trains to complete shipments before the close of the lake season. The Engineering and Mining Journal (which is not specially protectionist) mentions the fact that among the recent metal Exports from Baltimore were 500 kegs of nails and 26,380 pounds of wire to Dublin, Ireland. Frequent consignments of nails and hardware, says the Journal, are made to the West Indias, but exports of American nails and wire to a British port, especially in the quantities shown here, are new and worthy of note. It seems to show that our manufacturers are beginning to take advantake of the close approximation of prices in the two countries.

Senator John Sherman, of Ohio, repudiates the high protection theory in this language: "I am not inclined to claim that the victory will be permanent. The people may become as displeased with the republicans before many years and administer to them a crushing defeat as they have administered to the democrats this year. The people punished the republicans in 1890 and 1892 and now they have changed. To say they cannot or are not likely to turn back again is to make a stronger statement than I would care to venture. I do not regard the present result as an indorsement of the McKinley bill or a demand on the part of the people for radical tariff legislation. There will undoubtedly be some members who will regard it as such, but I hardly believe the party will enter into any extreme legislation of this kind. Of course they cannot do it during the next session of congress because the president would not allow anything of that nature to become law, and the effort would prove fruitless. I would not favor any great increase in duties. On the stump in the campaign I said very plainly that I was a moderate protectionist and wanted only such duties as would insure a fair rate of wages for the workingmen of this country. Some protectionists would have foreign goods absolutely excluded by a high tariff. I do not believe in this, as it would gave a monopoly to our home manufacturers and bring on contests between capital and labor. I believe in so placing the duties as to allow a healthy foreign competition. If I should see that any duty was making a monopoly I would take that duty off."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, Dec. 7, 1894.

The so-called Carlisle currency plan fell very flat on Congress. Something new was expected from the advance talk, but there is nothing new in the plan presented. The portion which refers to the enlargement of the circulation of national bank currency is practically the same as that which may be found in a bill introduced in the House several years ago by Representative Walker, a republican from Massachusetts, and which was favorably considered by the committee on Banking Currency, but was never acted upon by the House. The same idea was presented to a convention of bankers which met at Baltimore during the present year, and was endorsed by that convention; hence its designation as the "Baltimore plan." That portion which recommends an exemption of the currency of such State banks as may choose to comply with certain regulations is believed to have been intended to weaken the silver men by drawing the Southern men away from them, and if there were any probability of its becoming a law it might succeed.

The silver men in Congress were not pleased by the neglect of President Cleveland to even mention silver in his message, except to sneer at it, in connection with the declaration attached to the act which repealed the purchasing clause of the Sherman silver law—that it is the policy of this government to maintain the parity between gold and silver. They propose, if possible, to give him a Roland for his Oliver, by passing a free coinage bill. Senator Voorhees, chairman of the Senate Finance committee, says that committee will report a free coinage bill very shortly.

The trouble about that bond issue has begun. In the Senate Mr. Peffer attacked it in a speech, and Representative Baily, of Texas, says his resolution, stating it to be the sense of Congress that bonds cannot be legally issued, except to maintain specie payments, will be taken up and passed at once.

There will be a very lively fight over the Nicaragua canal bill in the House, if its friends succeed, as now seems likely, in getting it up for consideration. Speaker Crisp's opposition prevented its being taken up at the last session, but the friends of the bill now say that he has expressed a willingness for the Commitee on Rules to name a date for its consideration. The democratic opponents of the bill have announced their determination to filibuster should an attempt be made to force it to a vote. It is claimed that the bill will pass the House if a vote can be had, and a vote can be had if the committee on Rules so wills and a majority of the House will support an order limiting debate.

"Silver dollar" Bland, chairman of the House committee on coinage, says it will be no fault of his if his bill for the free coinage of silver is not passed at this session, as it is his purpose to endeavor to persuade the committee to favorably report the bill, and he says, if he succeeds that the bill will be passed by a substantial majority. His success with the committee is regarded as doubtful, for the same reason that prevented the bill being reported at the last session—the belief of some of the members that nothing can be accomplished by reporting a bill that cannot become a law.

The House committee on Public Lands has favorably reported a bill for opening to settlement and entry all lands included within the limits of any Indian reservation, or in the Indian Territory, the disposal of which has heretofore or may be hereafter authorized by agreement or treaty. The report on the bill says it will provide a general law applicable to Indian lands that could be used as fast as Indian title is extinguished, taking the place of the slow process of special legislation for each reservation, and that it will in a great measure prevent a repetition of the scandalous frauds which have accompanied the method now in use.

Senator Berry, of Ark., introduced a bill providing for territorial government for that portion of the Indian territory occupied by the five civilized tribes. It abrogates all treaties made with those portions relating to land titles, and allots 160 acres of land to each member of those tribes and provides that the remainder shall be sold, and the proceeds turned over to the Indians, whose homesteads shall be free from taxation.

A sub committee of the House committee on Labor has been holding conferences with the U. S. Labor Commissioner Wright, to perfect the Springer bill providing for a National Board of Arbitration.

The Sugar Trust has just declared a quarterly dividend of 3 per cent. on its common stock and 1 3-4 per cent. on its preferred stock. This is at the rate of 12 per cent. a year on the common stock and of 7 per cent. on the preferred stock. There is $37,500,000 of each, so that at this rate the dividends to the stockholders for the year will amount to $7,125,000. As the owners of the Trust have invested only $10,000,000, they will thus receive 71 1-4 per cent. on their capital. Can a better argument be found for the immediate passage of the free-sugar bill?—N. Y. World.

"Baltimore Plan" of Currency Reform.

The Baltimore plan proposes to amend the National-Bank Act so as no longer to require Government bonds as security for circulation, but provide a safety-fund instead; to allow banks to issue circulation to 50 per cent of their paid-up, unimpaired capital, and, in an emergency, 75 per cent. All notes of failed banks are to be redeemed by the Government, as under the present law. A guarantee, or safety-fund, equal to 5 per cent of the outstanding circulation, is to be accumulated and maintained by gradual taxation upon such circulation. From this sum the Government is to redeem notes of failed banks. The Government also retains a prior lien upon the assets of failed banks, including stockholders' liability, as now provided by law, in order to replenish this safety-fund and protect itself against possible loss. Practically, the only change is to substitute a guarantee fund for Government bonds as security, the other changes being incidental. The details are open to discussion and improvement, but I believe the principles to be right.

Just such a law as the one proposed by the Baltimore bankers is now in successful operation in the Dominion of Canada, except that the Canadian law allows circulation to the par of unimpaired capital, and the Government assumes no responsibility for the redemption of failed banks' notes beyond the application of the 5 per cent fund. The law has proved eminently successful and satisfactory in Canada. In the light of these facts no one can dispute the safety of the plan.—A. H. Hepburn, in the December Forum.

A Banker on Monometalism.

A paper that will be read with great interest by all who have made any study of the Silver Question is the Hon. George Wilson's criticism of David A. Well's arguments for monometalism in the December Arena. Mr. Wilson is the president of the oldest bank in Missouri, but he writes from the standpoint of the bimetalists and claims to have all the weight of authority and history and centuries of experience, in all the countries, in both hemispheres, in all ages, and under all forms of government, on his side. It is a paper that will be widely read and discussed by all students of American economic literature, to which Mr. Wells is a frequent contributor and so is familiar to the general reading public. Those who enjoy a lively controversy between two able and acute minds can turn to this paper certain of getting an intellectual exhilaration.

THE BUSINESS MAN'S LUNCH.

Hard Work and Indigestion go Hand in Hand.

Concentrated thought, continued in, robs the stomach of necessary blood, and this is also true of hard physical labor.

When a five horse-power engine is made to do ten horse-power work something is going to break. Very often the hard-worked man coming from the field or the office will "bolt" his food in a few minutes which will take hours to digest. Then too, many foods are about as useful in the stomach as a keg of nails would be in a fire under a boiler. The ill-used stomach refuses to do its work without the proper stimulus which it gets from the blood and nerves. The nerves are weak and "ready to break," because they do not get the nourishment they require from the blood, finally the ill-used brain is morbidly wide awake when the overworked man attempts to find rest in bed.

The application of common sense in the treatment of the stomach and the whole system brings to the busy man the full enjoyment of life and healthy digestion when he takes Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets to relieve a bilious stomach or after is too hearty meal, and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to purify, enrich and vitalize the blood. The "Pellets" are tiny sugar-coated pills made of highly concentrated vegetable ingredients which relieve the stomach of all offending matters easily and thoroughly. They need only be taken for a short time to cure the biliousness, constipation and slothfulness, or torpor, of the liver; then the "Medical Discovery" should be taken in teaspoonful doses to increase the blood and enrich it. It has a peculiar effect upon the lining membranes of the stomach and bowels, toning up and strengthening them for all time. The whole system feels the effect of the pure blood coursing through the body and the nerves are vitalized and strengthened, not deadened, or put to sleep, as the so-called celery compounds and nerve mixtures do—but refreshed and fed on the food they need for health. If you suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia, nervousness, and any of the ills which come from impure blood and disordered stomach, you can cure yourself with Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery which can be obtained at any drug store in the country.

IMPORTANT FACTS.

If you have dull and heavy pains across forehead and about the eyes; if the nostrils are frequently stopped up and followed by a disagreeable discharge; if soreness in the nose and bleeding from the nostrils is often experienced; if you are very sensitive to cold in the head accompanied with headache; then you may be sure you have catarrh; and should (immediately) resort to Ely's Cream Balm for a cure. The remedy will give instant relief.

GOTHAM'S UPPER CRUST.

What a Few Punctures by One of Its Dudes Discloses.

This is the time of year when the society writer makes up his list of coming debutantes and dwells feelingly on their youth, beauty and wealth, as if he—poor fellow—would like to get at them himself. I believe there are no raving beauties about to be launched this year, but there are plenty of money and a lot of young women of whom it may be said, "They are such nice girls!" Little Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt, who is ability and entirely sweet, is, of course, the heiress par excellence of the season, and the scramble after her will be something awful. Indeed nearly all the New York families of note have something in the way of a daughter to contribute to society. I fear that most of these pretty little girls must be content with the introduction of a tea, a cruel and barbarous ceremony, to be sure, but inexpensive and easily managed. None of the debutantes, with the exception of Miss Vanderbilt, has any chance of a coming out ball simply because none of them lives in a big enough house, and times are not propitious for hiring halls.

Mrs. Coleman Drayton's legal answer to her husband's complaint is rather unsatisfactory to society. She simply says she didn't and leaves it an open question between her own and her husband's veracity. People rather hoped for something with more spice in it, more boiling oil, so to speak. When people who lead society come to grief in divorce courts, people have a right to expect a great sensation. To simply say: "You are all wrong. I never was there in my life," is not what we have been expecting. Society holds that Mrs. Drayton should have named some haunts said to have been frequented by her husband and made matters generally unpleasant for him. In its present shape it doesn't look as if the case would ever be brought to trial, and therefore society, which once fawned upon Mrs. Drayton, is disappointed. It actually feels as if Mrs. Drayton had in some way done it a grievous injustice.

Well, chappies, what are we coming to anyhow? Here is young Steevie Thorn, who married the concert hall singer, Mlle. Di Dio, taking his bride to the Midway plaisance of the Waldorf—right into the heart of the Four Hundred, as it were—and dining there, while society cranes its neck to see the new Mrs. Thorn and wonders whether she will burst forth in song while at table. Oh, dear! but it was most devilishly exciting, don't you know, and naughty Steevie had the audacity to seem to actually enjoy it all.—Cholly Knickerbocker in New York Recorder.

A CORNER IN ELK TEETH.

Losekamp Has Over 80,000 of Them Locked Up In Safety Vaults.

Mr. John D. Losekamp of Billings, Mon., practically holds the elk tooth stock of the entire country, and to his already enormous supply he is constantly adding, the Indians and hunters bringing teeth to him from all over the country. Not every one knows that the elk teeth, or rather the tusks, of which two only are found in the mouth of the adult elk, have a practical commercial value. The teeth are used as jewelry, mostly as pendants on watch guards or as insignia of the secret society known as the Elks. The value of a tooth ranges from 50 cents to $2.50, according to its size, color and marking.

Mr. Losekamp has now over 80,000 elk teeth deposited in safety vaults. Many of the old Indian dresses were highly ornamented with elk teeth, some of them being fairly covered with the teeth. Mr. Losekamp has lived on the frontier all his mature life and understands Indian trading perfectly, yet he has sometimes paid over $100 for a single garment thus ornamented, caring, of course, for nothing but the teeth. The Indians brill the teeth to fasten them on their dresses, and this does not injure the value of the tooth, but they have a much worse habit of sometimes staining the teeth a bright red. This dye cannot be extracted and depreciates the value of the elk teeth for a white customer. The Indians do not dye the teeth so much now since they have learned they can sell them for more in their natural state.—Forest and Stream.

Never Asked For a Patent.

"Fifty-three years ago I invented the winnowing mill now in common use," says Moses Gilman of South Sangerville. "If I had had it patented, I might have realized a fortune from it, as all the machines that have been built since have been upon the same principle. Even the thrashing machine separators, which have superseded the old time flail, use the winnowing mill substantially as I first made it for clearing the chaff from the grain. I have invented many other things that were valuable, but I never asked for a patent." Mr. Gilman, though 77 years old, is still at it inventing, and says if his strength and reason hold out he is going to produce some valuable new ideas yet.—Auburn (Me.) Gazette.

The Divine Sarah's Latest.

Sarah Bernhardt has developed a new eccentricity, if report is true, which does not inspire her friends with confidence in her attractive qualities as a hostess. In one of her reception rooms the furniture is a succession of surprises of the "shut up" order, which is more amusing to the divine Sarah than it is to her guest. As soon as he is seated in one cozy looking chair an invisible spring sends something up to tap him on the head, and directly he is seated in another the arms spread out and close around him so tightly that he is powerless to move until some one comes to release him.—Paris Journal.

The Tecumseh Herald.

BY SCOVEL C. STACY.

Issued Every Thursday Morning.

LAKE KERR, FLORIDA.

Dec. 3, 1894.

TO THE EDITOR:—At the request of a number of Tecumseh people, who are shivering with cold, and therefore wish to hear of balmy air and roses, this letter is sent to the HERALD.

Our party, that left Tecumseh the 6th, reached here the 10th of November. We found a light fire in the sitting room pleasant in the mornings, but in a few days were glad that the room for our cook stove was thoroughly detatched from the house by the "blow through," as it is called in this southland.

Some confusion of mind prevails among us in regard to the season of the year. Even old Mother Nature herself seems to be somewhat mixed up about the matter, for she has set the leaves to falling in the approved autumn fashion from the peach trees, and allows some of them to go to blooming in spring fashion. It is plain to see that she knows no better than we whether this is May or November, unless she peeps into our almanacs. Roses bloom in profusion, making perpetual June. The air is a happy compound of the very best that each month in the year can produce,—not each in its turn, but all poured together and filtered and toned to such a delectable degree that you don't know what ails you. The delicious warmth of the sunshine is so tempered with the coolness of the air, that even invalids are not able to complain of the heat or cold. This is not true of all Florida, but the elevated pine forests surrounding Lake Kerr can be counted among the places where it is true.

Soon after our arrival here we were honored with a visit from Thomas Mead and wife, of Raisin, Michigan, accompanied by Mrs. Benj. Swan, of Sanford, Florida, who took up their abode in the pleasant, but at present rather empty hotel, and made it lively enough for a few days. Of course we must do honor to such guests, and the little town exerted itself accordingly. A picnic was planned—such as Michigan could never afford her children—a drive around the lake to a picnic ground in the midst of magnolia trees and palms. There, deep set in a hollow, surrounded thickly with dark trees, boiled up the clearest water, almost radiant in soft colors. There are six or eight "boils," as they are called, all flowing together, and they compose the Salt Springs. After rowing over the springs and looking down into the measureless depths between the rocks whence the water poured upward in quiet, dignified volumes, through which darted hundreds of fish, we decided to eat dinner.

In Florida everything is lovely but the grass, and we could find no place to sit down, so we "spread the cloth" on the floor of the provision cart—a simple platform laid across two broad wheels—and this improvised a pretty, moveable table. The bill of fare was Floridian in character, consisting of honey, made from tropical blossoms, pieces of cold sweet potato, pickled figs, guava jelly, delicious slices of cold venison, besides the usual allowance of cakes, pies, bread and butter, cheese, etc. The close was the feast of oranges, and as there was no drink but plain tea and mineral water, there is no accounting for the state of merriment the company reached.

The ride home was singularly novel to some of our eyes that were unused to southern scenery. Sometimes enchanting vistas would appear, lavishly draped and festooned with delicate silvery moss, sometimes falling a distance of from fifteen to twenty feet and swaying with the wind, like dainty curtains of more than human device and beauty. Long roads, winding anywhere through the forests, occasionally came upon a pretty home in the heart of an orange grove high upon the banks of the pretty lake. We stopped at the Rob. Henley orange grove, and as the overseer was of our company, we picked and ate oranges till we sighed that we could eat, or rather drink, no more.

The fruit is getting nicely ready for picking. It were idle to say that an orange tree loaded with fruit is a thing of beauty! and that nothing reminds one of the Garden of Eden like a whole field of them. It is not to be talked of—it is to be seen and smelled and felt and tasted.

The road from the grove wound through the deep forest in such an enticing manner that the ladies all wished to walk. Then was made the mistake of the day, and the end of that winding path found them, when the horses came up, on some boards in the yard of a deserted cottage, vainly trying to clear themselves of sand burrs, wood-ticks and figas. Florida is a beautiful country to ride or fly in, but it does not do to walk unless you are a horse. Our horses walked, however, nearly all of the thirteen miles around the lake, they were so heavily laden. Orlando Hammond's Black Beauty headed the gay procession; but of course he could go no faster than a walk, hauling Tom Mead and our provisions on our picnic table.

We reached Elwood Comfort's home just as the sun was sinking gloriously behind the lake, and as the warm, rich glows of sunset softly left the sky they stole into our hearts and are there yet.

The Prohibitory Law of 1850.

Mr. Editor.—Allow me to give your readers the prohibitory clause that was inserted in the constitution of Michigan adopted in 1850, and about which so many anti-prohibitionists have so much to say. The clause reads thus:

"Section 47 of the state of Michigan. The legislature shall not pass any act authorising the grant of license for the sale of ardent spirits or other intoxicating liquors."

You will see the law simply interdicted license; it did not prohibit the manufacture, importation and sale of intoxicating liquors, as we propose to do. Even this poor law, with all of its weakness, was liked by the people better than a license law, for after the rummies had obtained a resubmission in 1869 the law was sustained by a majority of 13,681 against eliminating the clause from the constitution. Six years later (in 1875) the anti-prohibitionists so influenced the legislature that it passed a tax or license law, notwithstanding the constitution to the contrary. In October, 1875, the state supreme court decided that the tax law enacted by the legislature was valid, notwithstanding the anti-license clause. Now what were the people to do? We had a clause in our constitution which had been stricken out by our legislature and the act sanctioned by our supreme court. So the people in 1876 voted for the worthless clause to be stricken out by a majority of only 8,078 in a vote of 113,200. A large minority were unwilling to give up even this broken stick, although the supreme court had broken it in twain.

Now this is the strong and much talked of prohibitory law we had and could not enforce and the people voted out; so say the antis. How could the sale of liquors be prohibited when there was no law to prohibit it? Can we prohibit the sale of groceries because the legislature does not pass an act to grant a license to sell groceries? Without a law to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors it is just as lawful to sell as to sell groceries. Let us look at a prohibitory clause in our state constitution of 1850, section 27: "The legislature shall not authorize any lottery nor permit the sale of lottery tickets." Now this is prohibition. If section 47 had read, "The legislature shall not authorize any saloon nor allow the sale of ardent spirits or other intoxicating liquors" we would now have the same number of saloons as we have lotteries, which is none. Do you know any reason why the legislature did not pass such a law except the power behind the throne—the saloon vote? Is not the saloon as demoralizing as the lottery? Does not the saloon produce as much poverty and wretchedness as the lottery? Does not the saloon ruin as many young women as the lottery? Does not the saloon destroy as many homes, making widows and orphans, as the lottery? Does it not ruin as many souls as the lottery? Does not the saloon corrupt our government as much as the lottery? Is it right to prohibit the lottery, and I think it was, was it not just as binding on the legislature, when a majority of the people wanted it, to prohibit the greater as well as the lesser evil?

The reason is very plain. The whisky or saloon element is thoroughly organized. The temperance element is strong enough in the state to close forever the open saloon. In order to ascertain the sentiment of and unite the effort of the temperance people of the state, the temthe pastors of Ovid, without regard to sect or creed, have issued the following to the pastors of the various churches.

Dear Sir and Brother:—We are trying to ascertain the sentiment of the people of Michigan relative to petition our legislature at its next session to submit to popular vote a state constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture, importation and sale of intoxicating liquors, except for sacramental, medicinal and scientific purposes. Will you assist by giving a few minutes' talk and taking the sentiment of each of your congregations by a rising vote or in any way you wish for or against the movement? If your people favor the movement have them appoint some person as corresponding secretary with whom we can communicate. Please send returns on reply card, giving estimate of votes for or against. Also name of corresponding secretary, with post office address. If you favor the movement act immediately. As soon as the returns are in they will be published in the various church papers. Let each of us feel responsible for its success or failure, for with a united church movement it must succeed. A copy of this is to be sent to all pastors in the state."

Signed by the pastors of Ovid.

There appears to be a strong sentiment throughout the state favoring this movement. Let me give some resolutions passed by some societies. The conference of the M. E. church resolved "that this conference favor the submission of a constitutional amendment for the prohibition of the liquor traffic in this state," The Baptists in convention at Lansing this fall passed resolutions favoring a constitutional prohibitory amendment. The Epworth leagues at Saginaw; March 27-29, 1894, resolved "that inasmuch as the traffic in intoxicating liquors is the greatest foe to our young manhood, we, the Epworth league in convention assembled, representing 200,000 young people, do favor the petitioning of our next legislature to submit to the people of Michigan a state constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors except for medicinal and scientific purposes, and we pledge ourselves to do all in our power to bring about such a measure." Now while the above resolution is a strong one, I think they should have excepted for sacramental purposes, as some Christian churches believe in using fermented wine, and a law interfering with their mode of worship would be declared unconstitutional. Our object is to close saloons, not to antagonize churches. It is the expression of such sentiments that led the pastors of Ovid to issue the above card.

We wish all pastors who receive this card to fill out, detach and return the reply card accompanysng the pastor's card. Get as good a report as possible. If any pastor does not receive a card I wish him to take the expression or vote as above. We expect to send one to every pastor, but some addresses can not be obtained, especially in cities. Do not neglect appointing committes and corresponding secretaries. The state can be thoroughly organized if each one do his duty. I would prayerfully ask the ladies in every congregation to organize a crusade of prayer for the interposition of the divine Spirit in arousing the churches to action in this great movement. We need your prayers and influence. Our effort will be in vain, except the Lord by his spirit accompanies and directs it. Let prayer, both public and private, be continually ascending from now until our object is accomplished and every saloon is closed throughout the state.

Albion College.

The foot-ball season is over. The last game has been played and Albion has won a reputation of which she may well be proud. While she has met but one defeat this season, she has won the inter-collegiate championship of three states, defeating one team which has the reputation of being one of the strongest teams in the west, and which had never before met defeat.

Albion's victories on the gridiron this year have given her a wide reputation throughout the larger universities of the west, and many of the highest institutions, with which Albion has never before been classed as equal, have written for games for next year. The prospects for a strong team next season are very good, only two team men being lost this year by graduation, and Albion may be expected to make a record against her more formidible opponents of which any university in the west might well be proud.

Albion's success in foot-ball is analogous to the success which she is meeting in every other line. Never were the classes as full as now—never was as thorough work done by the classes as is done now, although Albion has always been known as an institution where thorough work was done.

With characteristic progressiveness, Albion college has planned an exploring expedition. The trip is to take place next summer and is under the direction of two experienced travellers, members of the faculty, and they propose to make scientific research through a large portion of unexplored country between Lake Superior and Hudson Bay. The party will probably consist of eight or ten students with Professors Fall and Ford.

A Letter.

Believing that not a few of your readers will be interested in the news, I would state that Dr. A. G. Owens, of Petoskey, formerly a Macon township boy and graduate of the Raisin Valley Seminary, as well as of the University, sailed for Europe on the Paris, Wednesday, Nov. 28th inst., for an absence of eighteen months or two years. Since 1886 the Doctor has been the leading physician and surgeon in this section of the state, and the only oculist north of Grand Rapids. The demands of his large practice upon his strength were so great that prudence suggested a rest, and accordingly he goes to the old world with the intention of atteading surgical clinics in the Universities of Berlin and Leipsic, and visiting the various points of interest on the continent. His family remains at Petoskey for the present, but may join him in Germany next spring, returning in the summer of 1896.

Yours truly, A. QUALLIUS.

$15,000 FOR TRANSPARENCIES.

A Single Item of the Cost of the Political Canvass In New York City.

During the two weeks preceding an election in New York city those sign painters who make a specialty of political transparencies have something of a harvest. There are only a few of them, and they divide about $15,000 paid for printing on canvas the names of the candidates and affixing the canvas to a plain wooden frame which serves as firewood after the election. The average cost of the campaign transparency stretched in front of a party headquarters is $15. There were about 1,000 such transparencies in New York city this year, averaging about 35 in each assembly district.

Tammany had a headquarters in every assembly district. The Republicans had two headquarters in every assembly district—those of the regulars and the Milhollandites. Then there were the State Democracy, the Anti-Tammany Democracy, the Independent county organization, the Good Government clubs, the German Reform union, the New York or Voorhis Democracy and the Socialists, Populists and Prohibitionists. Next came the business men's associations, the young men's clubs, the social clubs which made political nominations, and such independent organizations as the Italian-American Republicans, the Hungarian Democrats and the Swedish anti-Tammanyites. Each congress candidate usually had a separate headquarters, and some of the assembly and aldermanic candidates also opened rooms of their own.

The most elaborate of the campaign transparencies was, of course, to be found in front of Tammany hall. This year two changes of candidates—judge of the court of appeals and mayor—had been made upon it, which is unusual in one election. After the battle of the ballots was over the canvas on the transparencies was torn to shreds, and the wooden framework was split up. There was nothing left to show for the expenditure of about $15,000.—New York Sun.

Artist Watts Has a Word to Say About His "Love and Life."

Mr. George M. Watts, R. A., the eminent English artist, sends the following letter to the New York Herald apropos of the dispute between the Washington authorities and the Metropolitan Museum of Art in regard to the possession of his painting, "Love and Life:"

"In regard to the picture I presumed to present to the government of the United States it may not be out of place for me, in the first place, to point out that the painting represents in the simplest manner that naked humanity is aided to ascend from the depths of base animalism by love, meaning sympathy, generosity and aspiration, signified by the broad wings. The figures are purely symbolical, having, I hope, no tinge of sensuality in the character of their form.

"My idea was that the great American nation would in time gather together a splendid collection of works of art, which will represent the mind of the English speaking races, but that awaiting this time my offering should find a home in some such place as the Metropolitan museum of New York, though I may add that after some correspondence with the American embassy here I accepted the arrangement that a temporary resting place should be found in some public room or gallery of the White House.

"I can't, however, presume to offer any voice in the matter beyond saying that the painting is essentially a gallery picture and was never contemplated by me as hanging in any dwelling house whatever."

THE ACTOR KICKED.

And His Nerve Was Rewarded With a Liberal Shower of Wealth.

Here is a good story from the London Figaro:

"I happened the other night to be at one of the smaller theaters in the city and witnessed toward the last act of the principal play a very amusing incident.

"A slight impatience was shown among the audience at the delay in raising the curtain, and shortly the manager appeared to announce that one of the actors had been taken ill, which necessitated his role being taken by a substitute.

"Then the act commenced, but suddenly every one was startled by the appearance of another character on the stage, who immediately began to explain himself as follows:

"'They have deceived you. I am not ill, but they have not paid me, and as I have not dined I was of course unable to fulfill my role.'

"The public was at first stupefied, but very soon acclaimed the actor, and money literally rained on the stage. Finally at the end of several minutes the actor, who probably had received satisfaction, entered the stage and played his part, much to the delight of the spectators."

It is better for a doctor, in a business point of view, to discover one new disorde that incorporate a dozen diseases.

Current Topics in the Schools.

The suggestion that every teacher, whether in city, village or district school, should strive to interest his pupils in the study of current topics, is an excellent one. The primary object of school instruction is not merely to carry the pupils through so many text-books on so many different subjects, but so to guide their growing minds as to develop the best manhood and womanhood. To accomplish these results, the teacher must go outside the text-books, must put life into his teaching, and must connect the school work with the life and thought of the day, especially the broader thought of the great outside world as yet but little known to the pupils in the schools. The first requisite for the successful study of current topics in the schools is a teacher who is himself in sympathy and in contact with the best thought of the day. The next requisite is a journal that can be used as a text-book; one that will furnish the necessary record of events and comment thereon, with a good range and variety of reading. With such a journal, the teacher can make the study of current topics of great benefit, not only to the scholars but to himself. A weekly journal that fairly presents all sides of every important public question, and that admirably meets the requirements for the study of current topics in the schools, is Public Opinion, published at Washington, D. C., at $2.50 per year. A contribution of ten cents apiece from 25 pupils will pay for Public Opinion for one year, or five cents apiece will pay for six months. The weekly issue can be used as tex-books in the reading classes, and if preserved and bound they make a valuable addition to or nucleus for a school library. Send for specimen copy.

Farm Home Reading Circle.

The Michigan Agricultural College has taken another step forward by inaugurating a college extension course of reading. This plan aims to furnish a systematic course of reading on subjects relating directly to agriculture and kindred subjects. While the course as planned recommends a progressive line of work, discussing first the underlying principles of agriculture, and later taking up special departments, yet it is largely elective and so flexible that a person interested in any branch of farming may select books pertaining only to his chosen line. For example, the class devoted to live stock aims to give a general knowledge of feeding, breeding and handling of horses, cattle, sheep and swine, and includes also a book on dairying. If, for any reason, the reader does not desire to take all the work in the class devoted to live stock and is especially interested in dairying, he may select only that portion relating to dairy work, and receive proper credit.

The course comprises five classes, Soils and Crops, Live Stock, Garden and Orchard, Home Making and Political Science. Certificates are given on the completion of the work outlined in each book and class, and on the completion of three classes the reader is presented with an appropriate diploma. The examinations are all optional, and any person may read in the course without sending in reports or taking examinations of any kind.

This course was but recently established, yet it has readers all over the United States and Canada, and the great interest manifested by those who are now enjoying its opportunities is a good indication of its value. Its popularity arises from the fact that it is prepared by busy men: it is short, practical and instructive: it offers a scheme of advisory correspondence with the college authorities which makes it possible to become intimately acquainted with the work of the experiment stations.

Send a postal card to the secretary for full information regarding this course.

Must Have It.

Yes, you must have it. It is the only way you can learn what is going on about you; the news of the city, village or farming district in which you live. You must have your home paper, whether you can afford anything else in the way of current reading or not. And a great deal besides home news you will find in it. The editor of your home paper aims first of all to give you the home news, with intelligent and helpful comment thereon. But he does not stop there; he does the best he can to give you the general news and the best thought of the whole world. Of course he does not and cannot give you as much as you ought to have, and if you ask him about the matter he will frankly tell you so. He will also advise you what you ought to get to supplement your home paper and keep you and your growing boys and girls up with the times in the great fields of politics, sociology, finance, commerce, science, religion, art, education, and the literary and book news of the day. He will tell you that there is one weekly journal, unique in this respect, made up of carefully selected, condensed and classified extracts from the newspapers and magazines the world over, and that he has made special arrangements by which he can give you a reduced subscription rate for this unique journal, if taken in connection with the HERALD. He will tell you that the name of this journal so admirably suited to your wants is PUBLIC OPINION, that it is published at Washington, D. C., and that the regular subscription price is $2.50 per year, but that he can give you both the HERALD and PUBLIC OPINION for one year for $3.00 cash. He will also tell you, that PUBLIC OPINION and the HERALD are exactly what you need during the political campaign. PUBLIC OPINION will be sent you for ten weeks on trial for fifty cents.

THE MODERN STEAMSHIP.

Impossible to Guess What Speed May Not Be Reached Hereafter.

Twenty years ago it was thought by many that the limit as to size, speed and economy had been reached. At present it seems that the draft of water at the harbors and the cost are the limits that will prevent further development on present lines. With different material for construction, with liquid fuel, and other improvements or inventions, it is possible that 20 years from now one may look back at the Lucania with her 21.6 knots as we look back on the Germanic and Britannic of 1874 with their 16 knots.

The steam pressures on ocean steamers up to 1850 did not exceed 20 pounds. With the earlier vessels with only 5 to 10 pounds of steam, it was possible to stop a leak in a boiler "by pushing a rag in the hole." As late as 1846 a prominent firm of engine builders in England stated that from 10 to 12 pounds was what they used for merchant vessels. By 1880 pressure had increased to from 60 to 90 pounds, and on the introduction of steel for boilers pressures went up to about 100 pounds by 1885, and now boilers are being built, for large steamers, to carry 200 pounds. Special types of boilers for torpedo boats and other uses carry much higher pressure.

The Ericsson machinery weighs only 56 pounds per horsepower. This last is for torpedo boats and high pressures and can not yet be approached for large vessels. On the trial trip the Minneapolis developed 20,812 horsepower, and the total weight of all the machinery, with the water in the boilers, was 1,961 tons, so that the weight of machinery for each horsepower was about 210 pounds. Had the Minneapolis machinery been of the same relative weight as that of the Powhatan it would have weighed over 8,400 tons, or 1,000 tons more than the Minneapolis herself weighed on her trial trip.—Chautauquan.

THE FALSE MUSCLE INDUSTRY.

Shapely Calves Made to Order For Bicyclists In Welsh Factories.

There is one department of industry which, by the general admission of those engaged in it, is exempt from the stagnation which so largely prevails. Indeed it is in a remarkably flourishing state, and the men and women employed at it are kept busy from morning to night. It is that which deals with the supply of artificial sinews and muscles in order to give to limbs the plumpness and symmetry which nature has denied. The great demand at the present time is for well shaped calves for the legs, and for some time the purveyors of these embellishments could not make out why so many of them were wanted, because the requirements of the ladies of the ballet and burlesque actresses are pretty much the same all the year round, and there was nothing going on to occasion an unusual request for the articles.

But they have now found out the reason. They are required by lady cyclists who wear knickerbockers, and who, naturally enough, desire to exhibit to mankind the limbs which are not covered by these bulky garments in as shapely and attractive a form as possible. The stuffing required for this purpose must be of the best kind, and it is also necessary that the mold should be well fitting; otherwise the lady cyclist would become a kind of scarecrow on wheels instead of a thing of beauty. The articles, therefore, cost more than the ordinary calves, and it may accordingly be said that the latest fashion among women not only encourages cycle making, but also aids the artistic upholstery of the human figure in the highest form.—Cardiff (Wales) Mail.

SHE RIVALS BELLE STAR.

Queen Dolly Rules the Cook Outlaws and Holds Up Unwary Wayfarers.

Dolly, queen of the Cook gang of outlaws, attracts more attention here than any person in the state. Her word is law to the Cooks. She accompanies them on their pillaging expeditions and is said to be a handsome, dashing young woman, who possesses courage unlimited and whose daredevil recklessness exceeds that of the once noted Belle Starr. She wears a six shooter and a big bowie knife and carries a winchester. With a gun she is a dead shot and is cool and collected in time of danger.

The gang was camped not far from Salisaw, two stations west of Muldrew, not long ago, when she went into town, accompanied by two of the boys as far as the outskirts. Attired in short dress, close fitting jacket and felt hat, she boldly walked into the postoffice and inquired for mail, after which she visited several stores, where she did some trading, carrying a six shooter all the while. Near the edge of town she held up three men, taking from one a gold watch and from the others a small sum of money, then coolly walked up the railroad track, where she was joined by the outlaws.

Dolly is but 22 years old. Her true name is unknown, and she guards the secret of her identity well.—Fort Smith (Ark.) Dispatch.

Carries His Name Well.

Jegemiah Prophet Elijah Kumler is the full name of the moderator of the Presbyterian synod just adjourned in Tyrone. He is a graduate of Miami university and has been 34 years in the ministry. He is pastor of the East Liberty church, Pittsburg, and is an eloquent and forceful speaker. He has a sister named "Come, Thou Fount of Every Blessing."—Philadelphia Times.

The Office or the Dogs.

Miss Louise Imogen Quincy is the postmistress of Auburndale, Mass. She writes verses and has some of the other eccentricities of genius. She keeps two monstrous dogs that are said to be fierce. Timid people refuse to go to the office for letters or stamps, and it is evident that Miss Quincy must give up the postoffice or the dogs.—New York Times.

FROM our home of peace and gladness
Comes this happy, jingling rhyme,
With our hearts that know no sadness
At this blessed Christmas time;
As we hear the dear old story
In the pealing of the bells,
To the giver comes the blessing:
"'Tis the thoughtful act that tells."

The mistletoe of bygone days
Hangs aloft within our hall,
And the bright, red-berried holly
Drapes the pictures on the wall,
And the air of sweet contentment
Which in our household dwells
Bears out the cherished saying:
"'Tis the thoughtful act that tells."

Let the miser hoard his money—
What pleasure doth he find?
For when the day of reckoning comes
It must all be left behind.
And he laughs to scorn the message
Of the bells, melodious bells,
As they bring to him the message:
"'Tis the thoughtful act that tells."

Let them ring and ring it louder,
Let it sound through every clime,
How our God will love the giver
At the merry Christmas time.
Let them ring and ring forever,
Until every bosom swells
With the love of helping others:
"'Tis the thoughtful act that tells."
—C. H. Capern, in Chicago Herald.

A POINTER FOR SANTA CLAUS.

A little lady, quaint and small—
(She's five years old and growing tall)—
About these short December days,
When each shop window is ablaze
With gorgeous toys and colored lights,
Indulges in strange fancy flights.

She said to me the other day:
"When Santa Claus comes out our way
How do you think he'll get his pack
Down thro' our narrow chimney stack?
I'll write to him the day before
To come right in at our front door.

"You see, he never could bring down
That lovely doll in silken gown
We saw at Smith's—and then her bed
And furniture upholstered red.
Why—he would have an awful time
Attempting on our roof to climb!

"And, then, just think of all those toys!
I'm sure they'd make an awful noise
As he dropped down, and that would wake
Us up, while to his heels he'd take—
For, don't you know he is so shy
He will not come where folks may spy?

"I'll just address a letter now
To tell him what to bring, and how,
And, then, for fear the post might miss,
If you're down town please tell them this:
When Santa gets to our house that He'll find the key beneath the mat!"
—George E. Bowen, in Inter Ocean.

'T WAS Christmas eve, a time fraught with so many pleasant recollections to those who have enjoyed the blessed experience of a home and the associations of a united family circle; a season when memory opens her portfolio and points out to us the pictures of the long ago from which time has taken all discordant colors and mellowed them into beautiful harmonies; an hour when men's hearts are more tender and sympathetic and more easily prompted by benevolence.

The travel was comparatively light on the through express, for most of the commercial "runners" had managed to finish up their work and were already rejoicing in the comforts of home. Of course there are others than drummers who travel, but the drummer is the staff of life to the passenger service and hotel enterprise, so I mention him first. There were but four commercial men that I recognized as such on this special train, and as usual they were making the best of the occasion with story and joke and merry conversation. Having reversed one of the seats without permission or aid of the conductor, a button hook saving all such ceremony, four of them sat facing each other, forming a jovial group—more noticeable, perhaps, on account of the gloom which seemed to envelop the other passengers.

There were about twenty-five pilgrims occupying the car, comprising the usual varieties of character to be found under the circumstances. The train boy had passed and repassed through the train all the afternoon, laden either with his burden of well-worn paper-covered novels, or his basket of posthumous ripened fruit, but his stock had not appeared to diminish any in spite of his industry. By the weary and discouraged expression of his countenance it was evident that trade was not very lively. The train boy in this case, as in most cases, was a man in years, but still short enough in stature to be called a boy without absurdity; one of those unhealthy and weak-looking mortals who are uninteresting to anyone except their own near kin. The train boy seated himself in an unoccupied corner next to the group of drummers, and taking from his pocket a meager handful of small coins began to count them over. He seemed to derive little comfort from this occupation, for he soon replaced the money in his pocket with an audible sigh

AVERY & CO.

I began to feel a languid compassion for the fellow—not, I confess, the sort to do me any credit—for my pity was not entirely free from a feeling of contempt, a spurious pity, barren of any result; a sort of speculative pity, leading me out into meditations on the diversities and proportionate responsibilities of humanity. The wretched fellow made me feel uncomfortable. What right had the authorities to torment the traveling public by introducing such a factor into their service? A train boy is always a nuisance at his best, with his impudent and constant annoyance, his utter lack of delicacy, his trespass on time and patience, his presumption and infrusion on our privacy. And by what law of equity should I have my sensibilities pained in a fretful sympathy for a supposititious misery? I couldn't help it. What could I possibly do for the fellow even though I were to make an effort?

The half-smothered sigh of the train boy seemed to attract the attention of one of the commercial travelers; either that or the lugubrious expression on his face; for the traveler immediately accosted him in a way peculiar to knights of the road in addressing an employe, with whom all drummers and railway men assume a familiar acquaintance.

"Hey, Jimmie! brace up! What's the matter with you? You look like you'd had an invitation to your own funeral."

THE YOUNG MAN BOUGHT THE BOOK.

His name might or might not have been Jimmie; if it was it was only a coincidence, for the drummer probably had no more idea than I had by what name the train boy was christened. However, it served the purpose and the remark was answered by a sickly effort of a smile.

"Business slow?" continued the interrogator.

"That's what it is," was the despondent answer.

"Well, cheer up, Jimmie. We all strike hard lines some time or other, and to-morrow's Christmas, anyway, and don't you forget it."

"That's what makes things worse," says the train boy, evidently glad to relieve his feelings by confiding in the somewhat rough but not unwelcome sympathy extended. "Ye see, there's the old woman and t'ree kids waitin' fer me at home, and they's all a lookin' fer something. Besides, I expect mother to our house to spend Christmas, and I tole Jennie—my wife—I'd have a turkey sure; and you see, no biz, no turkey. So I was thinking about this and them three little stockings hanging up on the mantel shelf, and felt kinder blue when I see I'd have to fill the stockings wid bananas out of my stock, and get along with pork and beans fer Christmas dinner."

"How much did you take in to-day?" inquires the C. T.

"T'ree dollars and fifteen cents, and I git twenty per cent. out of it."

"That leaves you about sixty cents profit, eh?"

"Jest about."

"And you want a turkey dinner and a little present for Jennie and mother, and plunder for the kids, and you've got sixty cents on hand. Sixty cents will go a good way in peanuts or hairpins, but it hasn't much show to buck up against a Christmas turkey. Now, I'll tell you what's the matter with you. You don't know how to sell goods. In the first place your goods are no good anyway, and in the second place you meander through the train with that flunked-out expression on your face as though you really didn't expect to make a sale anyway. That's no way to drum up a customer."

"Oh, yes, it's easy enough kidden me, but nobody could sell nothin' on this train," says the train boy.

"Couldn't, eh? Well, I'm betting they could if they only knew how to work it. Now, if I was in your place for about fifteen minutes I'd show you how to sell goods. By George! I've an idea! Listen, boys, what's the matter with me trying it on? What d'ye say to my taking this here stock and working the train for all it's worth?"

"Go ahead, Rube, and try it," cries one of the group.

"Yes, let's have some fun," says another.

"You haven't the sand to try," remarks a skeptic.

"Try it, Rube, and give the boy a lift," puts in the third.

"Here goes, then," says the redoubtable Rube. "Here, Jimmie, hand me your basket, and give me your cap." With this he snatches the official cap from the small head of the news vender and places it on his own large cranium. Nothing could be more comical than the effect of the train boy's cap perched on the zenith altitude of the prematurely bald head of the jolly commercial traveler, while his own capacious derby almost settled on the shoulders of the train boy.

Rube stood up fully six feet in his shoes, and I should judge would turn the scale considerably beyond two hundred pounds. All of which added to the absurdity of the situation, and without more ado, beaming with jollity and good nature, off he started on his expedition of charity.

The weary and homesick travelers in our immediate vicinity at first stared, then smiled, then seemed to awake from their melancholy reveries to an interest in something that bid fair to relieve the monotony of the tiresome hours of travel.

Seated behind me was a young man, arrayed in a brand new ready-made suit of clothes of rather loud pattern, all the creases of which were painfully conspicuous; a young man evidently from the rural districts, but he seemed to be on his guard and wore an expression of dignity and gravity which he probably deemed in harmony with his apparel. A faint, indulgent smile appeared upon his face when Rube—I call him Rube because that was the name his friends gave him—presented himself and stock in trade.

"Apples, oranges, peanuts, bananas, specially selected and shipped from Florida for this identical train? Buy some fruits of the tropics, sir?"

"Not to-day, thanks."

"Of course not; I knew you wouldn't fool away money on this stuff. I was just trying to be funny, you know. Men of the world like you and I must relax a little now and then; no offense, I hope. I know you society men are apt to be a little stiff with strangers. But most of you fashionable fellows are good-hearted, after all. And to-morrow's Christmas, you know."

"Oh, I understand; that's all right," replied the flattered youth.

"It's a pretty gay sort of a life you fellows lead, I reckon. I never was in society myself, but I've read about it considerable in Ward McAllister's new book, 'Society as I Have Found It.' Queer duck, McAllister; 'spose you know him personally. His book is all the rage with the Four Hundred, and something you'd appreciate. I've got one copy here, and I don't mind giving you the first show for it."

The young man seemed to be gratified by these remarks, and did not conceal the self-conscious expression of his face as he took the volume and turned over the leaves.

"What does it cost?" he inquired.

"Well, the price marked on it is fifty cents, but you know it's the last in the lot and getting mighty rare. But I'll let you have it for seventy-five cents, seeing to-morrow is Christmas."

Well, the young man bought the book and probably had his money's worth, as he seemed deeply interested in its contents from that time forward.

The volunteer next attacked me, and had no serious difficulty of swindling me out of twenty-five cents on a five-cent package of cough-drops, which he declared would cure any disorder of the human system in a miraculously short time.

The seat in front of mine was occupied by a typical priest. Now, I never saw but two types of traveling priests—one the German and the other Irish. This one was unmistakably Irish—quite willing and ready for a tournament of wit—and a match for the irrepressible drummer. His sharp thrusts at the salesman were applauded by the little coterie of friends across the aisle. It seemed to me that the cunning Rube was purposely laying himself open to give pointers to the priest. However that may be, he managed to leave his reverence poorer by a silver dollar, but in an excellent humor with himself and all the world.

The industrious salesman had by this time proceeded beyond the range of hearing, but was steadily gaining in popularity, and as he progressed shouts of mirth greeted him. Almost every one entered into the spirit of the enterprise, and his stock was considerably diminished before he had passed out to enter the next car, for it was the smoker, and if he had successfully broken the ice in our car he was just the man to reap a harvest amongst the democratic and anarchistic smokers.

The original and fatty train boy was an interesting sight. His despondency had evaporated. He no longer put me in mind of a sick chicken on a rainy day, unable to find comfortable shelter; his despondency had taken wings. He no longer drooped, but sat erect in his seat. His dough-colored face took on a mahogany tint. The dull eyes were sparkling with a new light. Hope had given him back his manhood and courage. He could appear before his humble family in the character of a protector and provider. He could respond to the welcome home as every true man loves to respond with some new comfort for those he loves. He would come home with good tidings for Christmas; for the jolly Samaritan had sold enough in car to insure his hopes.

But here comes Rube, returning from his labors with an empty basket and but two volumes of the disreputable literature which forms the bulk of supply for the trainboy—"The Mistakes of Moses," and "Nance." There is a smile lurking beneath his mustache—I can detect it by the dimples in each cheek—and there is sunshine in his eyes. Six feet of you, Rube, and every inch of you a man! I would like to shake hands with you, old fellow, for there is a big heart thumping under your vest; a heart in proportion to your great body. No doubt you are a sinner, Rube (we are all sinners, for that matter); but you are a saint on this Christmas eve. People disposed to be critical may deplore your lack of dignity and the cynical may say you have made an ass of yourself; but that will not trouble you, old fellow. Your face is aglow with a brightness brought from heavenly places, that ridiculous cap on your head is a crown of glory to you, Rube. You have preached for me an eloquent sermon, a lesson of uses. You have shown me that sentimental emotion is of no value or account. Benevolent wishes are moral vaporings unless they find their ultimate in doings. The gifts you possess you have cheerfully laid on the altar of charity, all unconscious of having done anything for your own glory, delighting only in the joy you have bestowed upon your neighbor—a Merry Christmas, Rube, and a Happy New Year!—Frank Beard, in Ram's Horn.

The Spirit of Living.

The great family life of America does not represent opulence. If it stands for anything it stands for comfort, but not for plenty. We can all afford to recognize the Christ-like spirit of Christmas, which teaches us to remember by some loving token those nearest and dearest to us. But only a few can afford to follow the present method of extravagant and senseless giving. Generosity is a synonym the world over for the American; but true generosity is of the heart and of the heart alone. If one has been more fortunate than the other in the acquirement of means, and the will is present, then, I say, by all means give largely and widely. But let such giving be measured only by true feeling and that spirit manifested as it can be, so that others, less fortunate of means, shall not feel that they are obliged to do what really they cannot afford to do. It will not harm us if, in this respect, we go back a little to the times that are past. No one then heard all this talk about the duty of giving at holiday-time. People gave because it was a pleasure to give; they liked to give, and they gave what they could. A Christmas present then meant more than it does now, in that its only association was the day and the spirit of the giver. Times were simpler, it is true, and wants were fewer. But if we have progressed, and presents are possible to-day which were out of the reach of our forefathers, the spirit can at least remain the same. We need not depart from principles as we grow. We should adhere the closer to them if anything.—Ladies' Home Journal.

JAMES HOAR'S EXILE.

A Queer and Romantic Story From the Mountains of Pennsylvania.

The death of Mrs. Jennie Hoar at her mountain cottage back of Jumonville removes one of the most romantic characters that ever dwelt in the mountains of Fayette county. She was born where she died, and her sorrowfully romantic life covered a term of 93 years.

Seventy years ago there came to this county from Massachusetts a young man named James Hoar, son of a prominent citizen of Boston, educated at one of the leading eastern colleges. Beyond this nothing could be learned of his life. He secured work as a day laborer in the old Wharton furnace. Everything about this stranger bespoke the gentleman of culture. This fact, added to the mystery of his life, led to the conclusion that he had left Massachusetts for reasons which he did not care to divulge.

One day as he was handling a large piece of metal it fell and broke his leg. He was taken to the home of Benjamin Bronson. Bronson had a daughter named Jennie, a typical country girl. When Hoar was taken to her home, her spare time was devoted to the care of the new arrival. After the patient was able to be about his attentions to Jennie became apparent, and a quiet country wedding followed. They took up their abode in a little log house about a mile east of Dunbar. A household of children came to their fireside. James Hoar had become a typical woodsman, and many stories of his prowess as an athlete are still told.

The tranquillity of the little mountain home was broken by the appearance of a southern planter named Le Clair. He was accompanied by his wife, and together they secured quarters at Hoar's cabin. The latter had a daughter 21 years old. Le Clair pretended to have become enamored of the fair haired mountain girl. The secret of his pretended love was kept from his wife, and when the Le Clairs left she disappeared. What became of her is still a mystery, and it is believed that she was kidnaped by the Le Clairs and taken south. The broken hearted mother never recovered from the loss, and from that time life for her was one long sorrow. James Hoar died at the age of 85.

It is now known that his connection with some of the Cape Cod pirates drove him into this mountain exile. He was a cousin of Senator Hoar of Massachusetts. Jennie Hoar made a livelihood after the death of her husband by selling roots and herbs.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

SHE MUST GET BLUE BLOOD.

The Talk Is Now That Pullman's Daughter Will Marry Alexander of Servia.

King Alexander of Servia is asserted to be on the eve of marrying Miss Pullman, daughter of the American car builder. Not only does the match constitute a topic of discussion in the capitals of Europe, but it has been published as an affair definitely settled in some of the most reliable Viennese, Berlin and Parisian papers.

Surprising though it may appear at first sight, there are far fewer obstacles to a union between the American heiress and King Alexander than with Prince Isenburg-Birstein, for, whereas the prince is debarred by the statutes of his family—statutes that are recognized as valid by the courts of Vienna, Berlin and all the minor German capitals—from marrying any woman not his equal in birth and rank there is no such impediment to prevent King Alexander of Servia from wedding the girl of his choice, be she peasant or princess.

The Isenburgs were sovereigns for hundreds of years and up to the beginning of the present century, although they are now no longer so. The king of Servia's ancestors, even in the early part of the present century, were illiterate swineherds, and, although their descendant is a king and recognized as such by the various foreign courts and governments, yet he is not hedged in with the same restraints and restrictions that surround those of his brother monarchs who have behind them a long line of royal predecessors.—New York Advertiser.

PERFECTLY SANE NOW.

But Forty-five Years of His Life Are a Complete Blank to Him.

"In the village of Lubec," says the Portland raconteur, "lives Clem Wallis. When he was a boy about 15 years of age, he went out to his father's pasture to catch a frisky colt. As he was about to place a halter around his neck the colt kicked him in the head, making a ragged wound. The wound healed, but it soon became apparent that the man was slightly demented, and his hallucination took peculiar forms. He would travel up and down the bay on the steamboats, claiming the proprietorship of the latter and refusing to pay fare. The steamboat men humored him, as he was considered daft, and he was the butt of the small boys' jokes and banter. He has lived in the village since and is now 60 years of age.

"About six weeks ago the local physicians determined to experiment on his case. They found that a portion of his skull had been forced into contact with the brain by the blow, and by a skillful operation removed the pressure. Strange to say, the man has now recovered his reason, and the first question he asked when he recovered from the operation was, 'Did the colt get away?'

"Wallis is perfectly sane now, but 45 years of his life are a perfect blank to him."—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

The third lecture of Rev. Chas. M. Brown's series on "The Wonderful Nazarine" was given on Sunday evening, Dec. 2d. The lecture began with Christ's departure from Nazareth for his active ministry and then followed with his baptism by John, his temptation in the wilderness, his return to Cana, whence the first miracle was performed, his trip about the Sea of Galilee, his subsequent journey to Jerusalem and cleansing of the temple. Forty views were presented to an audience that filled the church.

We would acknowledge the receipt of an invitation from the Fellowcraft Club, Detroit, to be present at the reception given in honor of Hon. John Donovan of Bay, Monday evening, Dec. 10. We felt it a great deprivation not being able to attend, for never before has a great party been represented in the affairs of state by one man alone. We congratulate Mr. Donovan on the honor that is his, and feel confident the interests of his party will be jealously guarded.

Among the many societies which Tecumseh contains, "the Orient" of recent date, is becoming very popular and rapidly increasing in membership. Though not as ancient as some, the wisdom of the Sages of this and other lands have been brought into active operation in this great society, thereby making it extremely attractive, and their ranks are swelling, and more are constantly knocking at its doors for admission. The humble as well as the exalted are elevated and find great pleasure and satisfaction within its hospitable embrace.

The Ladies of Woman's Relief Corps have been called upon to lay away another of our members by death, Mrs. Cora McKinney. She with three other ladies were initiated into this society, Nov. 20, 1893, by Mrs. Anna S. Hanley, president. One year and two weeks ago, Dec. 3d, '94, our room was filled with sadness, where we had met so short a time under the most favorable prospects. Sixteen of the ladies attended her funeral and as their parting tribute of respect covered the casket with the last blossoms of the year. While we mourn her loss we believe she sweetly rests with the dear one gone before.

Jas. Elliott received a telegram last Monday announcing the death of Willie D. E. Heaton, son of Mrs. A. L. Dahl, New York City. He spent several weeks of last summer at Homer and in our village and seemed to improve in health and spirits, giving his friends strong hopes of his recovery, but he was struggling with that fatal disease, consumption. He was a bright, talented young man, 21 years of age, and made many warm friends here who deeply sympathize with the grieved ones at his home in the city. May God comfort the father, a devoted mother and dear little sister, is the earnest prayer of warm hearts, far away.

Supper.

The meeting of the Eastern Star last Thursday evening was largely attended and the refreshment committee, composed of 15 gentlemen, were actively employed in preparing the tables for the banquet. They looked very attractive in their white caps and aprons. The tables were laden with choice silver which they had smuggled from their homes for the occasion. When all was in readiness the order came to form two lines and march into the banquet room. As they passed into the hall each received a fancy napkin. When all were seated the first course was served consisting of crackers in dish pans. 2d. course, cheese on paper. 3rd. course, water in pails with dippers. The preparation of such an elaborate spread was a great tax on the committee, but they being fifteen stalwart men of great experience and ingenuity, were able to fulfill the arduous duties and make it the grand success it was. After all had feasted, (we came near saying fasted) and the business of the meeting resumed, the worthy matron was presented (by the members of the committee) a bag containing twenty-six silver dollars. It was indeed an evening of surprises, three fold, viz; the great number of petitions received, the delicacies so rich and rare served by the committee, and the silver presented to the order, making this, the last meeting in the old hall, one never to be forgotten by those present.

Wm. Smith, who has been working for the Wilson brothers, was not satisfied with his account, and as he would not listen to a compromise, he brought suit against them before Chas. Burridge, which by mutual consent was taken before Fraser. The jury returned a verdict in favor of Smith for $13.00.

The change in quarters of the Library is a very pleasant one, which all appreciate and adding the free reading room in connection with it is a grand thing. The rooms are open from 4 to 10 p. m. Although they have hardly got settled the attendance is rapidly increasing. Some had an idea the reading was not free, but it is, and all are welcome.

It is seldom a speaker is conducted to the platform with such eclat as was Prof. H. E. Fink last night. Ten members of Company C in uniforms, with guns and bayonets, on the top of which rested the flag of the free drooping down gracefully on all sides, forming a canopy. Between the brave boys stood the Professor, and as they started for the platform the band played razzle-dazzle. Though the audience was not what it would have been had the weather been pleasant, it was very appreciative, and at times the applause was almost deafening. At the close of the lecture the Prof. rendered several vocal selections in an artistic manner.

MICHIGAN TOILERS.

Action Taken by the State Federation of Labor at Detroit.

DETROIT, Dec. 6.—The Michigan Federation of Labor at its session Wednesday openly declared in favor of active political work in the ranks of the federation. The platform of the people's party adopted at the Omaha convention after hot debate was adopted, with the exception of two planks, as the platform of the Michigan federation. The planks rejected were the demand for a collective ownership of all means of production and distribution, and that favoring the employment of convict labor in twine making to injure the twine trust. The Michigan federation is opposed to all convict labor. The Michigan Liquor Dealers' association was indorsed because it used the union labels.

DETROIT, Dec. 7.—At Thursday's session of the Michigan Federation of Labor unskilled labor and prison labor were discussed at length. A resolution was adopted that a state label league be organized. A universal label will be used for all kinds of goods and union men will not buy at stores where the label is not used. Resolutions were adopted asking that women factory inspectors be appointed for factories where women are employed, and indorsing the actions of Govs. Waite and Altgeld in the late strikes in Colorado and Illinois.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 8.—The sessions of the Michigan Federation of Labor closed on Friday. John D. Flanigan, of Grand Rapids, was elected president. The federation will meet at Saginaw next December. A resolution was introduced that all laboring and union men refrain from joining state militia companies, but the mover and the resolution was sat down on hard.

CLAIMS VALUABLE REAL ESTATE

Ex-Banker Hoyt, of St. Joseph, Fighting for a Large Fortune.

ST. JOSEPH, Dec. 7.—Ex-Banker R. C. Hoyt is pushing a suit to establish his claim to $600,000 worth of real estate situated within the city limits. Twenty years ago Mr. Hoyt had a bank here and was rated at $200,000 above all debts. At the time of the panic in 1873 he owed $62,000, and his creditors, becoming alarmed, threw him into bankruptcy before he had time to realize on his property sufficient to pay them. An assignee was appointed and after eight years he sold the property and paid 11 per cent. to the creditors and received a full receipt. Hoyt began suit four years ago to recover his property, and the case has gone through the lower courts and is now in the United States court. For some reason and in some way the case has been kept quiet until now. The property involved includes 243 acres within the city limits, 100 platted lots, and several business and residence blocks.

MICHIGAN MILITIA IS STRONG.

Adjt. Gen. Eaton Files His Report for the Last Two Years.

LANSING, Dec. 10.—The report of Adjt. Gen. Eaton for the biennial period ending September 30, which was filed with the governor Saturday, gives the total strength of the Michigan national guard as 2,595, of whom 192 are commissioned officers. The adjutant general recommends the equalization of state bounties among the soldiers of the war of the rebellion. To equalize the bounties at $150 per man would cost the state nearly $12,000,000.

The adjutant general reports that in 1893 only 72 per cent. of the Michigan brigade attended the annual encampment, while in 1894 their percentage of attendance was 80. During the year commissions were issued to 215 officers of the national guard. There were 2,559 discharged and 2,493 enlistments. Certificates of six years' continuous service were granted to fifty-seven persons.

COOKED TO DEATH BY STEAM.

A Horrible Accident Befalls Edsie Bryan Near Adrian.

ADRIAN, Dec. 7.—A horrible accident occurred a few miles south of this city Thursday evening. Edward and Edsie Bryan, aged 19, twin sons of a well-to-do farmer, were riding a traction engine. While crossing a country bridge the engine broke through. Edward jumped, but Edsie was caught between the engine and a tank coupled behind. In the fall the furnace door had opened and a steam pipe was broken. Edsie was literally cooked to death, while his brother, helpless to aid him, was compelled to listen to his agonizing appeals.

Multiplicity of Municipal Bills.

LANSING, Dec. 8.—The commission authorized by the Michigan legislature of 1893 to draft bills under which municipal governments can be organized without coming to the legislature for a charter will report four bills. There will be one bill for villages, one for cities with population of 10,000 or less, one with population between 10,000 and 50,000, one over 50,000 and not exceeding 100,000, and one for those in excess of 100,000.

Mismanagement Is Alleged.

GRAND RAPIDS, Dec. 7.—Charles O. Smedley and Nancy M. Hinsdell began suit against the Gypsum Plaster and Stucco company for the appointment of a receiver. Smedley holds judgments against the company for $41,712 and Mrs. Hinsdell holds one for $4,000, and in their bill of complaint charge mismanagement against Frank L. Noble, the secretary, treasurer and general manager.

Bounties Due Michigan Veterans.

LANSING, Dec. 10.—Among the measures to be considered at the approaching session of the legislature will be the equalization of bounties due Michigan veterans. Although the bounty has been promised it is altogether probable that no action will be taken, as the adjutant general has submitted report to the effect that it will take $1,200,000 to cancel the state indebtedness to the soldiers.

Made a Protest.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 7.—The Michigan lumbermen who came here to oppose the boomstick duty waited on the government Thursday afternoon in the office of Mr. Bowell, minister of trade and commerce, who is acting premier. W. R. White, of Pembroke, showed that the duty on booms and boomsticks was a policy of irritation against the United States and might lead to difficulties if not abolished. Congressman Weadock, of Michigan, put the case very forcibly and Mr. Bowell replied, stating that the government would take the whole matter into consideration and would do what was just.

LANSING, Dec. 8.—The free silver conference held here by democrats Friday was presided over by Kryn Dykema, of Grand Rapids, with Willard Stearns, of Adrian, as secretary. The attendance was small, but fifteen persons outside Lansing being present, although letters of regret were read from prominent democrats, including Spencer O. Fisher, late candidate for governor.

The platform adopted demands that the government alone provide, issue and control our medium of exchange; that the unit of value established in 1792, a silver dollar of 412½ grains, be restored, and our mints opened for the free coinage of both gold and silver at the ratio of 16 to 1; that both be used in redeeming government paper circulation, so that silver be utilized and bond issues be rendered unnecessary; that the metal of nature be utilized instead of foreign gold being borrowed on a gold basis credit. The demonetization act of 1873 was denounced. The members of the conference pledged their best efforts to restore the products of the farm, factory and mine to their former relative value with gold. In a supplementary resolution the action of the democratic state committee in making free silver the paramount issue in the recent campaign was commended.

The democratic committee was requested to meet within thirty days to organize the party on these lines, and in case of its failure to do so the executive committee appointed was authorized to call a state convention or take such other action as shall effect the purpose of the conference. C. P. Black, of Lansing, Willard Stearns, of Adrian, and Congressman Whiting, of St. Clair, were empowered to select an executive committee of twenty-one members. It is not the purpose of the conference to form a new party unless compelled to do so by the failure of the democratic organization to take the desired stand relative to the silver question.

EXCEEDS THE BONDING LIMIT.

City of Detroit Is Informed That the Limit Has Been Overdrawn.

DETROIT, Dec. 8.—City Counselor Speed Friday night announced that the city of Detroit has authorized bonds to a much larger amount than is permissible by law to issue. The bonding limit, according to the city charter, is 2 per cent. of the assessed valuation, or $4,183,024. The city has issued or authorized the issue to date of $4,565,413 in bonds, or according to speed, $482,389 in excess of the bonding limit. An examination of the city's various bond issues shows that not enough of them may mature during the present century to permit of the issue of any more for public improvements in the way of paving, sewers and the like during that time.

HOMES IN ARKANSAS.
The location of Arkansas is such as to exempt it from extremes of heat and cold. Its elevations and richness of soils adapt it to the production of a greater variety of crops, fruits and general products used for the sustenance and comfort of man than any other State in the Union. While its salubrious climate, joined with the other combinations mentioned, give to its fruit and food products a peculiarly delightful flavor that can be found nowhere else. It justly boasts of many health-giving springs and better and cheaper water than any other State. Lands are cheap and productive, markets accessible; health good; no blizzards; no failure of crops; good schools, churches and society, and what is of important, a hearty welcome for all. Miss Minnie Humphrey has closed her school in the Dillingham district, where she gave perfect satisfaction to both patrons and scholars.

Willie Stark, after a year's stay here, returned to his home in Ann Arbor Saturday. There will be great mourning among the Quintette club.

Will O. Silvers has in the bank, occupying a conspicuous position, some fine pin-cushions he drew in the Catholic Bazaar at Manchester last week.

F. L. Woodward was in Hudson, Monday, and completed arrangements for taking the Clinton Plow Company's plant to that city. Mr. Chamberlain arrived Tuesday night and an inventory is now being taken and the removal will be made as soon as possible. We regret to lose this industry, as it has been one of Clinton's solid institutions. Hope the change will be for Frank's interest.

THAT COVETED KISS.

It Agitates India and England and Wrings a Growl From "Labby."

The severity of the sentence (resignation under threat of dismissal) against Surgeon Major Smith, an officer in the Indian service stationed at Madras, who asked Mrs. Clegg, wife of another civil service official, to give him a kiss, is making a great sensation both in India and England.

That kiss, or rather the suggested kiss, has almost caused a revolt in official circles in India, has been a matter of serious consideration by the secretary of state in London and would be the subject of a parliamentary inquiry if the house of commons were in session.

Mr. Labouchere has brought his heaviest guns to bear in behalf of Dr. Smith. He indorses the suggestion which some one, signing himself "American Citizen," makes in a London newspaper, appealing to all who have ever felt tempted to commit the offense which has brought such tribulation upon Dr. Smith to contribute a trifle to a fund for his benefit. Mr. Labouchere commends the suggestion to every government official, every military and naval officer, every judge and magistrate and every other person in authority who ever felt tempted to kiss a lady not his wife or sweetheart. He adds:

"I would not go so far as to ask them to put their names to the subscriptions, but would suggest that they send their mites anonymously to the Smith fund as a sort of conscience money. Not only would the fund thus attain handsome proportions, but it would form a unique and permanent memorial of the extent to which human nature prevails in man.

"The most unwise thing Dr. Smith did, in my opinion, was to say that he had been flirting. Flirting can no more be carried on by one person than one person can play at lawn tennis. In its nature it is a game of reciprocity, but the use of the word was evidently an error of expression, and as the doctor himself explains when using the word he only alluded to himself. Where flirting ends and lovemaking begins is a question a young lady can answer better than I can. Does it go beyond flirting to ask to be allowed to kiss a lady? If not, is kissing itself involved in flirting? My knowledge on the ethics of flirting and kissing is imperfect, but I should have thought that the latter is seldom preceded by a re[illegible] to the lady to allow it. This may, however, be the custom in India."—London Letter.

FORTY-THREE YEARS IN THE DARK.

An Indiana Woman Recovering From a Peculiar Form of Insanity.

A most remarkable case has been developed near the village of Winthrop, in Warren county, Ind. Forty-three years ago Mrs. Perry James became insane, her peculiarity being an aversion to company and a desire to be perfectly alone. She was not dangerous, but her wish to become seclusive was so great that she was provided with a dark room at her home, where she has lived a hermit life for 43 years, being cared for by her husband until he died four years ago and later by her two daughters.

Recently she began to show the return of reason and made inquiry concerning relatives and neighbors whom she knew before her mind became affected. Many of them had moved to other parts, some had died, but there were three or four who still remained, and when she expressed a desire to see them they were brought into her presence. She conversed rationally on common subjects and evinced a desire to once more emerge into the world and become one of its actors. Her aversion to people has disappeared, her peculiarities are dissolving, and upon subjects with which she is conversant she talks with freedom and clearness. There are indications that she will fully recover her mental faculties if her life is spared. One of the hallucinations that have passed from her was that the air was full of balloons filled with men, all coming toward her.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A GREAT NEWSPAPER COMBINATION.

For the past 52 years, over half a century, The Michigan Farmer has been published, and it is the oldest regular agricultural journal under one name on this continent.

With largely increased capital and under new management that has had 28 years successful experience in agricultural journalism, this great paper is making rapid strides toward the top in the galaxy of agricultural literature of America. It is most beautifully printed on high grade paper, and employs the most eminent writers on the science and practice of Agriculture, Horticulture, Live Stock, Dairying, Apiary and Poultry. Has a standard veterinary department for free treatment of all diseases of farm animals. A legal and medical department; contains all the agricultural news of the country and an invaluable literary and household department every week. Admits no swindling nor immoral advertisements and is in fact in every way a great, sound, practical, agricultural, live stock and family journal, that the agriculturists of Michigan may justly feel proud of, and subscribe for with satisfaction and profit. We are pleased to be able to announce that we can furnish to our subscribers the Michigan Farmer and the TECUMSEH HERALD, both one year, making a total of 104 papers, for the low price of $1.75; certainly a bargain that should be liberally patronized. Specimen copies free.

An Odd Collection.

A man in Colorado has a quaint collection of bottles. It is divided into two sections. Section one is large. Section two is not. Section one contains hundreds of bottles, the contents of which his wife swallowed hoping to find relief from her physical sufferings. Section two contains a few bottles that once were filled with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It was this potent remedy that gave the suffering wife her health again. It cures all irregularities, internal inflammation and ulceration, displacements and kindred troubles. It has done more to relieve the sufferings of women than any other medicine known to science.

SILVER MEDAL CONTEST.

The silver medal contest at the church in Britton on Friday night, Dec. 14th, was a success in every particular and the exercises reflected great credit upon the seven young ladies who participated, as well as upon Mrs. Geo. Hawks, who has charge of the L. T. L. work, under whose auspices the entertainment was held, and upon Mrs. W. C. Babcock, who drilled the class for their work. Mrs. Flora Exelby, president of the W. C. T. U., read an appropriate scripture lesson and Mrs. E. Mudge offered prayer. The exercises were interspersed with excellent music by the Britton string band, which awakened great enthusiasm, and the trio were encored on several occasions. The contestants were Bertha Williams, Ida Hanna, Lizzie Dubois, Flora Zeluff, Maud Lee, Letta Gifford and Bertha Kniffin. All acquitted themselves with credit, but the judges awarded the highest honor to Miss Letta Gifford and the second place to Miss Maud Lee. Dr. Hendershot made the presentation of the medal to Miss Gifford with well timed remarks. The citizens of Britton will look forward with interest to another like entertainment.

Compare our prices with those of others,
But remember we can't sell at cost,

We can't do business for pleasure,
Though its a pleasure to wait on our friends
And give them a bargain that can't be beaten,
On a straight line of goods, not "odds and ends."

Table Talk.

An article by Kate Douglas Wiggin on "The Kindergarten as a School of Life for Women," opens the December issue of Table Talk, and not only is it most readable, as is all she writes, but most helpful and suggestive to the women of our age who are anxious to make all possible use of their lives. The little magazine is also replete with Christmas and Christmas thoughts. The recipes and hints on table service are numerous as usual and among the novel ideas for the season is an article on Christmas shopping—where and how to buy. The readers out of, as well as in the city will find therein many helpful suggestions, and in fact the monthly visits of this publication always means much to housekeepers and home-makers. Our readers may obtain a sample copy free by addressing Table Talk Publishing Co., Philadelphia Pa.

THAT JOYFUL FEELING

With the exilarating sense of renewed health and strength and internal cleanliness, which follows the use of Syrup of Figs, is unknown to the few who have not progressed beyond the old time medicines and the cheap substitutes sometimes offered but never accepted by the well informed.

Just suppose Senator-elect Ben Tillman should start in by introducing a Dispensary law applying to the Senate restaurant!

THE HERALD FOR 1895.

What newspapers are you going to take during the coming year? Every man must settle that question for himself. The wise man, however, will have the "Old Reliable" on his list, and, in that connection, we offer our patrons a little good advice. It is needless to inform the public what to expect in these columns during the ensuing twelve months. As a first-class, up-to-date local newspaper the HERALD intends to lead the procession, as heretofore. Politically, it will continue to be independent, and it will strive to uphold the interests of the masses in matters of finance, taxation and public expenditures.

Recognizing the stringency of the times, our rates have been placed upon a hard-pan basis. A few extra combination offers are also presented, and the most favorable club list ever given in these columns. Here they are in detail:

NO. ONE.

Every subscriber, either old or new, who pays all arrearages and one full year in advance to Jan. 1st, 1896, will receive, gratis, a neat portfolio entitled "Echoes of the White City; the Midway." This is similar to the Ferris Wheel portfolio, given to our patrons last year. It will be a free gift to all advance paying subscribers, and will hold good until Feb. 1st, 1895.

NO. TWO.

The "Columbian Gallery" consists of twenty numbers of World's Fair Photographs, published by the Werner Co., of Chicago. This is the finest collection among all similar publications. There are 250 full-page plates, size 11 by 13 inches, beautifully bound in one large volume. The price of the book is $8, with one year's subscription to the HERALD thrown in.

NO. THREE.

The "Graphic History of the Fair" is the finest and most complete history of the Fair yet presented to the public. It is a book of 300 pages, containing over 1200 illustrations, elegantly bound, and sells for $3. This book will be furnished for that amount, including a full year's subscription to the HERALD.

NO. FOUR.

The "Land of Christ" is one of the most beautiful serials published, giving a very fully illustrated history of Palestine. It is published in twelve parts, and will be furnished in separate parts to subscribers. This work sells for $2. We can furnish the same at the regular price, with a year's subscription to the HERALD included.

Sample copies of all the above books can be seen at our counting room. Call and examine them.

CLUB LIST FOR 1895.

If the Sugar Trust would now go to work and close down Congress, that would be something like it.

About the only thing left for some of the defeated congressmen is to figure as the grateful cured persons in the patent medicine advertisements.

If there is any local pride left in Chicago a few of the old families there will get up a sensational divorce or two, just to keep the town in the procession.

Senator Peffer's bill to abolish the Congressional custom of holding funeral junketing parties seems to meet with the approval of all save the junketers themselves.

Mayor Pingree of Detroit has docked the tails of his horses. Is this the Mayor's way of evening up his docking account with the Michigan Republicans who refused to nominate him for Governor?

What has become of the revival of business boom that we heard so much about just before election? It must have got mixed up somewhere with the democratic returns and has been counted out.

If a national bank note is good everywhere, why would not a bank note, not based upon bonds, but upon an equally sound foundation and guarded by better regulations, be good in the hands of every holder?

Mr. Babcock says that the McKinley law will not be re-enacted. Certainly not. The same law by any other name will smell as sweet to the protected manufacturers and trusts. They are not stuck on names.

The big exposition organ purchased for the State University was dedicated last Friday evening. The finest organ recital followed ever given in the state. Michigan thus becomes the possessor of one of the greatest wonders of the great fair, the largest pipe organ ever made.

The bakers will soon be wearing diamonds that will rival in size and brilliancy those that illuminated the plumbers' shirt bosoms. Flour costs only half what it did a few years ago, yet the bakers sell their bread for the same price as before, thus making two or three times the profits they formerly did.

The State of Texas has sent requisitions to the governor of New York for arrest of the Standard Oil magnates, claiming these men violated the anti-trust laws. Governor Flower refuses to entertain the requisitions and there the matter stands. It is getting quite plain to the average citizen that in this country there is no crime but poverty.

In a complex industrial system, such as that now supplying the people with commodities, there can be no inferior or imperfect performance of function by one part that does not affect the whole. As the health of a person depends upon the health of all his parts, so the abnormal condition of one industry makes irregular the whole system.

The Senate, Tuesday, decided not to take up the bill to relieve the people of the Sugar Trust's tax. Twenty-three democrats and no republicans voted to take up the sugar bill, while three democrats — Blanchard, Martin and Roach—together with the republicans, voted the other way. The rest, including Gorman and his group, slipped into the cloak-room and didn't vote at all. The Sugar Trust is still able to prevent any action in the Senate which will free the people from its exactions.

Indian corn from the South is a new factor in Northern markets. The plantation owners in the Southern states found out some years ago that worn out tobacco acreage was a losing venture, and in turning about to acquire a means to profit they discovered that the soil, by scientific treatment, would produce fine crops in corn, wheat and potatoes. This kind of farming is a revolution as well as a renovation, and the agricultural system of the South is undergoing as much of a change as its politics. The Southern farmer is now dealing in other things besides cotton and tobacco, and the tariff has nothing to do with the case.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, Dec. 14, 1894.

The financier, public and private, has been very much in evidence this week in Washington, owing to the hearings given by the House committee on Banking and Currency. Every man who has appeared before the committee did not have a currency plan of his own to propose, although new plans have been plentiful, but every man had some objection to Secretary Carlisle's plan, either as a whole or to some of its details. It is doubtful whether the hearings, which will probably not be extended beyond this week, have strengthened or weakened Secretary Carlisle's plan in Congress. It is taken for granted, from the talk of members of the committee, that a bill embracing substantially the Carlisle plan will be reported to the House before the Christmas adjournment, but owing to so few members of the House having committed themselves either for or against the plan, would be but a wild guess to attempt to say what disposition the House will make of the bill. But it is not guessing to say that no bill based on the Carlisle plan can get through the Senate. It is a fact based on statements made by Senators. A noteworthy feature of the hearings by the House committee is the apparent antagonism of bankers to the Carlisle plan. There is a suspicion that this feeling is feigned by the bankers, believing that their open support would be certain death to the bill.

According to the gossip of the politicians, the administration does not expect any currency legislation at this session of Congress and has merely pushed the Carlisle plan into prominence as the first step towards making Secretary Carlisle the administration candidate for the democratic Presidential nomination in 1896.

Senator Sherman stated the Nicaragua Canal question in a nutshell when he said after the speeches of Senators Morgan and Dolf in favor of the pending bill, that all the arguments which could be made on the subject had already been made, and that it was needless to further trespass on the time of the Senate. The only question that bothers Senator Sherman in connection with the canal is how to dispose of the claims of the Maritime Canal Co. for the work already done on the canal. He says he is not satisfied with the provisions of the bill now before the Senate on that subject. He believes, and the belief is shared by thousands, that the Maritime Company would be justly dealt with if the money it has actually spent on the canal were returned to it. That is just the weak spot in the whole business. Although the Canal company is hopelessly bankrupt and its affairs and the little tangible property it has are in the hands of a receiver, the bill proposes to pay it a fancy price for its stock, franchises, etc., and somebody is so confident that the deal will go thro' that money is furnished to maintain an expensive lobby to push it along.

The bill permitting freight pooling by railroads was passed by the House by the unexpectedly large vote of 166 to 110. The populists voted solidly against the bill, but the democrats and republicans divided regardless of party lines, prominent members of both parties voting on each side. Friends of the measure think they can easily push it through the Senate, but they may be mistaken. A very few Senators can, under existing rules, prevent action by the Senate on any measure.

Mr. A. D. Shreve, of Virginia, has written Secretary Carlisle a long letter accusing him of having reversed his position on the silver question since he became a member of the Cabinet, and closing timely: "For many years I have watched your course with jealous care, and you have been the brightest star in my political horizon, at whose shrine I was early taught my first lessons in political economy; but it is with pain and regret that I see you in the evening of life turning to the golden sunset, whose seductive rays are alluring you from the democracy of Jefferson, and the dark cloud which is gathering has no silver lining to cheer and to give hope to the toiling masses."

The Senate officially decided two very important things this week. By a vote of 27 to 25 it defeated Senator Gray's motion to take up the sugar bill, which means that there is to be no more tariff legislation by this Congress. The populist Senators and Blanchard, Martin and Roach voted with the republicans against the motion. By a vote of 34 to 24 the Senate refused to take up Senator Vest's slottre resolution, which means that the rules are not to be changed, and that no legislation which is seriously opposed is to go through.

To Hold Up Legislation.

Gormanites will back the Tillerites in obstructing a measure to reform the currency.

This is logical and not unexpected. In the Senate the consideration is Senatorial private snaps. Rules for results would shear the individual Senator and clothe a majority with power to act. They would not suit Senators with snaps.
